500 Russian Planes Aid Advance of Red Invaders

Reds Crash Mannerheim Line in Three More Places, Finnish Statement Says

Part of Important Village of Summa Captured in Fiercest Fighting of 16-Day Old Battle

Moscow, Feb. 17 (Saturday) (AP)—The capture of twenty-two more Finnish "defensive fortifications" by Soviet Russian troops in yesterday's heavy fighting on the Karelian Isthmus was reported today in the communique issued by the Leningrad military headquarters.

The latest report boosted the total of such Finnish positions claimed by the Rusians to 175, 153 having been previously reported.

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS

Helsinki, Feb. 16. (AP)—The Soviet army, with 500 planes supporting a tremendous land attack, has crashed ahead to deadly-bought gains at three places along Finland's Mannerheim Line on the Karelian Isthmus, tonight's Finnish army communique acknowledged.

It was the second time in three days that the Russian mass drive was acknowledged to have made a dent in the main Finnish defense fortifications.

Take Part of Summa

Shortly before the communique was issued a military informant admitted that the Red army had captured at least part of the village of Summa, which has seen the fiercest fighting of the sixteen-day old isthmus battle.

He said the Russians were in Summa on Feb. 13 and presumably still were there. This "Verdun" of Russian-Finnish war, now demolished by shellfire, lies only twenty miles southeast of Viipuri, Finland's second largest city and apparent immediate objective of the Russian onslaught.

Heavy Russian Losses

As in previous days, tonight's communique spoke of heavy Russian losses as the cost of the great Red offensive, in which the Finns say the invaders have been mowed down "like wheat." But more men, and more guns and more airplanes keep coming.

The Russian aerial concentration on the isthmus yesterday, with 500 planes taking part, was the greatest of any day since the attack started, and the official report significantly noted the bombardment of Finnish troops along with attacks on Riihimaki, Viipuri and Lappeenranta in which thirty-four persons were killed and sixty injured.

The seriousness with which this little nation regards the isthmus battle was apparent in the unsmiling faces of citizens and officials while reading the latest official announcement—a strange contrast to smiling, joking and confident troops seen on Saturday when the Russian infantry attacks were diminished in force in the Summa sector.

Sudden Collapse Unlikely

There was no question of any sudden collapse of the Finnish defense, Finnish military men said, but the tremendous pressure of the never-ending attacks put a heavy strain on every fighting man.

(Premier Hansson of Sweden disclosed Friday that Finland had appealed for "transport of Swedish military groups to Finland" and that Sweden had declined. Stockholm felt Finland's problem of get-

Sweden Refuses Direct Military Aid for Finland

Appeal to Allies for Troops May Be the Next Move

Stockholm, Feb. 16 (AP)—Sweden formally refused to send direct military help to Finland today, leaving Finland faced, diplomatic observers believed, with the choice of a despairing appeal to the western powers for troops or a dangerous peace with Soviet Russia.

Premier Per Albin Hansson, through the medium of an official communique, said that Finland's request for "transport of Swedish military groups to Finland" had been declined; that Sweden stood by Hansson's Riksdag declaration of January 17 to the effect that her aid to Finland would be limited to all material and humanitarian help possible.

May Appeal to Allies

Diplomatic sources predicted that Finland, desperately pressed by a great Russian offensive against the Mannerheim Line, might now make a direct request for formal military assistance to Great Britain and France, and that Sweden and Norway would be asked to permit passage of the Allied troops and munitions. At the same time the Stockholm newspaper Folkets Dagblad said Finnish leaders had informed Sweden they would like to turn to the western powers if Sweden declined military aid — or else make

More Snow Today For Northeast as Death List Grows

Main Highways Cleared but Rural Roads Remain Blocked

Roosevelt Orders Emergency Relief for New England

By The Associated Press

More snow was in prospect today (Saturday) for some sections of the northeast, while men worked to rid the countryside of the millions of tons left by the extraordinary mid-week storm—a storm that took at least seventy-two lives and moved President Roosevelt to authorize emergency relief.

From the cruiser Tuscaloosa, which was somewhere in southern waters, Mr. Roosevelt wirelessed to the federal works administrator his approval of a series of projects in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut to cost $272,000.

These states—and New England in general—appeared the greatest sufferers from the great snow that fell on St. Valentine's Day. New England had twenty-nine dead—twenty-eight on land and one at sea. Shipping off that bleak coast felt a heavy hand: The Gloucester schooner Doris Hawes yesterday (Friday) went down — some 185 miles off Cape Hatters and her crew of nine were taken aboard the Dutch motorship Pygmalion.

Ship Helpless at Sea

In New Bedford (Mass.) Dragger Palmers Island, with a crew of five, was missing. Last word from her said she was helplessly adrift, her propeller fouled by a net. The Boston trawler Flow, her bow damaged, was pushing doggedly on last night toward Halifax. She was shipping water fast.

On land, the great thoroughfares were in nearly all cases clear, but many a rural road lay deep in snow that blocked all traffic. In some states air transportation still was limited.

In upstate New York, the WPA ordered the release of all its workers temporarily, making them available to communities for snow removal. The dead in that area numbered sixteen.

In New York City, where ten had died from direct or indirect consequences of the storm, 20,000 men and nearly 3,000 pieces of equipment struggled against the great, dirty-grey drifts that made travel difficult in the metropolis.

17 Deaths in New Jersey

In New Jersey, which reported seventeen deaths, some roads in the northern section were blocked or, at best, open only to one-way traffic. In Long Valley, 500 persons who had been isolated for twenty-four hours got fresh food supplies; so did 100 in the two of Kinnelon.

A snowstorm that would be "more than flurries" was forecast for to-

Phila. Republicans Plan To Outdo Big Convention of '36

Will Name Candidate Where Roosevelt Was Nominated

Philadelphia, Feb. 16. (AP)—Philadelphia Republicans who put up $200,000 today to bring their national convention to the home town of American independence hope to outdo the Democratic show of 1936 when President Roosevelt was renominated here.

Despite a setback over the date they wanted—the week of July 4 to tie the campaign in with an independence anniversary celebration—promoters of the nomination meeting said they could keep that theme anyway.

June 24 was picked, partly because a July 4 meeting would find the nation's voters on a vacation from press and radio.

Plans are ready for at least one big out-door sesion on the old-city square at Independence Hall where the nation was born.

But the principal sessions will be held at Convention Hall and Franklin Field, where enthusiastic Democrats cheered the name of Roosevelt four years ago.

Federal Bituminous Coal Act Is Constitutional, U. S. Court Says

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 16 (AP) — Declaring Congress has authority to enforce by a system of taxes establishment of bituminous coal prices, a three-judge federal court unanimously upheld here today constitutionality of the 1937 federal bituminous coal act.

Clearing the way for a final ruling on this first test of validity of the measure, the tribunal gave the Sunshine Anthracite Coal Company of Clarksville, Ark., thirty days in which to appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

The court dismissed the company's petition for a permanent injunction restraining the internal revenue department from collecting a tax of 19.5 per cent on the sale price of its coal because it refused to join the coal code set up under the coal act.

It continued in effect for thirty days a temporary injunction against this collection and said that if the company perfected its appea. to the Supreme Court within that period the temporary injunction would remain in force until the higher court rendered its decision.

The three-judge court in dismissing the permanent injunction petition, however, ruled that the government's tax claim against the company up to Dec. 4, 1939, was void. District Judge T. C. Trimble, a member of the court, said this portion of the decision would save the Sunshine Company approximately $80,000 in back taxes.

The tribunal reviewed the recent history of the bituminous coal industry, commenting that the industry had been subjected to "a bitter

German Steamer Chased Into Port by British Ship

Altmark Escapes from Destroyer with Aid of Norwegians

Berlin, Feb. 16 (AP) — The British destroyer Intrepid was reported by the official German news agency tonight to be lying in wait off the Norwegian coast ready to pounce upon the elusive German steamer Altmark, after one unsuccessful attempt to capture the supply and prison ship which accompanied the pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee in its last raiding voyage.

The agency, DNB, said the skilfull maneuvering and the intervention of two Norwegian torpedo boats failed the first effort of the Intrepid, within 640 yards off Norwegian shores, to seize the Altmark. The ship has carried 300 prisoners taken during the Graf Spee's raiding operations.

(It was not known whether the prisoners, whom the British charged on Jan. 19 were being kept in the Altmark's hold under conditions reminiscent of slave trader days, were still aboard. The British charges brought a categorical German denial that the prisoners were ill-treated, but one source commented "of course, we could not build roof gardens for our enemies."

(Neither was it clear where the Altmark went after the Intrepid's frustrated attempt to seize her. If she halted in Norwegian territorial waters she was subject to possible internment as was the Nazi prize crew, which sailed the American freighter City of Flint into Haugesund.)

Two Brothers Shot With Same Bullet

Huntington, W. Va., Feb. 16 (AP)—Two brothers were admitted to a Huntington hospital tonight, both shot in the right leg—one said, "in a friendly scuffle over a gun."

They were listed as J. E. Aldridge, 26, and G. T. Aldridge, 21, sons of J. E. Aldridge, Sr., a wealthy retired dentist.

J. E. Aldridge, Jr., said "we were playfully wrestling for the gun when it went off and shot us both."

The loss is estimated at $8,000.

Hitler's Paper Demands Neutral States Stay Out

"Renunciation of Direct War-Like Acts" Not Enough

Berlin, Feb. 16 (AP) — Adolf Hitler's Volkischer Beobachter declared tonight that Germany demands "strict neutrality" from neutral states, not merely "renunciation of direct warlike acts" or "lip service for official usage."

This sharp editorial developed a theme first expressed by Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels in instructing Nazi orators this week. This time, however, Belgium and Switzerland were mentioned.

"The German people never will forget anyone who refuses this moderate demand," said the newspaper.

"We believe that neutrals are obliged to record war events and the attitude of belligerent nations at least objectively. What a number of them are doing is, however, exactly the opposite."

House Votes $965,779,438 for Navy, But Eliminates Million for Outpost

By REG INGRAHAM

Washington, Feb. 16 (AP) — A record-breaking appropriation of $965,779,438 for the navy won the quick approval of the House today but only after a proposal to make Guam a Pacific outpost for naval patrol planes was stricken from the measure.

Heeding warnings that the project might lead to war with Japan, the House adopted an amendment eliminating $1,000,000 sought by the navy to start work on a $3,000,000 dredging and breakwater construction job to make the island's harbor safe for both naval and commercial aircraft. The teller vote was 123 to 114.

The debate was a hot, but abbreviated, repetition of the fight last year, when a somewhat more ambitious project for Guam was beaten.

Nazis Boast Sea Successes above World War Days

More Effective Than in 1914, Berlin Statement Says

Million More Tons Destroyed, Official Figures Declare

By EDWIN SHANKE

Berlin, Feb. 16 (AP) — Germany boasted tonight that her present sea warfare against Great Britain has proved far more effective than in 1914.

With the Nazi naval attack taking a new tack—a stiff offensive against ocean - going tankers carrying Britain's vital oil supplies—German military experts gave the following comparison to demonstrate the success of the new German navy.

During the first five months of the present war, 1,500,000 tons of British, French and neutral shipping were destroyed; in the first five months of the World War 370,000 tons were sunk.

Million More Tons Sunk

On the basis of these German figures, over 1,000,000 more tons have gone to the bottom of the sea in the present war as a result of the intense Nazi sea campaign.

To illustrate further, it was said that in ten months of 1918, 2,750,000 tons were sunk. This meant, the experts said, the tonnage now being destroyed, averaging 300,000 tons monthly, already exceeds the average for the last year of the World War.

(German commentators did not refer to losses inflicted upon shipping in 1917, when unrestricted submarine warfare reached its peak. According to the best available sources, more than 3,500,000 tons of shipping were sunk. These figures included 1,134 British vessels sunk by submarines, 137 by mines and thirty-eight by surface craft. Seventy-five German submarines were destroyed by the Allies.)

More Tankers Being Sunk

Since the beginning of the war the volume of sinkings of British oil tankers has increased 112.8 percent, military authorities said tonight. German figures were presented to show that in about five and one-half months of warfare twenty-seven tankers belonging to the western Allies, with a total tonnage of 212,268, have been sent to the bottom.

Nazi raids against Britain's oil carriers have cost her 5.5 per cent of her tankers; the French have lost about seven percent of their tanker tonnage and about four percent of total tonnage, the German statement said.

Through DNB, official news agency, the Germans reiterated that the sinking last Saturday of the Dutch steamer Bergerdijk by a German submarine was justified.

Prize Law Observed

It was said the ship was sunk only after warning had been given, that German prize law regulations

National Committee by Vote of 67 to 32 Gives Quaker City Preference

PREDICTS G.O.P. VICTORY

Offer of $200,000 Is Deciding Factor; Chicago, Second Choice, Offers only Bare Expenses

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP) — By a vote of 67 to 32, the Republican National Committee today chose Philadelphia for the party's 1940 convention city. The date of the convention was fixed for June 24.

The thing that won for Philadelphia was, obviously, an offer of $200,000 and the use of a convention hall. The offer was made by Mayor Robert Lamberton, who reminded the committee members that the money over and above the expenses of the convention, could be applied to the cost of the ensuing campaign.

Chicago Offers Costs

For Chicago, Mayor Edward J. Kelly offered to defray the cost of the convention, with nothing additional. Eleven days ago he stood before a similar meeting of the Democratic National Committee and offered to match any reasonable cash bid that might be made by any of the other cities. He got the Democratic convention for $150,000.

The choice of a Republican convention city settled down several days ago to a contest between Philadelphia and Chicago. It became so obvious, in fact, that one or the other would get the big party meeting that bids which had been expected from St. Louis and San Francisco were not even submitted.

Blank Check from Fargo

Just one other city was proposed, Fargo, N. D. To the delight and amusement of the crowd, William Stern, North Dakota committeeman, detailed the advantages to be found there — twenty hotels "all protected by the police," and fifty-three miles of paving. He concluded by handing National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton a blank check on the Dakota National Bank, adding that he was its president.

A roll call vote showed sixty-six votes for Philadelphia, thirty for Chicago and two for Fargo, the latter cast by Stern and by Charles A. Jonas, committeeman from North Carolina.

Hold Executive Session

The committee went into executive session for its decision on the debate of the convention because, it was said, several members wanted to express themselves fully and freely on the subject. For months there had been a hubbub of discussion over the possibility of abandoning tradition and holding the convention in July or August.

It was apparent, at once, however, that sentiment for the late convention had tapered down. Henry A. Wise, member for Virginia, started the discussion off with a blunt statement that the party had a job to do, had better get at it, and start early.

The talk of a late convention has been accompanied by much jockeying between the parties, with the Democrats endeavoring to retain whatever advantage lies in holding their convention after the Republicans have met. The Democratic committee meeting last week left it to National Chairman Farley to fix the date, after learning what the Republican plans are.

In Miami, today, Farley said he would announce his decision in the next few days.

In addition to choosing the time

Britain Steps Up Mobilization To Take in 250,000

Men Now 23 Years Old Will Enter Service Early in March

By ROBERT E. BUNNELLE

London, Feb. 16 (AP) — Britain preparing for any extension of the war front, stepped up its mobilization program tonight to permit quick absorption of a new class of 250,000 conscripts ordered to register tomorrow for military service.

The new conscripts, Britons now twenty-three years old, probably will be placed under arms early in March in line with a training speed-up expected to increase the army to a total of 2,500,000 men before 1940.

Four Neutral Ships

At sea, the only stage of the European war where violent action is being fought, the day's reports listed four neutral ships sunk or missing, one small British tanker feared lost, and two Finnish boats bound for Britain captured. Twenty two lives were lost aboard two Danish vessels, torpedoed off northeast Scotland.

Thirty-nine survivors of the two Danish vessels, the 1,066-ton passenger ship Sleipner and the 1,064-ton Rhone, were landed in a British port. Those missing from the Sleipner were seven seamen and six pasengers.

The ships missing were the British tanker Creofield, 838 tons, and the Norwegian freighters Bisp, 1,000 tons, and Start, 1,168 tons. The Bisp, which carried a crew of 16, left a British port Jan 20 with a cargo of coal for Norway.

Bridges Demands End of Gold and Silver Buying by United States

Denver, Feb. 16. (AP)—Sen. H. Styles Bridges (R-NH) demanded tonight an end to the government's "fantastic policy" of gold and silver buying "in the interests of all the American people and, in the long run, those of the entire world."

"It cannot be done completely all at once without disrupting the currencies of the world, but it can and must be accomplished gradually if monetary values in the United States as well as in other nations are to be preserved," Bridges, an aspirant to the Republican presidential nomination, said in an address prepared for a delayed Lincoln Day meeting.

"What will happen when the war is over if we find ourselves in possession of nearly all of the world's supply of gold is a situation which administration officials do not like to face.

"Many of them concede that silver and gold alike will be of little value then.

"The threat of such a possibility to you in Colorado and in the other mining states should be obvious. But it is a threat no less for all the American people who have paid so dearly for it. x x x

"What we are doing now is to provide a temporary boon to the rest of the world, at the expense of the American people—as long as their supply of silver and gold lasts. The day of reckoning will come when we have stripped the rest of the world of these metals and are left holding the bag."

Million More Tons Destroyed, Official Figures Declare

By EDWIN SHANKE

Berlin, Feb. 16 (AP) — Germany boasted tonight that her present sea warfare against Great Britain has proved far more effective than in 1914.

With the Nazi naval attack taking a new tack—a stiff offensive against ocean - going tankers carrying Britain's vital oil supplies—German military experts gave the following comparison to demonstrate the success of the new German navy.

During the first five months of the present war, 1,500,000 tons of British, French and neutral shipping were destroyed; in the first five months of the World War 370,000 tons were sunk.

Million More Tons Sunk

On the basis of these German figures, over 1,000,000 more tons have gone to the bottom of the sea in the present war as a result of the intense Nazi sea campaign.

To illustrate further, it was said that in ten months of 1918, 2,750,000 tons were sunk. This meant, the experts said, the tonnage now being destroyed, averaging 300,000 tons monthly, already exceeds the average for the last year of the World War.

(German commentators did not refer to losses inflicted upon shipping in 1917, when unrestricted submarine warfare reached its peak. According to the best available sources, more than 3,500,000 tons of shipping were sunk. These figures included 1,134 British vessels sunk by submarines, 137 by mines and thirty-eight by surface craft. Seventy-five German submarines were destroyed by the Allies.)

More Tankers Being Sunk

Since the beginning of the war the volume of sinkings of British oil tankers has increased 112.8 percent, military authorities said tonight. German figures were presented to show that in about five and one-half months of warfare twenty-seven tankers belonging to the western Allies, with a total tonnage of 212,268, have been sent to the bottom.

Nazi raids against Britain's oil carriers have cost her 5.5 per cent of her tankers; the French have lost about seven percent of their tanker tonnage and about four percent of total tonnage, the German statement said.

Through DNB, official news agency, the Germans reiterated that the sinking last Saturday of the Dutch steamer Bergerdijk by a German submarine was justified.

Garner Candidate In California, He Informs Chairman

Says Plan To Enter His Name Has His Full Approval

Los Angeles, Feb. 16. (AP)—Vice President John N. Garner wired the chairman of his state organization today that he would be a candidate for the Democratic nomination in the May presidential primary.

Zach LaMar Cobb and William R. Wallace, Jr., co-chairman of the Garner campaign, made the announcement. Earlier in the day they had wired him that a statewide survey they had been conducting indicated he was first choice of "rank and file" Democrats.

Garner's telegram, as released by the organization, follows:

"I am pleased to acknowledge your telegram today advising that my friends in California, acting through the Garner-for-President organization, propose to enter my name as a candidate in the May presidential primary election.

"This has my full approval, since it is in conformity with my

National Committee by Vote of 67 to 32 Gives Quaker City Preference

PREDICTS G.O.P. VICTORY

Offer of $200,000 Is Deciding Factor; Chicago, Second Choice, Offers only Bare Expenses

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP) — By a vote of 67 to 32, the Republican National Committee today chose Philadelphia for the party's 1940 convention city. The date of the convention was fixed for June 24.

The thing that won for Philadelphia was, obviously, an offer of $200,000 and the use of a convention hall. The offer was made by Mayor Robert Lamberton, who reminded the committee members that the money over and above the expenses of the convention, could be applied to the cost of the ensuing campaign.

Chicago Offers Costs

For Chicago, Mayor Edward J. Kelly offered to defray the cost of the convention, with nothing additional. Eleven days ago he stood before a similar meeting of the Democratic National Committee and offered to match any reasonable cash bid that might be made by any of the other cities. He got the Democratic convention for $150,000.

The choice of a Republican convention city settled down several days ago to a contest between Philadelphia and Chicago. It became so obvious, in fact, that one or the other would get the big party meeting that bids which had been expected from St. Louis and San Francisco were not even submitted.

Biank Check from Fargo

Just one other city was proposed, Fargo, N. D. To the delight and amusement of the crowd, William Stern, North Dakota committeeman, detailed the advantages to be found there — twenty hotels "all protected by the police," and fifty-three miles of paving. He concluded by handing National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton a blank check on the Dakota National Bank, adding that he was its president.

A roll call vote showed sixty-six votes for Philadelphia, thirty for Chicago and two for Fargo, the latter cast by Stern and by Charles A. Jonas, committeeman from North Carolina.

Hold Executive Session

The committee went into executive session for its decision on the debate of the convention because, it was said, several members wanted to express themselves fully and freely on the subject. For months there had been a hubbub of discussion over the possibility of abandoning tradition and holding the convention in July or August.

It was apparent, at once, however, that sentiment for the late convention had tapered down. Henry A. Wise, member for Virginia, started the discussion off with a blunt statement that the party had a job to do, had better get at it, and start early.

The talk of a late convention has been accompanied by much jockeying between the parties, with the Democrats endeavoring to retain whatever advantage lies in holding their convention after the Republicans have met. The Democratic committee meeting last week left it to National Chairman Farley to fix the date, after learning what the Republican plans are.

In Miami, today, Farley said he would announce his decision in the next few days.

Britain Steps Up Mobilization To Take in 250,000

Men Now 23 Years Old Will Enter Service Early in March

By ROBERT E. BUNNELLE

London, Feb. 16 (AP) — Britain preparing for any extension of the war front, stepped up its mobilization program tonight to permit quick absorption of a new class of 250,000 conscripts ordered to register tomorrow for military service.

The new conscripts, Britons now twenty-three years old, probably will be placed under arms early in March in line with a training speed-up expected to increase the army to a total of 2,500,000 men before 1940.

Four Neutral Ships

At sea, the only stage of the European war where violent action is being fought, the day's reports listed four neutral ships sunk or missing, one small British tanker feared lost, and two Finnish boats bound for Britain captured. Twenty two lives were lost aboard two Danish vessels, torpedoed off northeast Scotland.

Thirty-nine survivors of the two Danish vessels, the 1,066-ton passenger ship Sleipner and the 1,064-ton Rhone, were landed in a British port. Those missing from the Sleipner were seven seamen and six pasengers.

The ships missing were the British tanker Creofield, 838 tons, and the Norwegian freighters Bisp, 1,000 tons, and Start, 1,168 tons. The Bisp, which carried a crew of 16, left a British port Jan 20 with a cargo of coal for Norway.

A Helsinki radio broadcast said Germany had captured and confiscated two Finnish ships bound for Britain with cargoes of timber.

Federal Bituminous Coal Act Is Constitutional, U. S. Court Says

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 16 (AP) — Declaring Congress has authority to enforce by a system of taxes establishment of bituminous coal prices, a three-judge federal court unanimously upheld here today constitutionality of the 1937 federal bituminous coal act.

Clearing the way for a final ruling on this first test of validity of the measure, the tribunal gave the Sunshine Anthracite Coal Company of Clarksville, Ark., thirty days in which to appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

The court dismissed the company's petition for a permanent injunction restraining the internal revenue department from collecting a tax of 19.5 per cent on the sale price of its coal because it refused to join the coal code set up under the coal act.

It continued in effect for thirty days a temporary injunction against this collection and said that if the company perfected its appea to the Supreme Court within that period the temporary injunction would remain in force until the higher court rendered its decision.

The three-judge court in dismissing the permanent injunction petition, however, ruled that the government's tax claim against the company up to Dec. 4, 1939, was void. District Judge T. C. Trimble, a member of the court, said this portion of the decision would save the Sunshine Company approximately $80,000 in back taxes.

The tribunal reviewed the recent history of the bituminous coal industry, commenting that the industry had been subjected to "a bitter

House Votes $965,779,438 for Navy, But Eliminates Million for Outpost

By REG INGRAHAM

Washington, Feb. 16 (AP) — A record-breaking appropriation of $965,779,438 for the navy won the quick approval of the House today but only after a proposal to make Guam a Pacific outpost for naval patrol planes was stricken from the measure.

Heeding warnings that the project might lead to war with Japan, the House adopted an amendment eliminating $1,000,000 sought by the navy to start work on a $3,000,000 dredging and breakwater construction job to make the island's harbor safe for both naval and commercial aircraft. The teller vote was 123 to 114.

Hot, Brief Debate

The debate was a hot, but abbreviated, repetition of the fight last year, when a somewhat more ambitious project for Guam was beaten.

Bridges Demands End of Gold and Silver Buying by United States

Denver, Feb. 16. (AP)—Sen. H. Styles Bridges (R-NH) demanded tonight an end to the government's "fantastic policy" of gold and silver buying "in the interests of all the American people and, in the long run, those of the entire world."

"It cannot be done completely all at once without disrupting the currencies of the world, but it can and must be accomplished gradually if monetary values in the United States as well as in other nations are to be preserved," Bridges, an aspirant to the Republican presidential nomination, said in an address prepared for a delayed Lincoln Day meeting.

"What will happen when the war is over if we find ourselves in possession of nearly all of the world's supply of gold is a situation which administration officials do not like to face.

"Many of them concede that silver and gold alike will be of little value then.

"The threat of such a possibility to you in Colorado and in the other mining states should be obvious. But it is a threat no less for all the American people who have paid so dearly for it. x x x

"What we are doing now is to provide a temporary boon to the rest of the world, at the expense of the American people—as long as their supply of silver and gold lasts. The day of reckoning will come when we have stripped the rest of the world of these metals and are left holding the bag."

Roosevelt-Garner Vote in Wisconsin Eagerly Awaited

Primary Result Expected To Show Third Term Sentiment

By KENNETH HOPPING

Madison, Wis., Feb. 16 (AP)—Wisconsin's political testing ground, which was fertile soil for President Roosevelt in 1932 and 1936, may provide the first direct answer to what the electors are thinking about a third term.

The Badger state rates twenty-four delegates to the Democratic national convention, but forty-eight candidates—divided into two groups—are scrapping for a change to go to Chicago to cast their votes for renomination of the president.

The Wisconsin presidential primary, to be held April 2, is potentially the first affording the opportunity for a clear-cut decision between Mr. Roosevelt and Vice President John Nance Garner.

Garner in Field

The Garner movement, backed by some influential Democrats, is being conducted with the vice president's consent. The two-way drive to draft Mr. Roosevelt is being staged by rival Democratic groups in this land of the LaFollettes without the president's sanction. His acceptance, under Wisconsin's law, is not necessary.

There may be another election slate pledged to Paul V. McNutt on an assumption that the president would not accept a third term.

Wisconsin generally has been known as a liberal state accustomed to occasional political upheavals.

In 1932 the election returns showed: Roosevelt 707,410; Hoover, 347,741.

Republican Governor Now

During this span a Democratic governor was elected and then unseated by Philip F. LaFollette, who unfurled the banner of the new Progressive party. A Republican, Governor Julius P. Heil, now presides in the capitol.

United States Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., who will come up for re-election next November, and his brother, Philip, have remained unusually quiet about presidential prospects, although the votes of their Progressive followers contributed heavily toward Mr. Roosevelt's success in the last two campaigns. Their own party, the National Progressives of America, has no White House candidate in sight.

Sweden Refuses

a peace with the Soviets — "on conditions greatly concerning Sweden."

A Swedish foreign office spokesman said Sweden "naturally never could tolerate a march through by troops of a foreign country." He added Great Britain and France had forwarded no such demands. Moreover, informed Stockholm observers were skeptical as to whether any practical military aid could get to Finland from the western powers.

In London, reliable British spokesmen were quick to point out it would be difficult, technically, for either Great Britain or France to place trained and sizeable active service detachments on the Finnish battlefront quickly. They said that Britain's army could not be seasoned in time to help in the Mannerheim Line crisis.

Observers, moreover, expressed the belief that Britain would hesitate to enter the Finnish-Russian conflict openly for fear of further consolidating Germany's relations with Russia and creating new fronts in the western war.

A steady flow of licensed British volunteers for Finland continued in London, but Finnish sources said it was unlikely any of them would get to Finland in time to help in the Mannerheim line battle.

In Paris a French government spokesman said a great many anti-tank guns as well as other artillery and airplanes were being dispatched to Finland; that any foreigner in France would be permitted an exit visa to join the Finnish army.

In Germany, Adolf Hitler's Volkischer Beobachter declared a complete Russian victory in Finland was inevitable; that the British still hoped to prolong the war by getting the Scandinavian countries in on Finland's side; that the Allies never intended to help Finland "any more than the aid given Poland."

Scandinavia was asking tonight: Would transport of outside military aid for Finland in large quantities over the Scandinavian peninsula be regarded by both Moscow and Berlin as a sacrifice of neutrality?

Reds Crash

ting outside military help was acute, with a pace with Russia the only alternative. London pointed out that technical difficulties would prevent Britain and France from sending troops to Finland quickly.)

Semi-official advices issued prior to tonight's communique indicated that the Mannerheim Line, a deep series of fortifications, was holding firm. The line is so constructed in the wooded and lake-dotted terrain that positions can be lost without necessarily risking a serious break.

Nevertheless today's situation recalled repeated assertions of the Finns that against the great man and machine-power of the Russians they must some day have help.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

Associated Press Staff Writer
By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Despite the unwillingness of Sweden, Norway and the Franco-British allies to march now to Finland's aid, two important questions must be answered before a Russian victory can safely be predicted.

They are (1) what will the weather be during the next few weeks on the vital Karelian isthmus front at which the Russians are battering and (2) how deeply does the fortified Mannerheim Line extend?

An early thaw could save the Finns now as unprecedented December-January cold once saved them. Chances of such a thaw, at least for weeks, seem very small, however. Weather records do not tend to brighten Finn hopes that mud will stall this new Red army steam roller as sub-zero temperatures did its predecessor.

Victory Not Assured

The other factor, actual organization in depth of the Mannerheim Line, could prove even more important than the weather for the Finns. If that stout barrier is buttressed in such a way that the Finns can retire on successive positions that take advantage of every lake, swamp or contour, the Russians may be as far from victory now as when they started.

Informed neutral military opinion seems to share the belief that no sudden collapse of Finnish resistance is probable in any case. The opportunities for prolonged guerilla tactics which would harry the Russian advance seem too good for the Finnish leaders not to have prepared for them.

Even if the Mannerheim Line is not a vast fortified zone like the Maginot and German Siegfried defenses which have frozen that German-Allied war front into six months of inactivity, it is an extensive and costly affair. Russian claims that more than 150 Finnish "forts," including steel and concrete posts, were taken on a front of some ten miles indicate the money Finland lavished on it.

Better Defensive Position

There are obviously better defensive positions behind the Summa front than on it. The main Russian attack there is headed along the railroad that connects Leningrad and the Finnish second city of Viipuri. It seems certain that Viipuri is the immediate objective.

The Russian advance, however, is leaving the strongest part of the Finnish defense, the water line and north front, still untouched on its right flank. A complementary Russian effort to move across the narrow Tapali river and behind that water barrier to break the Finns' defense all across the isthmus seems to have made small progress.

Fall of Viipuri, still a score of miles from the most advanced Russian thrust on the Summa front, would by no means spell certain collapse of the Finnish resistance elsewhere on the Karelian isthmus. The country north east of Viipuri is studded with lakes, big and little, that form possible successive defensive positions.

Valid Exercise of Power

The 1937 coal act, passed in an attempt to stabilize the industry, "is constitutional," the court declared, adding:

"The regulatory provisions x x x are a valid exercise of the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce and intrastate commerce directly affecting interstate commerce.

"The establishment of prices for bituminous coal sold in interstate commerce or intrastate commerce directly affecting interstate commerce is reasonable and is related to a proper congressional purpose and does not violate the fifth amendment.

"The standards of the act are sufficiently definite and the act contains no invalid delegation of legislative authority.

"Whether or not the taxing provisions x x x could be otherwise sustained, since the regulatory provisions of the act are valid, the taxing provisions of the act are likewise valid as affecting the valid regulatory purpose of the act."

of making twenty-five knots, and the Graf Spee was on Dec. 8, less than a week before the battle off Uruguay which resulted in the Graf Spee taking refuge in Montevideo and her destruction on the personal order of Adolf Hitler.

On January 19, the British charged that 300 or more British sailors captured at sea were imprisoned aboard the auxiliary ship in conditions "recalling the days of slave traders." Since the scuttling of the Graf Spee the British have carried on a constant search for the Altmark.

Authorized German sources denied categorically that British prisoners were ill-treated on the Altmark but one commentary said "of course, we could not build roof gardens and luxurious quarters for our enemies."

The Altmark later was reported to have run the British blockade and reached Germany with her prisoners.

During the Graf Spee's raiding career, the Altmark appeared as an innocent merchantman but actually, it was said, she carried three six-inch guns hidden by shutters and an anti-aircraft gun.

up fitted in with Allied troop concentrations in the near east and Britain's helping hand in the war in Finland.

Recruits Speeded Up

Recruiting of volunteers to fight against the Russians, sanctioned by a Royal decree published tonight in the London Gazette is proceeding steadily. It was unlikely, however, that any of the British recruits would reach Finland in time to help turn the tide in the battle now raging on the Karelian Isthmus.

Public sympathy and interest with the Finnish cause was reflected by newspaper headlines which gave the war in Finland precedence overe Britain's struggle with Germany.

Belief was voiced, however, that Britain was not ready to enter the Finnish-Russian conflict openly since such action might consolidate German-Russian relations and create new fronts in the western war before the British army is at full strength. Technical difficulties also were cited as preventing quick placement of active service detachments from Britain on the Finnish fronts.

A possible new reservoir of manpower was opened to Britain by action of the government of the union of South Africa, permitting volunteers to serve outside the union.

The Holland-Amerika line, owners of the Bergerdijk, said the ship had a cargo of wheat consigned to the Netherlands government.)

Germany's interest in the Russian-Finnish war was underlined by an article in Adolf Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter, which predicted the inevitable defeat of Finland and charged the British-French Allies with endeavoring to spread the conflict throughout Scandinavia.

Diplomatic quarters regarded the article as a sign that the Wilhelmstrasse was observing developments in the north "with increasing attention".

Child Bride Held In West Va. for Husband's Death

Violet Long Said To Have Killed Him with a Shotgun

New Martinsville, W. Va., Feb. 16 (AP) — Sheriff Frank Berger said tonight he had arrested Mrs. Violet Dulaney Long, 16, one-time "child bride" on a charge of killing her 27-year-old husband, Okey, with a shotgun.

Berger said he learned Long was shot last night after being away from his home many hours to get medicine for a sick cow. The sheriff added that the couple "had trouble ever since their marriage" four years ago.

The slaying occurred last night, but the sheriff was unable to reach the Long home at Silver Hill until late today. He made the 23-mile trip there from New Martinsville by automobile, in the wake of a state road commission plough that battled snow drifts twelve to fifteen feet high.

Berger related the shooting as follows:

Story of Shooting

Long returned to his home with the medicine and, accompanied by a brother-in-law, Herbert Anderson, strode into the kitchen.

His young wife, angered, declared: "I've got a notion to shoot you."

So saying, she went to the living room, picked up a twelve-gauge shotgun and fired. Long, struck in the neck, fell dead.

Anderson then took Mrs. Long to the home of her father-in-law, Rufus Long. By telephone, Sheriff Berger deputized two farmers living nearby, Carl and Kenneth Miller, to guard her until he arrived.

Placed in County Jail

Brought to New Martinsville tonight, Mrs. Long was placed in the Wetzel county jail on a charge of murder, Berger said. Her husband's body was removed to a Proctor funeral home. The funeral services will be held Sunday. Long leaves seven brothers and sisters.

Berger said neighbors told him Mrs. Long had left her husband "a dozen times" since their marriage, but that Long had always "brought her back home" afterward.

Frank spokeb riefly, telling the committee only the mechanical processes which had been followed in drafting the report, and not going into what it contained. Party officials planned to release it for publication Monday morning.

Wants FDR To Run

Hamilton said he welcomed the posibility of a third term effort by President Roosevelt. It would, he said, facilitate a Republican victory.

"We would have a clean-cut issue and once and for all, we would have a showdown on the New Deal, Franklin Roosevelt and the third term — and we would finish all three," he said. x x x "So demoralezed and embittered by internecine feuds is the Democratic party that it cannot present a common front against us. On the other hand, our ranks are closed in a harmonious understanding of the great task before us. The morale of our workers in every part of the country is that of men and women who possess knowledge that victory is within their grasp."

A resolution submitted by R. R. Church, Memphis negro leader, to provide $100,000 of party funds for a study of a negro political and economic problems first was tabled by the committee and then referred to the executive board committee for study.

Criticizes Frank Report

The resolution declared that the Frank committee report was "utterly lacking" in appeal to colored voters.

During the day, Chairman Hamilton appointed 21 members to the committee on contests. The committee will decide which delegates are entitled to be seated when contsts arise.

E. R. Whitla, of Idaho, is chairman.

The national committee also elected seven new members to fill vacancies occurring since its last meeting.

Alabama, B. L. Noojin of Gadsden, succeeding T. J. Kennamer, deceased; Florida, J. Leonard Replogle of Palm Beach, succeeding John F. Harris, resigned; Illinois, Hill Blackett of Chicago, succeeding George F. Harding, deceased; Montana, Daniel Whetstone of Cut Bank, succeeding Joseph D. Scanlan, deceased; Nebraska, Lyle Jackson of Neligh, succeeding Hugh Butler, resigned; North Carolina, Mrs. Lindsay Patterson of Winston-Salem, succeeding Mrs. John R. Jones, deceased; Tennessee, Carroll Reece, of Johnson City, succeeding J. Will Taylor, deceased.

The committee also elected Reece, representative from Tennessee's first district, a member of the party's executive committee to succeed Taylor, who had represented the state's second district.

Erickson Denies He Killed Wolff

Repudiates Confession He Says Was Forced by Police

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP)—Intellectual Carl H. Erickson, accused of attempting the "perfect crime," denied from the witness stand in Criminal Court today that he killed Herbert Wolff, his "best friend" who had obtained his job in a garage.

"I did not," the stooped young defendant replied when his attorney, Samuel Hoffman, asked him the direct question:

"Carl, did you kill Herbert Wolff?"

Erickson, described by Dr. Harry Hoffman of the Cook County Behavior Clinic as a "supermentality" with an intelligence quotient of 128, repudiated a confession attributed to him by the police, contending he made it to escape rough treatment from policemen.

"A bunch of policemen hammered at me, yelled and jumped," he testified, adding that later the police told him they would hang him up by his heels and "beat his brains out."

"Five policemen questioned me all at once," Erickson testified. "They shouted at me 'we know you killed him—well, who did kill him' until I was frantic. They hit me x x x and then I was taken to a cell crawling with insects. Then I gave in and said I'd tell what they wanted me to tell."

Wolff, who was 28, was slain on Sept. 28. Erickson's confession was dated Dec. 20.

The state charged that Erickson crawled out of bed without distrubing a roommate on the night of the killing, went to the garage, shot Wolff, and filed the bullet markings from his weapon to defeat ballistics tests. Later, the prosecution contended, he got back into his bed without arousing his companion.

today, carried funds to start work on nineteen new combat ships, five auxiliary vessels and 352 additional airplanes, as well as money to continue work on seventy-nine warships and eighteen auxiliaries now under construction.

No attempt was made to restore any of the $111,699,699 cut by the House Appropriations Committee from the amount President Roosevelt originally recommended for the navy, despite the chief executive's expressed hope that funds to start a second pair of 45,000-ton battleships would be put back.

The Appropriations Committee allowed only $1,500,000 of the $7,-800,000 requested for that purpose and urged the navy to restudy the matter to determine whether bigger ships should not be substituted. Asserting it had learned the 45,000-ton craft would virtually the same as those being built abroad, the committee condemned what it called the navy's policy of "imitating" foreign navies.

Will Let Contracts

However, Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Naval Committee asserted the curtailed amount would be sufficient to enable the navy to go ahead with plans and let contracts for the 45,000 tonners.

The $965,779,438 measure, which went through without a record vote, is the regular, annual appropriation bill, carrying money for the next fiscal year. Despite the drastic cut in the president's naval estimates, the bill carried about $50,000,00 more than the navy received for the current fiscal year.

In addition to $340,371,979 for ship construction, armament and ordnance, the bill would provide $99,563,300 in direct appropriations for naval aviation, plus contract authorizations totalling $10,000,000 and $41,638,475 for a variety of projects at naval shore establishments.

Roosevelt-Garner Vote in Wisconsin Eagerly Awaited

Primary Result Expected To Show Third Term Sentiment

By KENNETH HOPPING

Madison, Wis., Feb. 16 (AP)—Wisconsin's political testing ground, which was fertile soil for President Roosevelt in 1932 and 1936, may provide the first direct answer to what the electors are thinking about a third term.

The Badger state rates twenty-four delegates to the Democratic national convention, but forty-eight candidates—divided into two groups—are scrapping for a change to go to Chicago to cast their votes for renomination of the president.

The Wisconsin presidential primary, to be held April 2, is potentially the first affording the opportunity for a clear-cut decision between Mr. Roosevelt and Vice President John Nance Garner.

Garner in Field

The Garner movement, backed by some influential Democrats, is being conducted with the vice president's consent. The two-way drive to draft Mr. Roosevelt is being staged by rival Democratic groups in this land of the LaFollettes without the president's sanction. His acceptance, under Wisconsin's law, is not necessary.

There may be another election slate pledged to Paul V. McNutt on an assumption that the president would not accept a third term.

Wisconsin generally has been known as a liberal state accustomed to occasional political upheavals.

In 1932 the election returns showed: Roosevelt 707,410; Hoover, 347,741.

In 1936 the result was: Roosevelt 802,984; Landon, 380,828.

Republican Governor Now

During this span a Democratic governor was elected and then unseated by Philip F. LaFollette, who unfurled the banner of the new Progressive party. A Republican, Governor Julius P. Heil, now presides in the capitol.

United States Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., who will come up for re-election next November, and his brother, Philip, have remained unusually quiet about presidential prospects, although the votes of their Progressive followers contributed heavily toward Mr. Roosevelt's success in the last two campaigns. Their own party, the National Progressives of America, has no White House candidate in sight.

Sweden Refuses

a peace with the Soviets — "on conditions greatly concerning Sweden."

A Swedish foreign office spokesman said Sweden "naturally never could tolerate a march through by troops of a foreign country." He added Great Britain and France had forwarded no such demands. Moreover, informed Stockholm observers were skeptical as to whether any practical military aid could get to Finland from the western powers.

In London, reliable British spokesmen were quick to point out it would be difficult, technically, for either Great Britain or France to place trained and sizeable active service detachments on the Finnish battlefront quickly. They said that Britain's army could not be seasoned in time to help in the Mannerheim Line crisis.

Observers, moreover, expressed the belief that Britain would hesitate to enter the Finnish-Russian conflict openly for fear of further consolidating Germany's relations with Russia and creating new fronts in the western war.

A steady flow of licensed British volunteers for Finland continued in London, but Finnish sources said it was unlikely any of them would get to Finland in time to help in the Mannerheim line battle.

In Paris a French government spokesman said a great many anti-tank guns as well as other artillery and airplanes were being dispatched to Finland; that any foreigner in France would be permitted an exit visa to join the Finnish army.

In Germany, Adolf Hitler's Volkischer Beobachter declared a complete Russian victory in Finland was inevitable; that the British still hoped to prolong the war by getting the Scandinavian countries in on Finland's side; that the Allies never intended to help Finland "any more than the aid given Poland."

Scandinavia was asking tonight: Would transport of outside military aid for Finland in large quantities over the Scandinavian peninsula be regarded by both Moscow and Berlin as a sacrifice of neutrality?

ting outside military help was acute, with a pace with Russia the only alternative. London pointed out that technical difficulties would prevent Britain and France from sending troops to Finland quickly.)

Semi-official advices issued prior to tonight's communique indicated that the Mannerheim Line, a deep series of fortifications, was holding firm. The line is so constructed in the wooded and lake-dotted terrain that positions can be lost without necessarily risking a serious break.

Nevertheless today's situation recalled repeated assertions of the Finns that against the great man and machine-power of the Russians they must some day have help.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Despite the unwillingness of Sweden, Norway and the Franco-British allies to march now to Finland's aid, two important questions must be answered before a Russian victory can safely be predicted.

They are (1) what will the weather be during the next few weeks on the vital Karelian isthmus front at which the Russians are battering and (2) how deeply does the fortified Mannerheim Line extend?

An early thaw could save the Finns now as unprecedented December-January cold once saved them. Chances of such a thaw, at least for weeks, seem very small, however. Weather records do not tend to brighten Finn hopes that mud will stall this new Red army steam roller as sub-zero temperatures did its predecessor.

Victory Not Assured

The other factor, actual organization in depth of the Mannerheim Line, could prove even more important than the weather for the Finns. If that stout barrier is buttressed in such a way that the Finns can retire on successive positions that take advantage of every lake, swamp or contour, the Russians may be as far from victory now as when they started.

Informed neutral military opinion seems to share the belief that no sudden collapse of Finnish resistance is probable in any case. The opportunities for prolonged guerilla tactics which would harry the Russian advance seem too good for the Finnish leaders not to have prepared for them.

Even if the Mannerheim Line is not a vast fortified zone like the Maginot and German Siegfried defenses which have frozen that German-Allied war front into six months of inactivity, it is an extensive and costly affair. Russian claims that more than 150 Finnish "forts," including steel and concrete posts, were taken on a front of some ten miles indicate the money Finland lavished on it.

Better Defensive Position

There are obviously better defensive positions behind the Summa front than on it. The main Russian attack there is headed along the railroad that connects Leningrad and the Finnish second city of Viipuri. It seems certain that Viipuri is the immediate objective.

The Russian advance, however, is leaving the strongest part of the Finnish defense, the water line and north front, still untouched on its right flank. A complementary Russian effort to move across the narrow Tapali river and behind that water barrier to break the Finns' defense all across the isthmus seems to have made small progress.

Fall of Viipuri, still a score of miles from the most advanced Russian thrust on the Summa front, would by no means spell certain collapse of the Finnish resistance elsewhere on the Karelian isthmus. The country north east of Viipuri is studded with lakes, big and little, that form possible successive defensive positions.

struggle for markets and merciless cut-throat price-cutting competition."

Valid Exercise of Power

The 1937 coal act, passed in an attempt to stabilize the industry, "is constitutional," the court declared, adding:

"The regulatory provisions x x x are a valid exercise of the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce and intrastate commerce directly affecting interstate commerce.

"The establishment of prices for bituminous coal sold in interstate commerce or intrastate commerce directly affecting interstate commerce is reasonable and is related to a proper congressional purpose and does not violate the fifth amendment.

"The standards of the act are sufficiently definite and the act contains no invalid delegation of legislative authority.

"Whether or not the taxing provisions x x x could be otherwise sustained, since the regulatory provisions of the act are valid, the taxing provisions of the act are likewise valid as affecting the valid regulatory purpose of the act."

of making twenty-five knots, and the Graf Spee was on Dec. 8, less than a week before the battle off Uruguay which resulted in the Graf Spee taking refuge in Montevideo and her destruction on the personal order of Adolf Hitler.

On January 19, the British charged that 300 or more British sailors captured at sea were imprisoned aboard the auxiliary ship in conditions "recalling the days of slave traders." Since the scuttling of the Graf Spee the British have carried on a constant search for the Altmark.

Authorized German sources denied categorically that British prisoners were ill-treated on the Altmark but one commentary said "of course, we could not build roof gardens and luxurious quarters for our enemies."

The Altmark later was reported to have run the British blockade and reached Germany with her prisoners.

During the Graf Spee's raiding career, the Altmark appeared as an innocent merchantman but actually, it was said, she carried three six-inch guns hidden by shutters and an anti-aircraft gun.

Britain Steps Up

Recruits Speeded Up

Recruiting of volunteers to fight against the Russians, sanctioned by a Royal decree published tonight in the London Gazette is proceeding steadily. It was unlikely, however, that any of the British recruits would reach Finland in time to help turn the tide in the battle now raging on the Karelian Isthmus.

Public sympathy and interest with the Finnish cause was reflected by newspaper headlines which gave the war in Finland precedence overe Britain's struggle with Germany.

Belief was voiced, however, that Britain was not ready to enter the Finnish-Russian conflict openly since such action might consolidate German-Russian relations and create new fronts in the western war before the British army is at full strength. Technical difficulties also were cited as preventing quick placement of active service detachments from Britain on the Finnish fronts.

A possible new reservoir of manpower was opened to Britain by action of the government of the union of South Africa, permitting volunteers to serve outside the union.

were observed rigidly and that the safety of passengers was assured.

(Captain L. M. H. Scriwanek, master of the Bergerdijk, said the German submarine commander ordered the ship torpedoed on the ground that the cargo was headed for an English port and that he refused to look at the ship's papers. The Holland-Amerika line, owners of the Bergerdijk, said the ship had a cargo of wheat consigned to the Netherlands government.)

Germany's interest in the Russian-Finnish war was underlined by an article in Adolf Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter, which predicted the inevitable defeat of Finland and charged the British-French Allies with endeavoring to spread the conflict throughout Scandinavia.

Diplomatic quarters regarded the article as a sign that the Wilhelmstrasse was observing developments in the north "with increasing attention".

Child Bride Held In West Va. for Husband's Death

Violet Long Said To Have Killed Him with a Shotgun

New Martinsville, W. Va., Feb. 16 (AP) — Sheriff Frank Berger said tonight he had arrested Mrs. Violet Dulaney Long, 16, one-time "child bride" on a charge of killing her 27-year-old husband, Okey, with a shotgun.

Berger said he learned Long was shot last night after being away from his home many hours to get medicine for a sick cow. The sheriff added that the couple "had trouble ever since their marriage" four years ago.

The slaying occurred last night, but the sheriff was unable to reach the Long home at Silver Hill until late today. He made the 23-mile trip there from New Martinsville by automobile, in the wake of a state road commission plough that battled snow drifts twelve to fifteen feet high.

Berger related the shooting as follows:

Story of Shooting

Long returned to his home with the medicine and, accompanied by a brother-in-law, Herbert Anderson, strode into the kitchen.

His young wife, angered, declared: "I've got a notion to shoot you."

So saying, she went to the living room, picked up a twelve-gauge shotgun and fired. Long, struck in the neck, fell dead.

Anderson then took Mrs. Long to the home of her father-in-law, Rufus Long. By telephone, Sheriff Berger deputized two farmers living nearby, Carl and Kenneth Miller, to guard her until he arrived.

Placed in County Jail

Brought to New Martinsville tonight, Mrs. Long was placed in the Wetzel county jail on a charge of murder, Berger said. Her husband's body was removed to a Proctor funeral home. The funeral services will be held Sunday. Long leaves seven brothers and sisters.

Berger said neighbors told him Mrs. Long had left her husband "a dozen times" since their marriage, but that Long had always "brought her back home" afterward.

and place for the convention, the Republican Committee heard a speech by Chairman John D. M. Hamilton and received the long-awaited report of the committee headed by Glenn Frank on recommendations for the party's 1940 platform.

Frank spokeb riefly, telling the committee only the mechanical processes which had been followed in drafting the report, and not going into what it containeo. Party officials planned to release it for publication Monday morning.

Wants FDR To Run

Hamilton said he welcomed the posibility of a third term effort by President Roosevelt. It would, he said, facilitate a Republican victory.

"We would have a clean-cut issue and once and for all, we would have a showdown on the New Deal, Franklin Roosevelt and the third term — and we would finish all three," he said. x x x"So demoralezed and embittered by internecine feuds is the Democratic party that it cannot present a common front against us. On the other hand, our ranks are closed in a harmonious understanding of the great task before us. The morale of our workers in every part of the country is that of men and women who possess knowledge that victory is within their grasp."

A resolution submitted by R. R. Church, Memphis negro leader, to provide $100,000 of party funds for a study of a negro political and economic problems first was tabled by the committee and then referred to the executive board committee for study.

Criticizes Frank Report

The resolution declared that the Frank committee report was "utterly lacking" in appeal to colored voters.

During the day, Chairman Hamilton appointed 21 members to the committee on contests. The committee will decide which delegates are entitled to be seated when contsts arise.

E. R. Whitla, of Idaho, is chairman.

The national committee also elected seven new members to fill vacancies occurring since its last meeting.

Alabama, B. L. Noojin of Gadsden, succeeding T. J. Kennamer, deceased; Florida, J. Leonard Replogle of Palm Beach, succeeding John F. Harris, resigned; Illinois, Hill Blackett of Chicago, succeeding George F. Harding, deceased; Montana, Daniel Whetstone of Cut Bank, succeeding Joseph D. Scanlan, deceased; Nebraska, Lyle Jackson of Neligh, succeeding Hugh Butler, resigned; North Carolina, Mrs. Lindsay Patterson of Winston-Salem, succeeding Mrs. John R. Jones, deceased; Tennessee, Carroll Reece, of Johnson City, succeeding J. Will Taylor, deceased.

The committee also elected Reece, representative from Tennessee's first district, a member of the party's executive committee to succeed Taylor, who had represented the state's second district.

Erickson Denies He Killed Wolff

Repudiates Confession He Says Was Forced by Police

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP)—Intellectual Carl H. Erickson, accused of attempting the "perfect crime," denied from the witness stand in Criminal Court today that he killed Herbert Wolff, his "best friend" who had obtained his job in a garage.

"I did not," the stooped young defendant replied when his attorney, Samuel Hoffman, asked him the direct question:

"Carl, did you kill Herbert Wolff?"

Erickson, described by Dr. Harry Hoffman of the Cook County Behavior Clinic as a "supermentality" with an intelligence quotient of 128, repudiated a confession attributed to him by the police, contending he made it to escape rough treatment from policemen.

"A bunch of policemen hammered at me, yelled and jumped," he testified, adding that later the police told him they would hang him up by his heels and "beat his brains out."

"Five policemen questioned me all at once," Erickson testified. "They shouted at me 'we know you killed him—well, who did kill him' until I was frantic. They hit me x x x and then I was taken to a cell crawling with insects. Then I gave in and said I'd tell what they wanted me to tell."

Wolff, who was 28, was slain on Sept. 28. Erickson's confession was dated Dec. 20.

The state charged that Erickson crawled out of bed without distrubing a roommate on the night of the killing, went to the garage, shot Wolff, and filed the bullet markings from his weapon to defeat ballistics tests. Later, the prosecution contended, he got back into his bed without arousing his companion.

800 Chickens Burn

Huntington, W. Va., Feb. 16. (AP)—Eight hundred chickens were destroyed by fire which started from a brooder stove on the farm of the Rev. L. W. Andre, Jr., three miles north of Huntington, today.

Andre, pastor of a Pilgrim Holiness Church, estimated the loss, including building and feeds, at $2,500, a part of which was covered by insurance.

today, carried funds to start work on nineteen new combat ships, five auxiliary vessels and 352 additional airplanes, as well as money to continue work on seventy-nine warships and eighteen auxiliaries now under construction.

No attempt was made to restore any of the $111,699,699 cut by the House Appropriations Committee from the amount President Roosevelt originally recommended for the navy, despite the chief executive's expressed hope that funds to start a second pair of 45,000-ton battleships would be put back.

The Appropriations Committee allowed only $1,500,000 of the $7,800,000 requested for that purpose and urged the navy to restudy the matter to determine whether bigger ships should not be substituted. Asserting it had learned the 45,000-ton craft would virtually the same as those being built abroad, the committee condemned what it called the navy's policy of "imitating" foreign navies.

Will Let Contracts

However, Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Naval Committee asserted the curtailed amount would be sufficient to enable the navy to go ahead with plans and let contracts for the 45,000 tonners.

The $965,779,438 measure, which went through without a record vote, is the regular, annual appropriation bill, carrying money for the next fiscal year. Despite the drastic cut in the president's naval estimates, the bill carried about $50,000,000 more than the navy received for the current fiscal year.

In addition to $340,371,979 for ship construction, armament and ordnance, the bill would provide $99,563,300 in direct appropriations for naval aviation, plus contract authorizations totalling $10,000,000 and $41,638,475 for a variety of projects at naval shore establishments.

Your Federal Income Tax

Explanation Is Given on Deductions for Bad Debts

Bad debts constitute a considerable item in the returns of many taxpayers and may be treated in one of two ways—either by deduction from gross income in respect to debts ascertained to be worthless either in whole or in part and charged off, or by a deduction of a reasonable addition to a reserve for bad debts.

Taxpayers were given an option for 1921 to select either of the two methods. The method used in the return for 1921 must be used in return for subsequent years unless permission is granted by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to change to the other method. Application to change must be made at least thirty days prior to the close of the taxable year for which the change is to be effective.

May Select Either

However, a taxpayer filing a first return for 1939 may select either of the two methods, subject to the approval of the Commissioner upon examination of the return. Permission to adopt the reserve method is limited to taxpayers having a large number of accounts where credit is extended over a considerable period of time. It is not granted for the purpose of handling one specific debt.

What constitutes a "reasonable addition' 'to a reserve for bad debts must be determined in the light of the facts, and will vary as between classes of business and with conditions of business prosperity. It will depend primarily upon the total amount of debts outstanding as of the close of the taxable year, those arising currently as well as those arising in prior taxable years, and the total amount of the existing reserve.

When They Differ

In case subsequent realizations upon outstanding debts prove to be more or less than estimated at the time of the creation of the existing reserve, the amount of the excess or inadequacy in the existing reserve should be reflected in the determination of the reasonable addition necessary in the taxable year. A taxpayer using the reserve method should show in his return the volume of charge sales (or other business transactions) for the year, and the percentage of the reserve to such amount, the total amount of notes and accounts receivable at the beginning and end of the taxable year, and the total amount of the debts ascertained to be worthless and charged against the reserve during the taxable year.

Frederick the Great had the coat sleeves of his soldiers' uniforms decorated with buttons to prevent nose wiping on the sleeves.

nley High Sued by atherage for $50,000 harleston, W. Va., Feb. 16 (AP)—nley High, lecturer and journal- was served with a summons ing him defendant in a $50,000 suit when he appeared at the rleston municipal auditorium rsday night to fill a speaking gement.

he action was brought by George therage, of St. Albans, former mander of the Knights of the ite Camelia, and named High, Curtis Publishing Company of Philadelphia, and the Major's book store of Charleston as joint defendants.

Deatherage filed the suit in Common Pleas Court and is similar to one he brought in Federal Court against the Saturday Evening Post and the Curtis Publishing Company, which is still pending.

Deatherage charges he was libelled by an article written by High which appeared in the Post.

Declining comment, High continued into the auditorium after being stopped by a deputy sheriff with the summons and delivered his lecture entitled, "What Must Democracy Do To Be Saved?"

Your Federal Income Tax

Explanation Is Given on Deductions for Bad Debts

Bad debts constitute a considerable item in the returns of many taxpayers and may be treated in one of two ways—either by deduction from gross income in respect to debts ascertained to be worthless either in whole or in part and charged off, or by a deduction of a reasonable addition to a reserve for bad debts.

Taxpayers were given an option for 1921 to select either of the two methods. The method used in the return for 1921 must be used in return for subsequent years unless permission is granted by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to change to the other method. Application to change must be made at least thirty days prior to the close of the taxable year for which the change is to be effective.

May Select Either

However, a taxpayer filing a first return for 1939 may select either of the two methods, subject to the approval of the Commissioner upon examination of the return. Permission to adopt the reserve method is limited to taxpayers having a large number of accounts where credit is extended over a considerable period of time. It is not granted for the purpose of handling one specific debt.

What constitutes a "reasonable addition" to a reserve for bad debts must be determined in the light of the facts, and will vary as between classes of business and with conditions of business prosperity. It will depend primarily upon the total amount of debts outstanding as of the close of the taxable year, those arising currently as well as those arising in prior taxable years, and the total amount of the existing reserve.

When They Differ

In case subsequent realizations upon outstanding debts prove to be more or less than estimated at the time of the creation of the existing reserve, the amount of the excess or inadequacy in the existing reserve should be reflected in the determination of the reasonable addition necessary in the taxable year. A taxpayer using the reserve method should show in his return the volume of charge sales (or other business transactions) for the year, and the percentage of the reserve to such amount, the total amount of notes and accounts receivable at the beginning and end of the taxable year, and the total amount of the debts ascertained to be worthless and charged against the reserve during the taxable year.

Frederick the Great had the coat sleeves of his soldiers' uniforms decorated with buttons to prevent nose wiping on the sleeves.

The School Dollar

FROM THE TAX REVOLT that has taken on such huge proportions in New York there appears to have grown a far-reaching influence upon public school expenditures in the United States that may prove salutary.

An organization known as the Public Education Association has been created and it has held a number of meetings, its purpose being to inject a little healthy economy into the conduct of the public schools.

At a recent session of this association, Dr. Paul Studenski, of the New York University department of economics, suggested that the people strive for improvement in the "quality of education rather than the quantity thereof." He added that a feeling exists "among many thoughtful citizens that public education as at present constituted, does not meet fully the requirements of the new generation, and does not make the most effective use of the large sums of money available by the public."

Something of the same idea recently was expressed in another connection by President Knudsen, of General Motors. Mr. Knudsen complained that American boys are not being taught to use their hands; that we overstress the importance of a "white collar" education; that out of the yearning of immigrant parents for the rescue of their children from hardship, has grown a warped sense of practical education which finds us spending more money than any other people on education, but failing to get value received.

Commenting upon this development, the Wheeling Intelligencer reiterates a belief expressed by it on various occasions that the public school system of this country has been costing too much and failing to produce the best results.

"Not only has there been that neglect of trade training to which Mr. Knudsen refers," it says, "but there has been no necessary relationship between the amount of money spent and the quality of instruction provided. We have observed before that virtually every measure of education excellence set up by professional school people boils down to the amount of money spent. No attempt that we know of is made to value the product. Instead, schools are measured by the salary levels of teachers, the per capita levy, the number of pupils per teacher, the quality and number of school buildings, etc., as though these factors automatically provided good or bad instruction.

"If the time has come when the American people will no longer take the excellence of their schools for granted, when they will begin asking themselves just what the money they are spending for public education is producing in the way of training and instruction, they may arrive at the conclusion that the solution of all school problems is not necessarily the spending of more money, a formula which has been generally accepted to date."

What the Intelligencer says about the lack of trade training has been borne out by the present experience of industry, where skilled workers have been deplorably lacking despite the great unemployment problem. Its observations about the excessive costs of public education may be a little extreme, although it is noted that it speaks in general terms. There are communities where school costs have been kept within reasonable figures.

But there is good common sense in the hope that citizens should give more careful thought to the question of the school dollar as they should to the other dollars that are being required in entirely too great a number and in too large a proportion for different government agencies and institutions. The growth of taxation has made it necessary to look for economy wherever it is possible to effect it within reason and safeyt.

Nazis As Teachers

WHEN the new school year begins in Germany, after Easter, a number of "antiquated" subjects of study will be scrapped in favor of courses which the Nazi government deems of more "contemporary" importance.

A Berlin dispatch reveals that the Nazis deem their racial and inheritance laws of far more contemporary importance than such old-fashioned things as literature, science and mathematics. Or, as those in authority explain, "schools will no longer simply impart knowledge and skill, but also will stress their duty in the education of children to National Socialism."

True, the job of imparting knowledge and skill will not be entirely abandoned. German school children will be permitted to learn something about natural sciences—after all non-Aryan taint presumably has been removed—with their scientific study "supplemented by practical work in laboratories and gardens." The dispatch does not say whether this "practical work" is designed to offset loss of manpower drafted into military service.

It is interesting to note, in view of Nazi emphasis on ideological propaganda in the schools, that "English remains in spite of the war, an obligatory subject." In order that German children may be properly conditioned to current Nazi-Communist ideology, would it not be more practical to drop study of English, the language of wicked capitalist-imperialists, and substitute Russian, the tongue of the pure idealists with whom Hitler is dividing his blood-stained loot?

A Lesson for Bandits

RUDYARD KIPLING was laughed at by many men and figuratively clawed by many more women for saying right out in public that the female of the species is more deadly than the male. Although his poem celebrating this physiological fact is not so much, artistically speaking, it does grope for a certain truth. A hard-boiled bandit found that out the other day when he tried to hold up a candy store in New York City in charge of two sales girls.

It might be thought that a gunman who dared to tackle a store at the corner of Broadway and Forty-Second street at the busy hour of 7:30 p. m. would stand up to anything. But not to these samples of the more dangerous species. They not only took his gun away from him, but smacked him to the floor and sat on him. One of the girls meanwhile hunted through his pockets for the money he had taken from them during the first moment of alarm.

About the only defense for the bandit is that his gun was a fake. But even if feminine intuition was responsible for the courage of the candy clerks, the fact remains that the burly intruder was laid low by a couple of girls weighing less than 120 pounds. And there's no fudge about that.

Unfortunately, the moral of the story is even more humiliating than Kipling's premise. While the girls were engaged in knocking down their assailant, a crowd gathered outside. While the girls sat on him, the spectators gaped through the windows. When the girls screamed for help, not a man in the crowd made a move. It was not until the patrolman arrived that the girls were rescued—or was it the bandit?

The Civilian List

EXACTLY 844,269 persons were on the civilian rolls of the government at the last official counting. These cost the taxpayers $1,505,723,000 annually.

In other words, this payroll of $1,505,723,000 is 16.3 per cent of what President Roosevelt is spending every year.

Now, this civilian list is 279,000 larger than it was when President Roosevelt entered the White House. Figured at $1,783.46 each, these 279,000 added workers cost the taxpayers precisely $497,585,340 yearly.

Admittedly, one of the first things to be done after the Republicans take charge is to trim the payroll. It has been said the government can function satisfactorily after a cut of thirty per cent is made in the civil list. That would lift $451,616,900 from the taxpayer's load.

And what a relief that would be.

Who can throw light on what the government means by paying a premium price for gold and burying it in a hole in the ground, and what it means to do with the $18,000,000,000 worth it has already acquired?

The Japanese threaten to close the "open door" of China, says a dispatch. They better not do that. They might want to get out in a hurry.

Findings of the Browser

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The Browser is not one of those authoritative individuals who know exactly what they think at any given moment about anything. Sometimes, to win an argument or to avoid thinking, he will toss off an opinion that sounds as though it rose out of years of research and thought, but don't let that cocksureness deceive you.

Marshall Maslin

In fact, the Browser is usually on both sides of any argument at the same time, because he has a kaleidoscopic mind . . . and at this instant he has two attitudes toward Nelson Hayes's "Dildo Cay" (Houghton-Mifflin). He is enthusiastic about it and he deplores it. He thinks it a very fine novel that everyone should read, and he also advises you to keep it out of the hands of the children (or perhaps the children, who read everything, should keep it away from their tender parents who must have their reading supervised). He is inclined to praise it as a strikingly original novel. But it will also criticize it as a novel that would never have been written if its author weren't steeped in Ernest Hemingway.

It is a tender love story and Mr. Hayes understands the human heart. It is a sensual novel and Mr. Hayes is strangely unaware of spiritual values. . . You can take your choice of the Browser's opinions on "Dildo Cay". At the moment he doesn't feel like sorting out his ideas on the book and producing a nice, pat, dull and false review that reads as though he were merely paraphrasing the blurb-writer's comment on the jacket.

One fact is plain: "Dildo Cay" is a fantastic production. Dildo Cay is a small island six hundred miles southeast of Bahama in the Atlantic. The Ainsworth family has lived there for eleven generations, one white family among 200 blacks, producing salt for the market. The men of the family choose their wives merely for the sake of heirs to carry on the business. They are not supposed to love them—and usually do not.

Adrain Ainsworth, the hero of "Dildo Cay", is no exception. His wife, Mary, goes away to have a baby and to the island come a man and his daughter, the man to manage the salt business into profits, the daughter to keep the accounts. Carol is a lovely, embittered girl who drinks because she is caught between forced loyalty to her father and a proper contempt for his meanness.

There's your situation and Mr. Hayes handles it strongly. . . In fact, the Browser has a marked weakness for his novel.

The Browser has sometimes wondered why Shakespeare wrote so many plays about kings. Because it was the fashion of the times? Or because there was a trace of snobbery even in the great bard? . . . This week he thinks he has found the answer, in the first paragraph of Peter Quennell's "Caroline of England: An Augustan Portrait" (Viking). It reads: "Pride is endemic in royal blood; and pride of birth gives an edge to natures that might otherwise have remained mild; underlines and emphasizes minor faults; lends a haughty exaggeration to the stoldiest temperament". With that introduction, this life of Caroline, who was the wife of that dull George II of England, is an excellent and illuminating study of an age. She was not important, but her biography is.

CHATTER: Salvador de Madariaga, in a new biography of Christopher Columbus, argues that Columbus was actually a Spanish Jew by race but Catholic in religion. Prophecy: There will be hot contradiction and denial. . . Ben Ames Williams started to write fiction in 1910, did not sell his first story until four years later. Now, with the publication of "Come Spring" in 1940, he says this is the only novel he has written which is to him "completely satisfactory". And that's enough from Marsh Maslin.

Augen Reports On Bookies

By EDWIN C. HILL

New York's oncoming pari-mutuels may be in line with the march of progress but for even benevolent change there is always a price to be paid; the backroom of Moe Epperson's bookmaking joint, for instance. This particular "for instance" I get from Mr. Hymie Augen, who reports for this department from time to time on matters within his ken as an experienced railbird, and as an alumnus of various Hester street, Red Hook and Bowery temples of chance.

Edwin C. Hill

According to Mr. Augen, bookies, clockers, touts and the like are men of sharp wits and eager for information, given to violent arguments and always wanting somebody to settle a bet. In Moe's place you find all the newspapers and you will also find almanacs and "dope" books to straighten you out on this or that. There is a fraternity of book-makers something like that of pitchmen—but this was to have been about something entirely different, although I was merely quoting Mr. Augen, Men who spend much of their life at merry-go-rounds, like my friend, Hymie, are apt to go off on a tangent.

"This old Chinaman comes from somewhere down in the West Indies and they called him 'El Chino' which is the way they tag a Chinaman in some of those places."

"What's that got to do with bookmakers?"

"Now, if you will keep your shirt on, I was just going to tell you that at Moe's place the other day we read in the newspapers about this Ma Chan-shan, the little Chink general who the Japanese had thought they had killed but didn't and who has now come back to haunt 'em like a ghost, as the papers say. We was all reading about this General Ma, getting him an army and stepping into the Japs again.

"This old Chink, El Chino, come to life again, too, and they was an old bookie at Moe's place that knew all about it, and that's what I mean about these pari-mutuels busting everything up."

"But you were talking about El Chino."

"This bookie is named Sam, and once he had cut in some fan - tan and pi-gow joints so he's hep to these Chinks and how they work. El China, Sam tells me, was a dried-up old Chink who wasn't wired in anywhere when he came in from some Spiggoty country, but he trots around a lot and pretty soon he's got some kind of a jug-handled cinch on small-time gambling, but nothing very big.

"Mock Duck" is running things then and El Chino is too small to bother with, but old Mock doesn't like competition, so he tells little Fung How, one of his hatchet-men, to give El Chino a working over. Old El Chino just keeps on hiking around and picking up his percentage. But little Fung is plenty tough and El Chino knows it and finally he gets himself a deep cellar hideout, near an old joss house, rigs it up, nicely, with a two-by six cupboard to sleep in, and is doing all right, and somehow keeps on running his business.

"One night El Chino is leaning over his table reading when somebody sticks a gun through a crack and pumps six shots into him. That was the end of old El Chino, so Fung How thought. But it wasn't more than a week later when Fung How gets bumped off. Sam said he didn't find out just how it was until about ten years later when one the Chinatown squad cops told him about it. This cop had found out because thought he saw one of the joss house gods winking.

"It was this way: Old El Chino gets hep that Fung is going to drill him one Thursday night and Fung's tong will be doing some hocus-pocus with the gods in the joss house and make believe Fung was there with them for an alibi. It happened that El Chino was a dead ringer for one of the oldest and ugliest gods in the line-up. These diggings the Chinks have connect with pretty near everything, so just before Fung's mob gets to the joss house, El Chino snatches this double, puts his coat over it and plants it at the table and then dusts upstairs and takes a stance in the old god's gold bathrobe.

"The mob arrives and is bumping its head on the floor and saying "ox-kum-a-diddy-o" the way they do when the cop strolls through looking for a hop smuggler. He thinks he sees one of the gods wink and late that night, when there's nobody there, finds this god is gone. He's a smart cop and begins snooping around and about three days later, he finds the god down in the dug-out with six bullets in him. Old El Chino dusts off to San Francisco after he squares things with Fung. Now you take these pari-mutuels—"

"Hold it Hymie. This is the end of the line."—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

THE DELAYED TAKE-OFF

Private Debt Decrease Cited by FDR, Would Mean Big New Deal Deflation

.. By FRANKLYN WALTMAN ..

Since we blasted in this place a week ago President Roosevelt's efforts to defend his spending program by contending that governmental debt was no higher today than it was in 1932, the chief executive has returned to the controversy with explanations which throw a new light on the operations of the New Deal.

It will be recalled that Mr. Roosevelt at a specially convened press conference at Hyde Park—contended—at least he was universally reported by the press to have contended—that decreases in state, county, city and local indebtedness since 1932 had offset the twenty-two billion dollar increase in the national debt.

We demonstrated last week from official reports that this statement obviously was incorrect—indeed, impossible, for if state, county and local indebtedness were entirely wiped out between 1932 and 1939, there still would be an increase in governmental debt due to the borrowing of the federal government. Actually from 1932 to 1939 the total of outstanding securities of state, county and other local governments showed a slight increase.

F. D. R. Blames Press

Subsequently Mr. Roosevelt said the press had garbled his Hyde Park contentions — that what he really said was that governmental and Private Debt, taken together, was less in 1939 than in 1932—private indebtedness having decreased more than sufficient to offset the increase in the federal debt.

But even to make this contention stand up, Mr. Roosevelt was required to make a number of deductions from the national debt increase, as for instance, the amount of artificial increment in the value of the government's gold holdings.

When it was pointed out that an Agricultural department study showed an increase of nine billions in private indebtedness since 1932, Mr. Roosevelt said this was a mistake—that the Agricultural department figures contained certain duplications which should be eliminated. Of course by such a method of offsets and torturing statistics, it is entirely possible to wipe out all debt—on paper—because every cent owed is an asset for someone else.

Be that as it may, Mr. Roosevelt's contention that private indebtedness had decreased since 1932 more than the federal debt grew is a sensational development. We doubt Mr. Roosevelt was aware of its full implications when he uttered that contention.

Greater Deflation Admitted

For if what the president said is correct, then private enterprise in the United States has gone through a greater deflation since the New Deal started than it did in the severe years of world-wide depression from 1929 to 1932, inclusive.

How was this indebtedness liquidated? If it were paid off through healthy economic operations, such a decrease in private indebtedness might be regarded as a virtue and be worth crowing about. But that is not the way this private indebtedness was decreaed. It was decreased in large part by private enterprise going through the wringer—through bankruptcy and failure.

A large part of this decrease in private debt resulted from defaults—from writing off the books. A farmer, for instance, in 1932 owned a farm on which he owed a mortgage of $5,000. In the subsequent years he was unable to meet the payments on this debt and the mortgage holder foreclosed. This $5,000 of indebtedness was thus wiped out, but the farmer loses his farm. Who will say that such a liquidation of debt is anything that a president should hail as progress?

To use another example, a newspaper publisher in 1932 owed his local bank $100,000. In subsequent years he finds he cannot pay the debt—that he cannot even make both ends meet due to the increased taxes and costs of production. He decides to go into a receivership. The bank sells the property, realizing only one-half of its loan. Thus $100,000 of debt is wiped out, one-half of which is lost. Is that economic progress and prosperity?

Indicates Socialist Trend

Still another angle to the president's contention is its demonstration of the progress made by the New Deal toward state Socialism. Private indebtedness falls—but governmental indebtedness grows. There is the evidence of the manner and extent to which the federal government has encroached on private capitalism.

Talking to the Communistic-tinged American Youth Congress, the president said he cited these contentions "to remove fears." He did not explain whose fears he wished to remove. Of course the implications of the picture he presented should be most reassuring to Communists and others who wish to make an end of the American system of profit and free enterprise.

But to those who advicate that system, Mr. Roosevelt's words increased their fears, for in reality he was describing in veiled terms a death knell for this system of private capitalism—unless the present course is checked and quickly.

Please Don't Hurt Her

From the Enfaula, Ala., Tribune

Today my daughter, who is 7 years old, started to school as usual. She wore a dark blue dress with a white collar. She had on black shoes and wore blue gloves. Her cocker spaniel, whose name is Coot, sat on the front porch and whined his canine belief in the folly of education as she waved good-bye and started off to the hall of learning.

Tonight she talked about school. She told me about the girl who sits in front of her, the girl with yellow curls, and the boy across the aisle who makes funny faces. She told me about her teacher, who has eyes in the back of her head, and about the trees in the school-yard, and about the big girl who doesn't believe in Santa Claus. We talked about a lot of things—tremendously vital, unimportant things; and then we studied spelling, reading, arithmetic—and then to bed.

She's back there now—back in the nursery sound asleep, with "Princess Elizabeth" (that's a doll) cuddled in her right arm.

You guys wouldn't hurt her, would you? You see I'm her daddy. When her doll is broken or her finger is cut or her head gets bumped, I can fix it—but when she walks across the street, then she's in your hands.

She's a nice kid. She can run like a deer and darts about like a chipmunk. She likes to ride horses and swim and hike with me on Sunday afternoons. But I can't be with her all the time; I have to work to pay for her clothes and her education. So please help me look out for her. Please drive slowly past the schools and intersections—and please remember that children run from behind parked cars.

Please don't run over my little girl.

How Are Your Nerves?

By Bob Trout in Your Life Magazine

Why does H. V. Kaltenborn, CBS news analyst, finger a small piece of jade or some other smooth object when he broadcasts?

Why does Kate Smith carry a large chiffon handkerchief when she steps before the microphone?

Why does King George VI place three matches in a straight row before him when he speaks to the people of the British Empire on the air?

Why does Kirsten Flagstad snatch up her knitting as soon as she has finished singing a difficult operatic role?

The answer is simply—nerve relief.

Since one of the first rules for the avoidance of nerves is to relax and get your mind away from a too-tense concentration on what you're doing, one of the easiest means is to find some occupation for your hands, some simple chore that uses up extra energy and diverts your mind a bit.

That's why King George has the three matches—if he becomes nervous he moves them to new positions, one at a time, slowly.

Kate Smith ties knots in her handkerchief, twists it around her fingers, rolls it into a ball. It's hard on the handkerchief, but easy on Kate's nerves.

Mr. Koltenborn finds that his piece of jade, which was presented to him on one of his trips to China, is just right as a nerve-soother.

And Kirsten Flagstad, after singing, finds that knitting relaxes her most effectively.

Even a few deep breaths serve the same purpose for many folk in warding off a case of jittery nerves.

The School Dollar

FROM THE TAX REVOLT that has taken on such huge proportions in New York there appears to have grown a far-reaching influence upon public school expenditures in the United States that may prove salutary.

An organization known as the Public Education Association has been created and it has held a number of meetings, its purpose being to inject a little healthy economy into the conduct of the public schools.

At a recent session of this association, Dr. Paul Studenski, of the New York University department of economics, suggested that the people strive for improvement in the "quality of education rather than the quantity thereof." He added that a feeling exists "among many thoughtful citizens that public education as at present constituted, does not meet fully the requirements of the new generation, and does not make the most effective use of the large sums of money available by the public."

Something of the same idea recently was expressed in another connection by President Knudsen, of General Motors. Mr. Knudsen complained that American boys are not being taught to use their hands; that we overstress the importance of a "white collar" education; that out of the yearning of immigrant parents for the rescue of their children from hardship, has grown a warped sense of practical education which finds us spending more money than any other people on education, but failing to get value received.

Commenting upon this development, the Wheeling Intelligencer reiterates a belief expressed by it on various occasions that the public school system of this country has been costing too much and failing to produce the best results.

"Not only has there been that neglect of trade training to which Mr. Knudsen refers," it says, "but there has been no necessary relationship between the amount of money spent and the quality of instruction provided. We have observed before that virtually every measure of education excellence set up by professional school people boils down to the amount of money spent. No attempt that we know of is made to value the product. Instead, schools are measured by the salary levels of teachers, the per capita levy, the number of pupils per teacher, the quality and number of school buildings, etc., as though these factors automatically provided good or bad instruction.

"If the time has come when the American people will no longer take the excellence of their schools for granted, when they will begin asking themselves just what the money they are spending for public education is producing in the way of training and instruction, they may arrive at the conclusion that the solution of all school problems is not necessarily the spending of more money, a formula which has been generally accepted to date."

What the Intelligencer says about the lack of trade training has been borne out by the present experience of industry, where skilled workers have been deplorably lacking despite the great unemployment problem. Its observations about the excessive costs of public education may be a little extreme, although it is noted that it speaks in general terms. There are communities where school costs have been kept within reasonable figures.

But there is good common sense in the hope that citizens should give more careful thought to the question of the school dollar as they should to the other dollars that are being required in entirely too great a number and in too large a proportion for different government agencies and institutions. The growth of taxation has made it necessary to look for economy wherever it is possible to effect it within reason and safety.

Nazis As Teachers

WHEN the new school year begins in Germany, after Easter, a number of "antiquated" subjects of study will be scrapped in favor of courses which the Nazi government deems of more "contemporary" importance.

A Berlin dispatch reveals that the Nazis deem their racial and inheritance laws of far more contemporary importance than such old-fashioned things as literature, science and mathematics. Or, as those in authority explain, "schools will no longer simply impart knowledge and skill, but also will stress their duty in the education of children to National Socialism."

True, the job of imparting knowledge and skill will not be entirely abandoned. German school children will be permitted to learn something about natural sciences—after all non-Aryan taint presumably has been removed—with their scientific study "supplemented by practical work in laboratories and gardens." The dispatch does not say whether this "practical work" is designed to offset loss of manpower drafted into military service.

It is interesting to note, in view of Nazi emphasis on ideological propaganda in the schools, that "English remains in spite of the war, an obligatory subject." In order that German children may be properly conditioned to current Nazi-Communist ideology, would it not be more practical to drop study of English, the language of wicked capitalist-imperialists, and substitute Russian, the tongue of the pure idealists with whom Hitler is dividing his blood-stained loot?

A Lesson for Bandits

RUDYARD KIPLING was laughed at by many men and figuratively clawed by many more women for saying right out in public that the female of the species is more deadly than the male. Although his poem celebrating this physiological fact is not so much, artistically speaking, it does grope for a certain truth. A hard-boiled bandit found that out the other day when he tried to hold up a candy store in New York City in charge of two sales girls.

It might be thought that a gunman who dared to tackle a store at the corner of Broadway and Forty-Second street at the busy hour of 7:30 p. m. would stand up to anything. But not to these samples of the more dangerous species. They not only took his gun away from him, but smacked him to the floor and sat on him. One of the girls meanwhile hunted through his pockets for the money he had taken from them during the first moment of alarm.

About the only defense for the bandit is that his gun was a fake. But even if feminine intuition was responsible for the courage of the candy clerks, the fact remains that the burly intruder was laid low by a couple of girls weighing less than 120 pounds. And there's no fudge about that.

Unfortunately, the moral of the story is even more humiliating than Kipling's premise. While the girls were engaged in knocking down their assailant, a crowd gathered outside. While the girls sat on him, the spectators gaped through the windows. When the girls screamed for help, not a man in the crowd made a move. It was not until the patrolman arrived that the girls were rescued—or was it the bandit?

The Civilian List

EXACTLY 844,269 persons were on the civilian rolls of the government at the last official counting. These cost the taxpayers $1,505,723,000 annually.

In other words, this payroll of $1,505,723,000 is 16.3 per cent of what President Roosevelt is spending every year.

Now, this civilian list is 279,000 larger than it was when President Roosevelt entered the White House. Figured at $1,783.46 each, these 279,000 added workers cost the taxpayers precisely $497,585,340 yearly.

Admittedly, one of the first things to be done after the Republicans take charge is to trim the payroll. It has been said the government can function satisfactorily after a cut of thirty per cent is made in the civil list. That would lift $451,616,900 from the taxpayer's load.

And what a relief that would be.

Who can throw light on what the government means by paying a premium price for gold and burying it in a hole in the ground, and what it means to do with the $18,000,000,000 worth it has already acquired?

The Japanese threaten to close the "open door" of China, says a dispatch. They better not do that. They might want to get out in a hurry.

Findings of the Browser

Marshall Maslin

The Browser is not one of those authoritative individuals who know exactly what they think at any given moment about anything. Sometimes, to win an argument or to avoid thinking, he will toss off an opinion that sounds as though it rose out of years of research and thought, but don't let that cocksureness deceive you.

In fact, the Browser is usually on both sides of any argument at the same time, because he has a kaleidoscopic mind . . . and at this instant he has two attitudes toward Nelson Hayes's "Dildo Cay" (Houghton-Mifflin). He is enthusiastic about it and he deplores it. He thinks it a very fine novel that everyone should read, and he also advises you to keep it out of the hands of the children (or perhaps the children, who read everything, should keep it away from their tender parents who must have their reading supervised). He is inclined to praise it as a strikingly original novel. But it will also criticize it as a novel that would never have been written if its author weren't steeped in Ernest Hemingway.

It is a tender love story and Mr. Hayes understands the human heart. It is a sensual novel and Mr. Hayes is strangely unaware of spiritual values. . . You can take your choice of the Browser's opinions on "Dildo Cay". At the moment he doesn't feel like sorting out his ideas on the book and producing a nice, pat, dull and false review that reads as though he were merely paraphrasing the blurb-writer's comment on the jacket.

One fact is plain: "Dildo Cay" is a fantastic production. Dildo Cay is a small island six hundred miles southeast of Bahama in the Atlantic. The Ainsworth family has lived there for eleven generations, one white family among 200 blacks, producing salt for the market. The men of the family choose their wives merely for the sake of heirs to carry on the business. They are not supposed to love them—and usually do not.

Adrain Ainsworth, the hero of "Dildo Cay", is no exception. His wife, Mary, goes away to have a baby and to the island come a man and his daughter, the man to manage the salt business into profits, the daughter to keep the accounts. Carol is a lovely, embittered girl who drinks because she is caught between forced loyalty to her father and a proper contempt for his meanness.

There's your situation and Mr. Hayes handles it strongly. . . In fact, the Browser has a marked weakness for his novel.

The Browser has sometimes wondered why Shakespeare wrote so many plays about kings. Because it was the fashion of the times? Or because there was a trace of snobbery even in the great bard? . . . This week he thinks he has found the answer, in the first paragraph of Peter Quennell's "Caroline of England: An Augustan Portrait" (Viking). It reads: "Pride is endemic in royal blood; and pride of birth gives an edge to natures that might otherwise have remained mild; underlines and emphasizes minor faults; lends a haughty exaggeration to the stoldiest temperament". With that introduction, this life of Caroline, who was the wife of that dull George II of England, is an excellent and illuminating study of an age. She was not important, but her biography is.

CHATTER: Salvador de Madariaga, in a new biography of Christopher Columbus, argues that Columbus was actually a Spanish Jew by race but Catholic in religion. Prophecy: There will be hot contradiction and denial. . . Ben Ames Williams started to write fiction in 1910, did not sell his first story until four years later. Now, with the publication of "Come Spring" in 1940, he says this is the only novel he has written which is to him "completely satisfactory". And that's enough from Marsh Maslin.

Augen Reports On Bookies

Edwin C. Hill

New York's oncoming pari-mutuels may be in line with the march of progress but for even benevolent change there is always a price to be paid; the backroom of Moe Epperson's bookmaking joint, for instance. This particular "for instance" I get from Mr. Hymie Augen, who reports for this department from time to time on matters within his ken as an experienced railbird, and as an alumnus of various Hester street, Red Hook and Bowery temples of chance.

According to Mr. Augen, bookies, clockers, touts and the like are men of sharp wits and eager for information, given to violent arguments and always wanting somebody to settle a bet. In Moe's place you find all the newspapers and you will also find almanacs and "dope" books to straighten you out on this or that. There is a fraternity of book-makers something like that of pitchmen—but this was to have been about something entirely different, although I was merely quoting Mr. Augen, Men who spend much of their life at merry-go-rounds, like my friend, Hymie, are apt to go off on a tangent.

"This old Chinaman comes from somewhere down in the West Indies and they called him 'El Chino' which is the way they tag a Chinaman in some of those places."

"What's that got to do with bookmakers?"

"Now, if you will keep your shirt on, I was just going to tell you that at Moe's place the other day we read in the newspapers about this Ma Chan-shan, the little Chink general who the Japanese had thought they had killed but didn't and who has now come back to haunt 'em like a ghost, as the papers say. We was all reading about this General Ma, getting him an army and stepping into the Japs again.

"This old Chink, El Chino, come to life again, too, and they was an old bookie at Moe's place that knew all about it, and that's what I mean about these pari-mutuels busting everything up."

"But you were talking about El Chino."

"This bookie is named Sam, and once he had cut in some fan - tan and pi-gow joints so he's hep to these Chinks and how they work. El China, Sam tells me, was a dried-up old Chink who wasn't wired in anywhere when he came in from some Spiggoty country, but he trots around a lot and pretty soon he's got some kind of a jug-handled cinch on small-time gambling, but nothing very big.

"Mock Duck" is running things then and El Chino is too small to bother with, but old Mock doesn't like competition, so he tells little Fung How, one of his hatchet-men, to give El Chino a working over. Old El Chino just keeps on hiking around and picking up his percentage. But little Fung is plenty tough and El Chino knows it and finally he gets himself a deep cellar hideout, near an old joss house, rigs it up, nicely, with a two-by six cupboard to sleep in, and is doing all right, and somehow keeps on running his business.

"One night El Chino is leaning over his table reading when somebody sticks a gun through a crack and pumps six shots into him. That was the end of old El Chino, so Fung How thought. But it wasn't more than a week later when Fung How gets bumped off. Sam said he didn't find out just how it was until about ten years later when one the Chinatown squad cops told him about it. This cop had found out because thought he saw one of the joss house gods winking.

"It was this way: Old El Chino gets hep that Fung is going to drill him one Thursday night and Fung's tong will be doing some hocus-pocus with the gods in the joss house and make believe Fung was there with them for an alibi. It happened that El Chino was a dead ringer for one of the oldest and ugliest gods in the line-up. These diggings the Chinks have connect with pretty near everything, so just before Fung's mob gets to the joss house, El Chino snatches this double, puts his coat over it and plants it at the table and then dusts upstairs and takes a stance in the old god's gold bathrobe.

"The mob arrives and is bumping its head on the floor and saying "ox-kum-a-diddy-o" the way they do when the cop strolls through looking for a hop smuggler. He thinks he sees one of the gods wink and late that night, when there's nobody there, finds this god is gone. He's a smart cop and begins snooping around and about three days later, he finds the god down in the dug-out with six bullets in him. Old El Chino dusts off to San Francisco after he squares things with Fung. Now you take these pari-mutuels—"

THE DELAYED TAKE-OFF

.. By FRANKLYN WALTMAN ..

Since we blasted in this place a week ago President Roosevelt's efforts to defend his spending program by contending that governmental debt was no higher today than it was in 1932, the chief executive has returned to the controversy with explanations which throw a new light on the operations of the New Deal.

It will be recalled that Mr. Roosevelt at a specially convened press conference at Hyde Park—contended—at least he was universally reported by the press to have contended—that decreases in state, county, city and local indebtedness since 1932 had offset the twenty-two billion dollar increase in the national debt.

We demonstrated last week from official reports that this statement obviously was incorrect—indeed, impossible, for if state, county and local indebtedness were entirely wiped out between 1932 and 1939, there still would be an increase in governmental debt due to the borrowing of the federal government. Actually from 1932 to 1939 the total of outstanding securities of state, county and other local governments showed a slight increase.

F. D. R. Blames Press

Subsequently Mr. Roosevelt said the press had garbled his Hyde Park contentions — that what he really said was that governmental and Private Debt, taken together, was less in 1939 than in 1932—private indebtedness having decreased more than sufficient to offset the increase in the federal debt.

But even to make this contention stand up, Mr. Roosevelt was required to make a number of deductions from the national debt increase, as for instance, the amount of artificial increment in the value of the government's gold holdings.

When it was pointed out that an Agricultural department study showed an increase of nine billions in private indebtedness since 1932, Mr. Roosevelt said this was a mistake—that the Agricultural department figures contained certain duplications which should be eliminated. Of course by such a method of offsets and torturing statistics, it is entirely possible to wipe out all debt—on paper—because every cent owed is an asset for someone else.

Be that as it may, Mr. Roosevelt's contention that private indebtedness had decreased since 1932 more than the federal debt grew is a sensational development. We doubt Mr. Roosevelt was aware of its full implications when he uttered that contention.

Greater Deflation Admitted

For if what the president said is correct, then private enterprise in the United States has gone through a greater deflation since the New Deal started than it did in the severe years of world-wide depression from 1929 to 1932, inclusive.

How was this indebtedness liquidated? If it were paid off through healthy economic operations, such a decrease in private indebtedness might be regarded as a virtue and be worth crowing about. But that is not the way this private indebtedness was decreaed. It was decreased in large part by private enterprise going through the wringer—through bankruptcy and failure.

A large part of this decrease in private debt resulted from defaults—from writing off the books. A farmer, for instance, in 1932 owned a farm on which he owed a mortgage of $5,000. In the subsequent years he was unable to meet the payments on this debt and the mortgage holder foreclosed. This $5,000 of indebtedness was thus wiped out, but the farmer loses his farm. Who will say that such a liquidation of debt is anything that a president should hail as progress?

To use another example, a newspaper publisher in 1932 owed his local bank $100,000. In subsequent years he finds he cannot pay the debt—that he cannot even make both ends meet due to the increased taxes and costs of production. He decides to go into a receivership. The bank sells the property, realizing only one-half of its loan. Thus $100,000 of debt is wiped out, one-half of which is lost. Is that economic progress and prosperity?

Indicates Socialist Trend

Still another angle to the president's contention is its demonstration of the progress made by the New Deal toward state Socialism. Private indebtedness falls—but governmental indebtedness grows. There is the evidence of the manner and extent to which the federal government has encroached on private capitalism.

Talking to the Communistic-tinged American Youth Congress, the president said he cited these contentions "to remove fears." He did not explain whose fears he wished to remove. Of course the implications of the picture he presented should be most reassuring to Communists and others who wish to make an end of the American system of profit and free enterprise.

But to those who advicate that system, Mr. Roosevelt's words increased their fears, for in reality he was describing in veiled terms a death knell for this system of private capitalism—unless the present course is checked and quickly.

How Are Your Nerves?

Why does King George VI place three matches in a straight row before him when he speaks to the people of the British Empire on the air?

That's why King George has the three matches—if he becomes nervous he moves them to new positions, one at a time, slowly.

Kate Smith ties knots in her handkerchief, twists it around her fingers, rolls it into a ball. It's hard on the handkerchief, but easy on Kate's nerves.

Mr. Koltenborn finds that his piece of jade, which was presented to him on one of his trips to China, is just right as a nerve-soother.

And Kirsten Flagstad, after singing, finds that knitting relaxes her most effectively.

Kennedy Sacrifice A Heart-Wringer

In Which a Smart Gentleman Proves That Speed Isn't Always a Good Thing in the Horse Business

By J. M. BARTON

One morning about 4 o'clock I am sitting in Hooray Mulligan's ritzy, pine paneled, thirst quenching emporium and I am enjoying a delightful tete-a-tete and a few quenchers with the gorgeous peachy pie, Patty.

In another corner of this room Hooray Mulligan and Chizzie-the-Busy, friendly enemies of many years standing, are sitting at a table near the blazing fireplace, and these two burglars are engaged in a little sociable game of stud poker.

Chizzie-the-Busy is a tiny squirt weighing less than 90 and he stretches the tape to almost 5 feet. Hooray pushes the needle up to 230, he looks like a kewpie doll, and he mostly admits that he has more notches on his guns than even Jimmy Cagney. And for many years these two pals have been trying to inflict mortal wounds on each other's bank rolls.

Our charming tete-a-tete is interrupted by a fierce uproar which comes from the direction of these two dear old friends. So me and Patty dashes over to prevent any excess bloodshed.

Hooray claims during this little friendly game that Chizzie-the-Busy has palmed an ace outta the deck, and this little trick has set him back exactly five C's.

"Listen Pal," he says to Chizzie-the-Busy outta the corner of his mouth, "if them five C's aint' returned immediately or sooner—I'll take ya apart and juggle the pieces."

At this point Patty slips Hooray a significant look and he relinquishes the idea of committing mayhem on the person of Chizzie-the-Busy, because he knows now the situation is in the hands of a genius.

A few days later Patty drops into my office and while she is bandying wisecracks with me it so happens that I receive some large-size wagers, from trainers and horse owners.

"Big stuff," she says, "there isn't a bookmaker in town who handles as many smart bets as you get your hands on."

"And?" I ask.

"And, if you would let me know," she says, "when some smart owner makes a wager on one of his horses with you, little gorgeous could call up Chizzie-the-Busy and make a tiny wager for herself. Then she could pick up enough change to purchase a little nail polish — of which she is in dire need."

"Okay, Gorgeous," I say, "there's a few spots like them coming up this afternoon. Stick around."

She does and I give her two tips that win and she beats Chizzie-the-Busy for trifle better than six C's—just enough for a truckload of nail polish.

The following afternoon she breezes in looking like a hot million and I thought I could detect a wise look on her gorgeous map.

She said that when Mulligan heard about the good tips that I had given her, the guy pestered her till she promised to make a few bets for him with Chizzie-the-Busy, if it was okay with me.

"It's okay with me," I said.

All the smart bets I handle that day lost—so Patty and Hooray, who was betting along with his wise money, wound up losing 580 slugs to Chizzie-the-Busy. But it didn't seem to bother Patty very much.

The next noon Chizzie walks into my office and I can see that he is in a rage, because his fake grinders are working like a hot marimba band cuttin' up a few rugs.

"Look," he says handing me an envelope, "what that wise peachy pie and Mulligan done to me."

I open it and see that the envelope contains a check for 80 berries and an ace of spades. Across the face of this card is printed in pencil: "Dearest Chizzie-the-Busy, I'm paying the 500 and 80 slugs I blew betting you yesterday with this check for 80 slugs and this ace, which is the one that you slipped outta the deck. This will square me up with you for my betting. And it will also square you up with me for the five C's you gipped me outta in that little stud game. With love, you pal, Hooray."

"That peachy pie," I say sympathetically, "is the wisest jill in the world. She sure knows how to separate a smart guy from the old green stuff."

"You're telling me," he says. "But if it takes 300 years, I'm gonna get even with this gorgeous peachy pie and that lizard Mulligan."

The next noon he calls at my office and bids me and Patty goodby, saying that he is going away for a rest. We wish him a pleasant journey and hope that it will improve his blood pressure.

"Here's the number of a good bookmaker," and he hands me a slip of paper. "I lay off with him when I'm top heavy on a bet — if you want to bet him when I'm gone—just mention my name."

"I know all the books around town," I say, "but I've never heard of this guy. How do I know that he'll pay off?"

"I'll okay him for you — personally," he says and out he goes.

This looks outta order to me because Chizzie-the-Busy would just as soon part with a layoff spot as he would an eye—or a leg.

Patty asks me for this bookmaker's number and I give it to her, at the same time warning that I'm not responsible if the guy can't pay off.

She calls him and they make satisfactory arrangements about doing business together.

During the next week a few favorites lost, so Patty and Mulligan, who were betting this stuff lost plenty money to the bookmaker whose number Chizzie left with us. They were mailing him checks every night and up to the present time they hadn't seen the color of his money.

One day the tide changed and they got six winners and took this bookmaker for around two G's. And to say that Patty and Hooray were jubilant would be putting it very mildly indeed.

The next noon Patty walks into the office. She is silent and upset. She hands me an envelope. I open it and see a slip of paper—on it printed in pencil: "Sorry we can't mail your check for two G's as me and my partner also ran."

And it's 1 to 10 in my line that this literary masterpiece was created by none other than Chizzie-the-Busy.

Bruce-Shelton Wedding Will Be Event Of Today at Fredericksburg, Va.

The marriage of Miss Mary Josephine Shelton, Washington, D. C., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard J. Shelton, of Bethlehem, and formerly of Cumberland, to Richard Johnson Bruce, son of Mrs. William M. Bruce, 209 Greene street, will take place at noon today at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. E. L. Downey, in Fredericksburg, Va.

The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Dudley Boogler, rector of the Episcopal church in Fredericksburg, in front of an improvised altar of palms with candelabra. The wedding march will be played by Miss Martha H. Shelton, a cousin of the bride.

The bride will wear a gown of blue haze crepe, with accessories to match, and will carry a small arm boquet of Budleah and Sweetheart roses.

Miss Shirley Holmes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Holmes, Dunbar drive, this city, will be Miss Shelton's only attendant. She will wear a gown of misty pink crepe with accessories to match. Her bouquet will be mixed spring flowers.

The bridegroom will have his brother, John J. Bruce, for his best man.

A reception will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Downey, immediately following the ceremony.

The bride is well known in Cumberland, where she was graduated from Allegany high school. She also attended the Washington School for secretaries.

Mr. Bruce, who is employed by the Celanese Corporation of America, was graduated from Allegany high school, and from St. John's college, Annapolis. He is a member of Kappa Alpha Fraternity.

After a wedding trip to New York city, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce will reside at 209 Greene street.

Among the out-of-town guests who will attend the wedding are Mrs. William M. Bruce, mother of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. John J. Bruce, Mr. and Mrs. Milnor Bruce and Miss Columbia Bruce, all of Cumberland; and Mr. and Mrs. Robert MacDonald Bruce and Mrs. Hanley W. Oswald and sons, Bruce and Richard, of Baltimore.

A BRIDE TODAY-- Miss Mary Louise Shelton, of Washington, D. C., formerly of Cumberland, who will be married today to Richard Johnson Bruce, of this city, at Fredericksburg, Va.

John F. Spitznas Will Wed Miss Newell Today

The marriage of Miss Mary Newell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Newell, Bradford, Pa., and John Footer Spitznas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Spitznas, The Dingle, will take place at 4 o'clock this afternoon, at the parsonage of the superintendent of the Washington district of the Methodist church Washington, D. C., The ceremony will be performed by Dr. G. Ellis Williams, the ring ceremony will be used.

Miss Newell is a niece of the late Dr. Frederick Haynes Newell, noted engineer of Washington D. C., who was director of the United States Reclamation Service under Theodore Roosevelt, and granddaughter of the late Augustus W. and Phele Newell, of Bradford, prominent pioneer residents of that city.

Mr. Spitznas is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Footer, founder of the Footer's Dye Works.

The bride will be given in marriage by her father, Lewis Newell. She will wear a travelling dress of printed silk trimmed with velvet ribbons and a matching hat and a corsage of Queen Mary roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Albert P. Powell, sister of the bride, will be her sister's attendant. Mr. Spitznas will be attended by his father, Clarence A. Spitznas.

The bride is a graduate of Bradford high school, the Sea Pines School of Brewster, Mass. and Temple university, Philadelphia.

The bridegroom was graduated from Allegany high school in Cumberland and the American University in Washington, D. C., and did graduate work at Southeastern university and the American Institute of Banking.

After a wedding trip to New York City and Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Spitznas will reside in Washington, D. C., where Mr. Spitznas is asociated with the Security Savings and Commercial Bank.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding will include Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Spitznas, Miss Betty Spitznas, parents and sister of the bridegroom; and Clair Monteith, all of Cumberland; Mr. and Mrs. Albert P. Powell, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Axman, State College, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. John Dunnington, Germantown, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Shetler, of Williamsport, Pa.

Guard Anniversary

Col. George Henderson will speak on "Memoirs of National Guard Life" at the anniversary dinner of Company G, of the First regiment of the Maryland National Guard, to be held at 6:30 o'clock this evening at the Center street Methodist church.

Col. Henderson will be introduced by Maj. Joseph P. Franklin, the toastmaster. Capt. Randolph Millholland and Maj. Harry Flook will also speak. Lieut.-Col. Elmer F. Munshower, of the First regiment of the Maryland National Guard and Capt. Guy Anders, of Company A, of Frederick, will be honor guests at the dinner again this year. Col. Munshower was formally head of the Maryland State Police.

Col. Edgar A. Teter is general chairman of the dinner and dance, with four other members of the Company assisting.

The National Guard was reorganized in 1921, having been almost demobolized after the World war prior to '21, and the units were rebuilt.

Remembering the grand dance the Company put on last year, everyone is looking forward to the dance tonight, for which Jimmy Andrews and his orchestra will play. The dancing will begin at 9 o'clock at the State armory on South Center street, and will be by invitation.

Quiz Is a Feature

A quiz on subjects of interest to parents, such as toys, games and other equipment for children, was held at a meeting of the LaVale Parent-Teacher Association, Thursday evening in the LaVale school.

Mrs. E. E. Sullivan read, "The Parent - Teacher Creed" and a Founders Day sketch was given by; Mrs. Russell Moon, Mrs. K. R. Adems and Mrs. A. E. Windish.

It was decided to purchase a stage curtain.

Refreshments were served.

To Buy Equipment

The Mothers Club of LaVale school voted to buy first aid equipment for the school when they met Tuesday after noon at the Fireman's hall, LaVale.

They also voted to aid financially the Parent-Teacher Association to buy the stage curtain. Twenty members were present.

Mrs. John Sprow, president of the Mothers' Club, presided.

Have Hazardous Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Babst, of Scarsdale, New York, arrived in Cumberland Thursday after a hazardous and round-about trip.

Last evening Mr. Babst entertained at 7:00 o'clock at the Ali Ghan Country Club, Baltimore pike, with a dinner for eight of his friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Babst left New York by motor, but because of the deep snow and blocked highways, they were unable to proceed beyond Allentown, Pennsylvania, the first evening. Thursday morning they started for Harrisburg, driving behind a snow-plow, with about two hundred other motorists. Finally dispairing of reaching Cumberland before the weekend, Mr. and Mrs. Babst returned to Reading, Pennsylvania, stored their car and boarded the train for Cumberland arriving here by way of Philadelphia.

Mr. Babst was for some years superintendent at the Celanese Corporation of America.

Classes Entertain

The special classes of Penn Avenue school entertained the entire student body, and many parents and supervisors with an assembly program, yesterday morning in the school auditorium.

The program included speaking, health exercises to music, a talk on science, piano music, a demonstration of steps in basket making and other handicraft work and a playlet, "Story Book Friends," followed by a puppet show.

Gift Is Presented

A sterling silver bracelet was presented as a gift of the Woman's Sport Club to Miss Codie Whitman, organizer and first president, at a dinner given Thursday evening at the Golden Gate tea room by the club in honor of its new and retiring officers.

Miss Agnes Byer, the new president, announced the appointment of the following committee chairmen:

Miss Mary Lawler, bicycle; Mrs. Chester Everline, tennis; Miss Thelma Britton, archery; and Miss Louise Zilch, membership. Mrs. Luther Burch and Mrs. Roy Hoff are other members of the last named committee.

The dinner was followed by card playing, honors at 500 being won by Miss Byer and Mrs. Ray Weimer, and at bridge by Miss Charlotte Smith and Mrs. J. Richard Kendall.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE MAN OF ALL WORK

HOW OFTEN we see partnerships in business, sport, bridge and everything else which feature one titanic worker and one virtual drone or dead weight. The heavy toiler has to carry the other member of the pair. Sometimes one-half of a bridge partnership will fumble the main opportunity of the bidding, and thus put it up to the player across the table to try to save the situation by superlative play. If you find yourself having to play such a part, here's hoping you will go to work without complaint, not just because that is the sporting thing to do, but because it is the profitable thing as well.

North began this duplicate deal with 1-Diamond. South showed his balanced strength and stoppers with 2-No Trumps, and West had the temerity to overcall with 3-Hearts, a terrible bid. North should have doubled and set him all over the place, but preferred to say 3-No Trumps.

South, who was unlucky to have such a partner, was fortunate in seeing West lead the heart Q. He won with dummy's K, took three high diamonds and led a fourth to East, who returned the spade 3. South took with the A, then led two hearts, West using his A on the second one and returning another to South. Next went a spade to the K, and the last diamond, which squeezed East.

As that card was played, dummy also held its two clubs and South two clubs plus the spade 8. If East discarded a club on the diamond, South would toss his spade and finish with club tricks. But East threw his spade J, so South shed the club 6 and finished the hand with the club A and spade 8, making five-odd for a clear top on a deal which produced no more than 4-No Trumps for others, only a bare three for some.

FOLKS - TRY MY TASTY NEW INDIVIDUAL CHERRY PIES

THE SPRY CRUST JUST MELTS IN YOUR MOUTH

SAYS AUNT JENNY

INDIVIDUAL CHERRY PIES

with flaky, tender Spry crust

5 cups canned red pitted cherries
½ cup cherry juice
¾ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon quick-cooking tapioca
6 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons butter
1 recipe Spry Pie Crust

Combine cherries, juice, sugar, salt and tapioca and fill 9-ounce casseroles about ¾-full. Sprinkle 1 tablespoon brown sugar over filling in each casserole.

Dot with butter. Roll pie dough ¼-inch thick, cut in rounds 1 inch larger than casseroles. Cut small designs in tops, turn edges under to fit casseroles, place over pies, and seal edges with fork. Bake in hot oven (425° F.) 25 to 30 minutes. Serve with Almond Sauce. Makes 6 deliciously flaky, tender pies.

ALMOND SAUCE

2 tablespoons Spry
2 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon vanilla
Few drops almond extract
⅔ cup sifted confectioners' sugar
¼ cup almonds, finely chopped

Combine Spry, butter, salt and extracts. Add sugar gradually, beating well after each addition. Add nuts and mix well. (See what light, fluffy hard sauce you get, using half butter and half Spry. Less expensive, too.)

SPRY PIE CRUST

2¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
⅔ cup Spry
3 tablespoons cold water (about)

Sift flour and salt together. Add ⅔ of Spry and cut in until mixture is as fine as meal. (Quickly done, Spry mixes so easily.) Add remaining Spry and continue cutting until particles are size of navy bean. Sprinkle water gradually over mixture. With a fork, work lightly into a dough.

(All measurements in these recipes are level)

(Clip and save this Spry recipe)

Miss Newell is a niece of the late Dr. Frederick Haynes Newell, noted engineer of Washington D. C., who was director of the United States Reclamation Service under Theodore Roosevelt, and granddaughter of the late Augustus W. and Phele Newell, of Bradford, prominent pioneer residents of that city.

Mr. Spitznas is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Footer, founder of the Footer's Dye Works.

The bride will be given in marriage by her father, Lewis Newell. She will wear a travelling dress of printed silk trimmed with velvet ribbons and a matching hat and a corsage of Queen Mary roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Albert P. Powell, sister of the bride, will be her sister's attendant. Mr. Spitznas will be attended by his father, Clarence A. Spitznas.

The bride is a graduate of Bradford high school, the Sea Pines School of Brewster, Mass. and Temple university, Philadelphia.

The bridegroom was graduated from Allegany high school in Cumberland and the American University in Washington, D. C., and did graduate work at Southeastern university and the American Institute of Banking.

After a wedding trip to New York City and Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Spitznas will reside in Washington, D. C., where Mr. Spitznas is asociated with the Security Savings and Commercial Bank.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding will include Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Spitznas, Miss Betty Spitznas, parents and sister of the bridegroom; and Clair Monteith, all of Cumberland; Mr. and Mrs. Albert P. Powell, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Axman, State College, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. John Dunnington, Germantown, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Shetler, of Williamsport, Pa.

Guard Anniversary

Col. George Henderson will speak on "Memoirs of National Guard Life" at the anniversary dinner of Company G, of the First regiment of the Maryland National Guard, to be held at 6:30 o'clock this evening at the Center street Methodist church.

Col. Henderson will be introduced by Maj. Joseph P. Franklin, the toastmaster. Capt. Randolph Millholland and Maj. Harry Flook will also speak. Lieut.-Col. Elmer F. Munshower, of the First regiment of the Maryland National Guard and Capt. Guy Anders, of Company A, of Frederick, will be honor guests at the dinner again this year. Col. Munshower was formally head of the Maryland State Police.

Col. Edgar A. Teter is general chairman of the dinner and dance, with four other members of the Company assisting.

The National Guard was reorganized in 1921, having been almost demobolized after the World war prior to '21, and the units were rebuilt.

Remembering the grand dance the Company put on last year, everyone is looking forward to the dance tonight, for which Jimmy Andrews and his orchestra will play. The dancing will begin at 9 o'clock at the State armory on South Center street, and will be by invitation.

Silver Tea Planned

A committee of members of the LaVale Parent-Teachers Association was appointed at a meeting of the association yesterday afternoon held at the home of Mrs. Harold Ashworth, National pike, LaVale, to formulate plans for a silver tea to be given at 2:30 p. m. Thursday, February 22, at the Fireman's hall, LaVale.

The committee comprises Mrs. H. W. Ashworth, general chairman; Mrs. Charles Long, Mrs. John Barncord, Mrs. D. M. Browne, Mrs. L. R. Firey, Mrs. Walter Davis, Mrs. R. G. Doty, Mrs. A. Billings and Mrs. Frank E. Stamp.

Marriage Is Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Baglen of Ellersile, announce the marriage of their daughter, Alemda Frances Baglen, to Otis Henry Stroupe, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Strupe, of 12 Valley street, this city, November 29, 1939, at Winchester, Va.

Quiz Is a Feature

A quiz on subjects of interest to parents, such as toys, games and other equipment for children, was held at a meeting of the LaVale Parent-Teacher Association, Thursday evening in the LaVale school.

Mrs. E. E. Sullivan read, "The Parent - Teacher Creed" and a Founders Day sketch was given by; Mrs. Russell Moon, Mrs. K. R. Adems and Mrs. A. E. Windish.

It was decided to purchase a stage curtain.

Refreshments were served.

To Buy Equipment

The Mothers Club of LaVale school voted to buy first aid equipment for the school when they met Tuesday after noon at the Fireman's hall, LaVale.

They also voted to aid financially the Parent-Teacher Association to buy the stage curtain. Twenty members were present.

Mrs. John Sprow, president of the Mothers' Club, presided.

Have Hazardous Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Babst, of Scarsdale, New York, arrived in Cumberland Thursday after a hazardous and round-about trip.

Last evening Mr. Babst entertained at 7:00 o'clock at the Ali Ghan Country Club, Baltimore pike, with a dinner for eight of his friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Babst left New York by motor, but because of the deep snow and blocked highways, they were unable to proceed beyond Allentown, Pennsylvania, the first evening. Thursday morning they started for Harrisburg, driving behind a snow-plow, with about two hundred other motorists. Finally dispairing of reaching Cumberland before the weekend, Mr. and Mrs. Babst returned to Reading, Pennsylvania, stored their car and boarded the train for Cumberland arriving here by way of Philadelphia.

Mr. Babst was for some years superintendent at the Celanese Corporation of America.

Classes Entertain

The special classes of Penn Avenue school entertained the entire student body, and many parents and supervisors with an assembly program, yesterday morning in the school auditorium.

The program included speaking, health exercises to music, a talk on science, piano music, a demonstration of steps in basket making and other handicraft work and a playlet, "Story Book Friends," followed by a puppet show.

The following children from Miss Vockes room took part in the program: William Breighner, Lowden Bucklew, James Castleman, Donald Cavey, Frank Annon, George Gordon , James Harden, Herbert Humbertson, Raymond Jones, Francis Krampt, Alenn Landis, Paul Monnette, Homer Mowery, James Sathoff, Charles Sine, Warren Spidell, John Wolfe, Gilbert Stevens, Helina Miller, and Rose Pratt.

From Mrs. Hendrick's room were Emery Sponaugle, Robert Reger, Owen Williams, Charles Bishpom, William Boyle, Joseph Stewart, Andrew Jackson, Billy Youngblood, James Springgs, Allyn Day, Herbert Whitaker, Ernest Moore, Howard Brehm, Oliver Evans, John House, Ernest Stinebaugh, James Spindell, James True, and Eugene Hissey.

Officers Are Elected

Officers were elected at a meeting of the Union Grove Homemakers' Club Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Kelly Brant, Bedford road.

Mrs. Albert Smouse was chosen president, Mrs. R. Wilson, vice president; Mrs. William Rilling, secretary and Mrs. R. Ferguson, treasurer.

Committee chairmen were also appointed, namely, Mrs. Ralph Mays, parliamentarian; Mrs. C. Slonaker, home management; Mrs. H. M. Luethke, home furnishing; Mrs. Clyde W. Love, food preservation; Mrs. E. Lundein, recreation; Mrs. George Fey, music; Mrs. Clyde Love, reading; Mrs. R. B. Fey, art appreciation; Mrs. J. McMakin, program; Mrs. Albert O'Neal, welfare; Mrs. Russell O'Neil, clothing; Mrs. H. Zembower, home garden; Mrs. Wm. Rilling publicity, and Mrs. R. B. Fey, lookout.

Gift Is Presented

A sterling silver bracelet was presented as a gift of the Woman's Sport Club to Miss Codie Whitman, organizer and first president, at a dinner given Thursday evening at the Golden Gate tea room by the club in honor of its new and retiring officers.

Miss Agnes Byer, the new president, announced the appointment of the following committee chairmen:

Miss Mary Lawler, bicycle; Mrs. Chester Everline, tennis; Miss Thelma Britton, archery; and Miss Louise Zilch, membership. Mrs. Luther Burch and Mrs. Roy Hoff are other members of the last named committee.

The dinner was followed by card playing, honors at 500 being won by Miss Byer and Mrs. Ray Weimer, and at bridge by Miss Charlotte Smith and Mrs. J. Richard Kendall.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

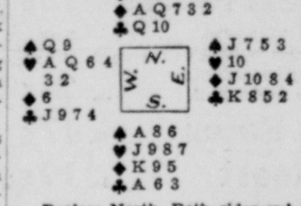
THE MAN OF ALL WORK

HOW OFTEN we see partnerships in business, sport, bridge and everything else which feature one titanic worker and one virtual drone or dead weight. The heavy toiler has to carry the other member of the pair. Sometimes one-half of a bridge partnership will fumble the main opportunity of the bidding, and thus put it up to the player across the table to try to save the situation by superlative play. If you find yourself having to play such a part, here's hoping you will go to work without complaint, not just because that is the sporting thing to do, but because it is the profitable thing as well.



Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

North began this duplicate deal with 1-Diamond. South showed his balanced strength and stoppers with 2-No Trumps, and West had the temerity to overcall with 3-Hearts, a terrible bid. North should have doubled and set him all over the place, but preferred to say 3-No Trumps.

South, who was unlucky to have such a partner, was fortunate in seeing West lead the heart Q. He won with dummy's K, took three high diamonds and led a fourth to East, who returned the spade 3. South took with the A, then led two hearts, West using his A on the second one and returning another to South. Next went a spade to the K, and the last diamond, which squeezed East.

As that card was played, dummy also held its two clubs and South two clubs plus the spade 8. If East discarded a club on the diamond, South would toss his spade and finish with club tricks. But East threw his spade J, so South shed the club 6 and finished the hand with the club A and spade 8, making five-odd for a clear top on a deal which produced no more than 4-No Trumps for others, only a bare three for some.

Monday's Problem

Against a lead of the club 5, how should East play for 6-Spades?

THE SPRY CRUST JUST MELTS IN YOUR MOUTH

INDIVIDUAL CHERRY PIES
with flaky, tender Spry crust

5 cups canned red pitted cherries
½ cup cherry juice
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon quick-cooking tapioca
6 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons butter
1 recipe Spry Pie Crust

Combine cherries, juice, sugar, salt and tapioca and fill 9-ounce casseroles about ¾-full. Sprinkle 1 tablespoon brown sugar over filling in each casserole.

Dot with butter. Roll pie dough ⅛-inch thick, cut in rounds 1 inch larger than casseroles. Cut small designs in tops, turn edges under to fit casseroles, place over pies, and seal edges with fork. Bake in hot oven (425° F.) 25 to 30 minutes. Serve with Almond Sauce. Makes 6 deliciously flaky, tender pies.

ALMOND SAUCE
2 tablespoons Spry
2 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon vanilla
Few drops almond extract
⅔ cup sifted confectioners' sugar
¼ cup almonds, finely chopped

Combine Spry, butter, salt and extracts. Add sugar gradually, beating well after each addition. Add nuts and mix well. (See what light, fluffy hard sauce you get, using half butter and half Spry. Less expensive, too.)

SPRY PIE CRUST
2¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
⅔ cup Spry
3 tablespoons cold water (about)

Sift flour and salt together. Add ⅓ of Spry and cut in until mixture is as fine as meal. (Quickly done, Spry mixes so easily.) Add remaining Spry and continue cutting until particles are size of navy bean. Sprinkle water gradually over mixture. With a fork, work lightly into a dough.

(All measurements in these recipes are level)
(Clip and save this Spry recipe)

Wonderful cakes with Spry, too, and such crispy, digestible fried foods
—thanks to Spry's 3 extra advantages

"SPRY"S purer. Stays fresh longer. Mixes so easily. Three big extra advantages an' remember, only Spry gives all three!" says Aunt Jenny. "Notice how gleamin' white Spry is. You can tell it's purer by another thing, too—no unpleasant smell or smoke when you fry. No two ways about it, folks, a shortenin' so pure is goin' to give better tastin' foods. An' Spry does! Change to purer Spry today an' see."

Taste-Teasing Canapes For the Cocktails

Roll one-inch balls of white cream cheese in minced parsley flecked with paprika and then roll in chopped sweet pickles. Serve on tiny rounds of hot, buttered toast; wrap thin slices of boiled ham, thinly spread with mustard, around cheese sticks; wrap all in waxed paper and chill until serving time; dip edges of cleaned, cooked shrimp into chopped parsley mixed with pickle relish; hang them over the edge of small cups filled with a mixture of mayonnaise and chili sauce. The guests dip their own, using wood picks placed conveniently near.

Ham Sticks Are a New Winter Treat

Try ham sticks at your next tea; they're a new winter treat. Roll rich biscuit dough a quarter inch thick. Spread a thick, chopped ham salad relish on half of it. Fold the other half of the dough over the filling and press it down. Cut into thin strips with a sharp knife. Press the edges of each strip together with a fork to keep the filling in and prick the tops for decoration. Bake 7 minutes on a shallow ungreased pan in a moderate oven.

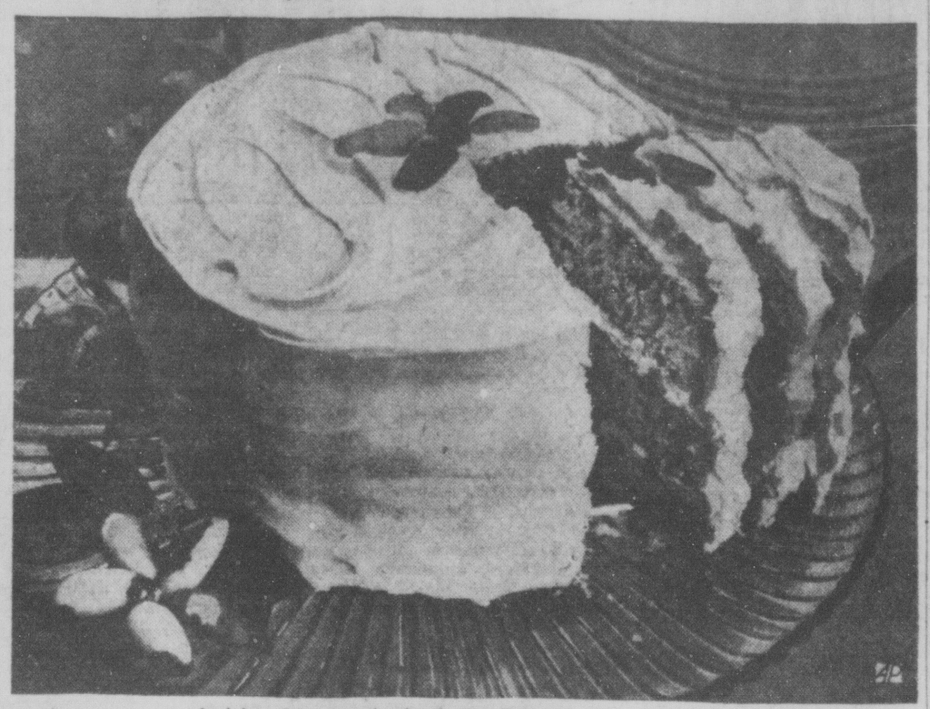
Jams and Jellies Will Brighten Midwinter Cakes and Pastries



A pink and brown spicy treat—Brazil nut blackberry jam cake.

By LOUISE BENNETT WEAVER
AP Feature Service Writer

Surprise touches of jelly or jam will attract special attention to midwinter cakes, rolls and pastries. You can awaken drowsy appetites by serving pastry layers filled with some tart jelly; cakes with a pungent jam flavor; or rolls coated with marmalade.

Here is a DAMSON PLUM PUDDING that will stamp you as an original cook. It's delicious to taste and easy to make. Cream together ½ cup fat and 1 cup of granulated sugar, add 3 eggs, 1 cup Damson plum butter, 1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon soda, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon salt and 3 tablespoons sour milk or buttermilk. Pour into a shallow pan lined with waxed paper and bake 40 minutes in a moderately slow oven—325 degrees. Serve warm with a fruit or creamy sauce. If you're out of the plum butter, substitute blackberry, red plum or currant jam.

This pudding calls for ORANGE MARMALADE. Soak, for 10 minutes, 1½ cups bread crumbs in 1½ cups hot milk. Mix in 2 eggs, 1 cup orange marmalade and 1 teaspoon grated orange rind. Add ½ teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons melted butter. Half fill a buttered mold. Cover tightly and steam 1½ hours. Serve warm with lemon sauce or pineapple hard sauce.

Then there is this JAM TRICK: Spread thick raspberry or currant jam on cut-out sugar or spice cooky dough, then put other cut-outs on the jam and press the edges together with a fork. Prick the tops and bake 10 minutes. These jam-filled confections will make a hit with the youngsters. Tuck some in the school lunch boxes.

Dress up pastry rolls with PINEAPPLE APRICOT FILLING. Make a rich biscuit dough, pat it half an inch thick and then spread with a half-inch layer of pineapple-apricot marmalade or thick raspberry jam. Roll quickly and fit into a greased loaf pan. Glaze the top with equal parts of dark brown sugar and milk. Bake 35 minutes in a moderate oven and serve with a fruit sauce or lemon sauce with a little of the marmalade in it.

Now for some JELLY STUNTS: For some surprise drop cakes, place a tablespoon of cake batter in muffin pans or paper cups, add a teaspoon of tart jelly (plum, currant, crabapple), cover with more batter and bake as usual. For jelly doughnuts, roll doughnut dough half an inch thick, cut out circles (1½ inches). Place teaspoon of plum, currant or grape jelly in the center of each. Moisten the edges with milk, then pinch them together. Fry in hot fat as for any other doughnuts.

This JELLY FROSTING will glorify a plain cake, individual cakes or cookies. Mix, in a double boiler, 1 cup grape or plum jelly, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, ⅛ teaspoon salt and 2 egg whites. Heat slowly and beat with an egg beater until mixture forms in peaks. It is then ready to ice the cake.

BRAZIL NUT BLACKBERRY JAM CAKE

3 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons phosphate baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup sour milk or buttermilk
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup chopped Brazil nuts
1 teaspoon cloves
⅔ cup shortening
1½ cups sugar
3 eggs, well beaten
1 cup strained blackberry jam

Mix and sift flour, baking pawder, salt and spices. Cream shortening until smooth, gradually add sugar. Mix thoroughly. Beat in eggs and jam. Add flour alternately with milk (about 1-3 at a time), beating smooth each time. Turn into three 8-inch layer pans greased and lined with waxed paper. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 30 minutes. Assemble layers and spread with Blackberry Fluffy Frosting.

BLACKBERRY FLUFFY FROSTING

Add 3 tablespoons blackberry jam (seeds removed) and a few drops of pink coloring to Seven-Minute Frosting.

School Lunch Sweetener

Cooking for Two Persons Is Not Easy Assignment

College Park, Feb. 16—It's easy enough for the young homemaker to learn how to cook with the aid of a recipe book and the advice of friendly neighbors. But it takes real ingenuity to plan meals for two persons, without wasting food or letting the menus become monotonous, explains Miss Margaret McPheeters, specialist in nutrition at the University of Maryland.

Compare Prices

To know exactly how many servings you can get from a certain amount of all the common foods, is the first step suggested by Miss McPheeters. Many times considerable savings can be made through buying food in fairly large quantities, even when the family is small. The skillful buyer compares the prices of foods in different size containers, and figures out how much she can save by getting the larger sizes. When there is food to ke kept from one meal to the next, well-arranged shelf space, covered jars, and refrigerator dishes of different sizes are important kitchen aids.

If you make use of the economics of purchasing in large quantities, it is important to plan meals for several days in advance, says Miss McPheeters. If you buy a large can of fruit or if you cook more vegetables than are needed for the meal, vary your menu schemes by serving them in entirely different ways. When there is a roast, combine the left-over meat with different vegetables each time it reappears.

Plate Service Convenient

Fortunately, there are some foods that are almost planned to order for the small family. Egg dishes can be made to fit a group of any size. Among the meats that a family of two can use to good advantage are chops, cutlets, ground meat, stewing meat, sausage, bacon, sliced ham, and liver.

As a final point in simplifying the cook-for-two-problem, avoid serving dishes. Instead, try arranging both the vegetables and the meat attractively on a single large platter or chop plate. Or, you may find it more convenient to have plate service directly from the kitchen.

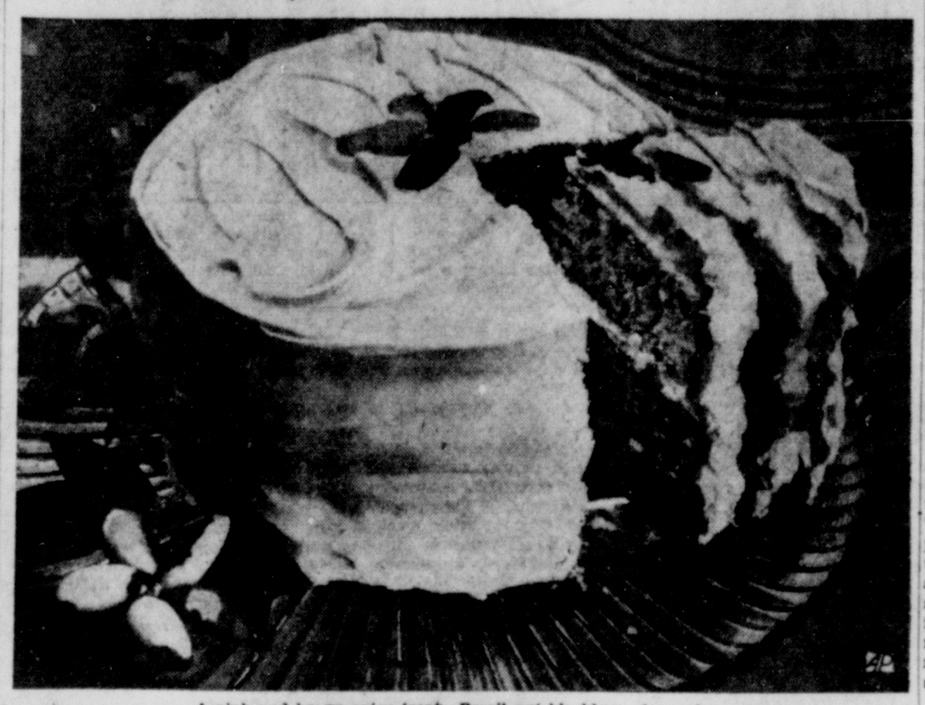
Here are some taste-teasing canapes that are just right with cocktails:

Roll one-inch balls of white cream cheese in minced parsley flecked with paprika and then roll in chopped sweet pickles. Serve on tiny rounds of hot, buttered toast; wrap thin slices of boiled ham, thinly spread with mustard, around cheese sticks; wrap all in waxed paper and chill until serving time; dip edges of cleaned, cooked shrimp into chopped parsley mixed with pickle relish; hang them over the edge of small cups filled with a mixture of mayonnaise and chili sauce. The guests dip their own, using wood picks placed conveniently near.

Ham Sticks Are a New Winter Treat

Try ham sticks at your next tea; they're a new winter treat. Roll rich biscuit dough a quarter inch thick. Spread a thick, chopped ham salad relish on half of it. Fold the other half of the dough over the filling and press it down. Cut into thin strips with a sharp knife. Press the edges of each strip together with a fork to keep the filling in and prick the tops for decoration. Bake 7 minutes on a shallow ungreased pan in a moderate oven.

Jams and Jellies Will Brighten Midwinter Cakes and Pastries



A pink and brown spicy treat—Brazil nut blackberry jam cake.

By LOUISE BENNETT WEAVER
AP Feature Service Writer

Surprise touches of jelly or jam will attract special attention to midwinter cakes, rolls and pastries. You can awaken drowsy appetites by serving pastry layers filled with some tart jelly; cakes with a pungent jam flavor; or rolls coated with marmalade.

Here is a DAMSON PLUM PUDDING that will stamp you as an original cook. It's delicious to taste and easy to make. Cream together ½ cup fat and 1 cup of granulated sugar, add 3 eggs, 1 cup Damson plum butter, 1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon soda, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon salt and 3 tablespoons sour milk or buttermilk. Pour into a shallow pan lined with waxed paper and bake 40 minutes in a moderately slow oven—325 degrees. Serve warm with a fruit or creamy sauce. If you're out of the plum butter, substitute blackberry, red plum or currant jam.

This pudding calls for ORANGE MARMALADE. Soak, for 10 minutes, 1½ cups bread crumbs in 1½ cups hot milk. Mix in 2 eggs, 1 cup orange marmalade and 1 teaspoon grated orange rind. Add ½ teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons melted butter. Half fill a buttered mold. Cover tightly and steam 1½ hours. Serve warm with lemon sauce or pineapple hard sauce.

Then there is this JAM TRICK: Spread thick raspberry or currant jam on cut-out sugar or spice cooky dough, then put other cut-outs on the jam and press the edges together with a fork. Prick the tops and bake 10 minutes. These jam-filled confections will make a hit with the youngsters. Tuck some in the school lunch boxes.

Dress up pastry rolls with PINEAPPLE APRICOT FILLING. Make a rich biscuit dough, pat it half an inch thick and then spread with a half-inch layer of pineapple-apricot marmalade or thick raspberry jam. Roll quickly and fit into a greased loaf pan. Glaze the top with equal parts of dark brown sugar and milk. Bake 35 minutes in a moderate oven and serve with a fruit sauce or lemon sauce with a little of the marmalade in it.

Now for some JELLY STUNTS: For some surprise drop cakes, place a tablespoon of cake batter in muffin pans or paper cups, add a teaspoon of tart jelly (plum, currant, crabapple), cover with more batter and bake as usual. For jelly doughnuts, roll doughnut dough half an inch thick, cut out circles (1½ inches). Place teaspoon of plum, currant or grape jelly in the center of each. Moisten the edges with milk, then pinch them together. Fry in hot fat as for any other doughnuts.

This JELLY FROSTING will glorify a plain cake, individual cakes or cookies. Mix, in a double boiler, 1 cup grape or plum jelly, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, ⅛ teaspoon salt and 2 egg whites. Heat slowly and beat with an egg beater until mixture forms in peaks. It is then ready to ice the cake.

BRAZIL NUT BLACKBERRY JAM CAKE

3 cups sifted flour	1 cup chopped Brazil nuts
2 teaspoons phosphate baking powder	1 teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon baking soda	⅔ cup shortening
¼ teaspoon salt	1⅔ cups sugar
1 cup sour milk or buttermilk	3 eggs, well beaten
1 teaspoon cinnamon	1 cup strained blackberry jam

Mix and sift flour, baking pawder, salt and spices. Cream shortening until smooth, gradually add sugar. Mix thoroughly. Beat in eggs and jam. Add flour alternately with milk (about 1-3 at a time), beating smooth each time. Turn into three 8-inch layer pans greased and lined with waxed paper. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 30 minutes. Assemble layers and spread with Blackberry Fluffy Frosting.

BLACKBERRY FLUFFY FROSTING

Add 3 tablespoons blackberry jam (seeds removed) and a few drops of pink coloring to Seven-Minute Frosting.

School Lunch Sweetener

Cooking for Two Persons Is Not Easy Assignment

College Park, Feb. 16—It's easy enough for the young homemaker to learn how to cook with the aid of a recipe book and the advice of friendly neighbors. But it takes real ingenuity to plan meals for two persons, without wasting food or letting the menus become monotonous, explains Miss Margaret McPheeters, specialist in nutrition at the University of Maryland.

Compare Prices

To know exactly how many servings you can get from a certain amount of all the common foods, is the first step suggested by Miss McPheeters. Many times considerable savings can be made through buying food in fairly large quantities, even when the family is small. The skillful buyer compares the prices of foods in different size containers, and figures out how much she can save by getting the larger sizes. When there is food to ke kept from one meal to the next, well-arranged shelf space, covered jars, and refrigerator dishes of different sizes are important kitchen aids.

If you make use of the economics of purchasing in large quantities, it is important to plan meals for several days in advance, says Miss McPheeters. If you buy a large can of fruit or if you cook more vegetables than are needed for the meal, vary your menu schemes by serving them in entirely different ways. When there is a roast, combine the left-over meat with different vegetables each time it reappears.

Plate Service Convenient

Fortunately, there are some foods that are almost planned to order for the small family. Egg dishes can be made to fit a group of any size. Among the meats that a family of two can use to good advantage are chops, cutlets, ground meat, stewing meat, sausage, bacon, sliced ham, and liver.

As a final point in simplifying the cook-for-two-problem, avoid serving dishes. Instead, try arranging both the vegetables and the meat attractively on a single large platter or chop plate. Or, you may find it more convenient to have plate service directly from the kitchen.

Scripture—Matt. 22:15-23:39

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Trying to trap Jesus, the Pharisees and followers of Herod gathered together to talk over and decide what questions they should ask Him that would make the people hate Him.

These men went to Jesus and asked Him concerning the hated poll-tax that the Romans levied on the Jews. His answer was: "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's."

The Sadducees then had their turn, asking the Lord a question concerning marriage laws in heaven, but Jesus told them in heaven there was neither marriage nor giving in marriage.

Having silenced His enemies, Jesus looked mournfully toward Jerusalem, foreseeing its downfall because the people would not listen to Him. (GOLDEN TEXT—Matt. 22:39)

Tribute to Caesar

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—Matt. 22:39.

Good Citizens and Good Neighbors

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic is Mat. 22:15-23:39, the Golden Text being Matt. 22:39, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.")

ONE THING in particular must strike readers of today's lesson, and that is the cleverness of Jesus' replies to His enemies. These enemies, Pharisees or priests, Sadducees, the religious political party, and the Herodians or followers of Herod, all refused to consider the idea of Jesus as the Messiah, and considered Him as a dangerous man and a heretic. They felt they must get rid of Him as quickly as possible. But they were afraid of the common people, whom they knew thought of Him as the Master and a prophet.

So these men tried to trap Him so that by His replies to their questions the people should lose faith in Him. They doubtless reasoned that He was an ignorant countryman who could easily be made to say just what they wanted Him to, and so give them an excuse for taking Him prisoner.

But no matter what questions these highly educated men put to Him, His answers always left them speechless and in the wrong. It was customary in those days for anyone who wished to question a rabbi to do so in public, no matter what he might be doing at the time. So the Pharisees and the Herodians banded together to decide on some question that He would not be able to answer satisfactorily, and which would offend the people. The Pharisees were a religious party, fanatical, and most of the rabbis and scribes came from that party. The Herodians were, as the name implies, followers of Herod.

Ask Concerning Tax

The question that they decided to ask Jesus concerned the tribute or poll tax which the Romans levied upon the Jews and which they hated. The Pharisees and Herodians addressed Jesus in most flattering terms, calling Him Teacher and saying they knew He was true and taught the way of God, etc.—a most hypocritical attitude for them to take who only wished Him ill. "Is it lawful to give tribute unto Caesar or is it not?" Jesus called for a Roman coin, and when it was brought He said, "Whose is this image and superscription?" "Caesar's," they answered. Then Jesus said, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." His enemies had nothing to say to that answer, but slunk away.

Then the Sadducees came to Him. They, too, were an influential religious party, and they did not believe in the resurrection. The question they put was an absurd one, but they thought to trap Him, nevertheless. If the oldest of seven brothers married a woman and he died, leaving no children, it would be lawful for the brother next in age to marry the woman. If he did this, but he, too, died and she married each of the brothers in turn and all died and she herself finally passed away, in the resurrection, whose wife would she be? "Ye do err," said Jesus, "not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God. For in the resurrection they neither marry nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven." The Sadducees also went away marveling.

Lawyer Questions Him

Next a lawyer, a Pharisee, went to Him and asked Him what is the great commandment? And Jesus answered the man:

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And a second like unto it is this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

These men drew Christ's anger because He knew, oh so well, that they were not sincere in apparently seeking knowledge. He saw through them and that they were trying to trap and mock Him, and he denounced them, calling them hypocrites. Insincerity always aroused the Lord's contempt.

These questions were asked our Lord during the last week of His life on earth. He realized that the people as a whole would not take His message and His warning, and He looked at the beautiful city of Jerusalem, and mourned over it in the touching words:

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets and stoneth them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!

"Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.

"For I say unto you, Ye shall not see Me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord."

Jesus never taught again. The scribes and Pharisees—hypocrites. He called them—had no more chance to receive Him and His message, and His Jerusalem was truly left desolate and the Jewish people were scattered.

Good Citizens and Good Neighbors

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Matt. 22:15-23:39

Trying to trap Jesus, the Pharisees and followers of Herod gathered together to talk over and decide what questions they should ask Him that would make the people hate Him.

These men went to Jesus and asked Him concerning the hated poll-tax that the Romans levied on the Jews. His answer was: "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's."

The Sadducees then had their turn, asking the Lord a question concerning marriage laws in heaven, but Jesus told them in heaven there was neither marriage nor giving in marriage.

Having silenced His enemies, Jesus looked mournfully toward Jerusalem, foreseeing its downfall because the people would not listen to Him. (GOLDEN TEXT—Matt. 22:39)

Tribute to Caesar

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—Matt. 22:39.

Good Citizens and Good Neighbors

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic is Mat. 22:15-23:39, the Golden Text being Matt. 22:39, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.")

ONE THING in particular must strike readers of today's lesson, and that is the cleverness of Jesus' replies to His enemies. These enemies, Pharisees or priests, Sadducees, the religious political party, and the Herodians or followers of Herod, all refused to consider the idea of Jesus as the Messiah, and considered Him as a dangerous man and a heretic. They felt they must get rid of Him as quickly as possible. But they were afraid of the common people, whom they knew thought of Him as the Master and a prophet.

So these men tried to trap Him so that by His replies to their questions the people should lose faith in Him. They doubtless reasoned that He was an ignorant countryman who could easily be made to say just what they wanted Him to, and so give them an excuse for taking Him prisoner.

But no matter what questions these highly educated men put to Him, His answers always left them speechless and in the wrong. It was customary in those days for anyone who wished to question a rabbi to do so in public, no matter what he might be doing at the time. So the Pharisees and the Herodians banded together to decide on some question that He would not be able to answer satisfactorily, and which would offend the people. The Pharisees were a religious party, fanatical, and most of the rabbis and scribes came from that party. The Herodians were, as the name implies, followers of Herod.

Ask Concerning Tax

The question that they decided to ask Jesus concerned the tribute or poll tax which the Romans levied upon the Jews and which they hated. The Pharisees and Herodians addressed Jesus in most flattering terms, calling Him Teacher and saying they knew He was true and taught the way of God, etc.—a most hypocritical attitude for them to take who only wished Him ill. "Is it lawful to give tribute unto Caesar or is it not?" Jesus called for a Roman coin, and when it was brought He said, "Whose is this image and superscription?" "Caesar's," they answered. Then Jesus said, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." His enemies had nothing to say to that answer, but slunk away.

Then the Sadducees came to Him. They, too, were an influential religious party, and they did not believe in the resurrection. The question they put was an absurd one, but they thought to trap Him, nevertheless. If the oldest of seven brothers married a woman and he died, leaving no children, it would be lawful for the brother next in age to marry the woman. If he did this, but he, too, died and she married each of the brothers in turn and all died and she herself finally passed away, in the resurrection, whose wife would she be? "Ye do err," said Jesus, "not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God. For in the resurrection they neither marry nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven." The Sadducees also went away marveling.

Lawyer Questions Him

Next a lawyer, a Pharisee, went to Him and asked Him what is the great commandment? And Jesus answered the man:

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And a second like unto it is this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

These men drew Christ's anger because He knew, oh so well, that they were not sincere in apparently seeking knowledge. He saw through them and that they were trying to trap and mock Him, and he denounced them, calling them hypocrites. Insincerity always aroused the Lord's contempt.

These questions were asked our Lord during the last week of His life on earth. He realized that the people as a whole would not take His message and His warning, and He looked at the beautiful city of Jerusalem, and mourned over it in the touching words:

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets and stoneth them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!

"Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.

"For I say unto you, Ye shall not see Me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord."

Jesus never taught again. The scribes and Pharisees—hypocrites. He called them—had no more chance to receive Him and His message, and His Jerusalem was truly left desolate and the Jewish people were scattered.

Heiress to a candy fortune, Mrs. Betty Huyler Gillies, 33, of Soyosset, L. I., seeks to upset a federal ban on flying by pregnant women. She denies the condition is apt to cause trouble at the controls and contends the ban often prevents women from flying enough hours a year to retain their licenses.

Last Hour Recovery Helps Stocks Recover Part of First Hour Loss

Coppers Take Lead after Being Inactive for Months

New York, Feb. 16 (AP)—Under the leadership of coppers and assorted shipbuilding and traction issues, the stock market today put on a last-hour recovery shift that reduced early losses among leaders and put selected favorites up substantially.

While the late bulge aided virtually all departments, it was not sufficient to put the list up as a whole. The Associated Press average of sixty stocks was off .1 of a point at 50.2. Transfers amounted to 684,120 shares against 753,715 yesterday.

Coppers, jogging along in the rear ranks for the past few months, seemed to have been spurred by reports of heavier foreign purchases.

A slight dip in this week's automotive production was undisturbing to the motors.

Rails also inclined to ignore a contra-seasonal drop in last week's freight loadings caused mainly by falling industrial and coal shipments.

Marked up a notch in the Curb were American Cyanamid "B" and Phoenix securities. Turnover of 172,000 shares compared with 173,000 Thursday.

Chicago Grain Prices

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP)—In one of the most hectic ten minute trading periods of recent grain market history wheat prices jumped abruptly almost five cents a bushel today just before the closing bell.

The best explanation of the flurry was that purchasing, which some said originated in the east, inspired by reports of heavy Canadian export business and good sales of U. S. Pacific coast wheat, caught brokers off guard and the pit bare of offerings.

Wheat closed 3-4¾ cents higher than yesterday, May $1.03½-1.04½, July $1.01½-1.02. Corn was unchanged to ⅜ up, May 56½, July 57; oats ⅛-½ higher; rye 2-2⅜ up and lard 2-5 higher.

Scandinavian Bonds Off

New York, Feb. 16 (AP) — Dollar loans of Latin America advanced and those of Scandinavian countries declined today in a bond market alert to the world's news.

Reports of Red army advances into Finland were immediately reflected by drops of as much as two points in some of the bonds of Denmark and Norway.

U. S. Treasuries, lightly traded, closed in the narrowly uneven range of 5-32 point higher to 4-32 lower.

Transactions totaled $6,882,700 compared with $5,399,000 yesterday.

Nat Holman Named Cage Commissioner

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP) —Nat Holman, basketball coach of the City College of New York and one of the greatest stars ever to play professional basketball, has been named commissioner of the national professional basketball championship to be played March 17-20 at the Madison Street Armory.

Holman was an outstanding player with the New York Celtics and wound up his career with the Chicago Bruins in 1928.

P.G.A. Honors Bing Crosby

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 16 (AP)—An honor seldom bestowed upon an amateur — life membership in the Professional Golfers' Association — belongs to Bing Crosby.

The Southern California Chapter of the P. G. A. honored the singer-sportsman in appreciation of his interest in the sport and the professionals who earn a livelihood in it.

Crosby puts on a $3,000 pro-amateur tournament each year

Garrett County Red Cross Roll Call over Top

Have 389 Members and Cash Receipts of $420--Others To Report

Oakland, Md., Feb. 16 — The announcement of twenty-three additional members to the annual Red Cross roll call from Friendsville this week has sent the quota over the top as far as money is concerned and brings the actual membership to within eleven of the 400 goal originally set at the beginning of the campaign.

Mrs. Paul B. Naylor, roll call chairman, announced that Mrs. E. Greenwals had received 23 memberships and $23.00 from Friendsville residents, making $420.33 in money collected and 389 members.

Mrs. Naylor said Kitzmiller had made no report as yet and that a few more memberships were probably in scattered areas.

Scout Activities

Boy Scout anniversary week closed yesterday with a demonstration in scouting at an assembly program in the local high school. Oakland troop No. 1 had a full week of activities, beginning with rededication service last Thursday evening, a father-son dinner on Friday and church attendance on Sunday.

At the regular court of honor on Monday ten scouts were awarded merit badges. Four scouts were also approved as second class scouts, and one qualified for the rank of Life Scout.

Merit badges were awarded as follows:

Bernard I. Gonder, Jr., farm records and bookkeeping; William Shirer, swimming and handicraft; Charles McIntire, swimming; Harold Ashby, pathfinding; Allen Naylor, woodwork; Fred Sharps, swimming; Robert Sincell, safety, athletics, pathfinding, woodwork; Robert Stevenson, safety; Stephen Coffey, handicraft, swimming; Linn Grant, civics.

Qualifying for second class rank were Charles H. McIntire, Billy Shirer, Fred Sharps, and Stephen Coffey. Linn Grant qualified for the rank of Life Scout, the rank below that of Eagle Scout.

Recognition was given to Bernard I. Gonder, Jr., who has applied for his fifteen-year veterans' badge. Mr. Gonder has been a member of the troop since its organization in November, 1924, and is at present assistant scoutmaster.

Oppose $2.50 Fees

At a regular meeting of the Garrett County Sportsmen's Association a resolution was unanimously adopted opposing the proposal that license fees be made state-wide at $2.50 thus abolishing the county resident license fee.

Members agreed that if more money was the object the sportsmen of Garrett county would not oppose an increase of the present fee, provided a proportionate increase be made throughout the state, including a state-wide license. Adoption of the proposal would result in indiscriminate posting of private land and farms in this county, H. C. Riggs, president, stated.

The meeting proposed that the members of the General Assembly be instructed that the law prohibiting the State Inland Fish and Game Commission from purchasing land in this county be repealed.

Members interested in the propagation of bear proposed that bear be protected in this county for a period of three years in the nope that some of them may make this county a breeding ground. A few have been seen in the county recently, one having been killed in the Swallow Falls section last fall.

Fighting Dandruff

By HELEN FOLLETT

DANDRUFF doesn't care if the scalp and hair are dry or oily; it goes about its obnoxious business just the same. It is a horrid mess. That it is a fungus growth has been definitely determined by medical experts.

Don't try to dislodge it with your finger-nails. If you do, you will be a victim of what is known as habit rash, tiny abrasions that invite infection. Don't disturb it with the fine teeth of the comb. It is all right to use a brush, parting the hair at various places, brushing along the partings.

An oil treatment once a week helps to keep the scalp free of these loathsome scales. Either mineral or olive oil will serve. Heat it, apply with a large medicine dropper, give the scalp a five-minute friction. Spread out fingers and thumbs, do a good job of mauling. If you don't mind getting your hair wet, wrap the head in a heavy towel that has been wrung out of hot water.

Next morning have a shampoo with melted soap. Three latherings, as many rinsings. Use a bath spray and a strong current of water. Dry with warm towels, massage the scalp again. Have the hair dry before using a setting lotion; your wave will endure longer, hair will appear more abundant.

Breathing exercises will put roses in your cheeks, cut down on the cosmetic overhead. You can pluck blushes out of the air easy as pie; they don't cost a cent.

Stand tall, hands on hips. Inhale through the nostrils, throwing out the chest-works while you pull in your tummy works. Fill the lungs down to the last and lowest cells. Exhale through the lips with a whistle, the idea being to expel stagnant air that you've got packed away in your bellows. Five minutes night and morning.

It's good also to make thin girls busty.

Chamber of Commerce is not concerned with the efficient administration of the Wagner act, nor with the protection of victimised Cumberland workers and there is not one of their public acts or statements to support a contrary view.

"I am willing to go further and state that there is no record to my knowledge, where this group has ever proposed or adopted any action which would assure the general wellbeing of the workers and wage earners of Allegany county.

"The Cumberland Chamber of Commerce sent a delegation to Annapolis last year to oppose the payment of a minimum wage law of twenty-five cents an hour to Cumberland workers. The Chamber of Commerce stays silent in the face of statements that Cumberland women are sweated as restaurant help for "wages" as low as $2.50 per week in the center of the city. We have even published the name of such a restaurant operator, but no comment comes from the "representatives" of business.

"The Cumberland Chamber of Commerce says the benefits of the Wagner act should be withdrawn from employes who violate the terms of an agreement, but it keeps quiet on the penalties to be imposed on employers who are guilty.

"For example, there is an agreement between the merchants and the clerks union. Last week, though, female help, used in preparing and conducting a fire sale of shoes were "paid" the "wages" of $1 per day! And, I repeat, no protest comes from the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce.

"It is my opinion that the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce is opposed to any legislation to require collective bargaining. As proof for this statement I refer to their opposition to the passage of a state Labor Relations act at the last session of the Maryland legislature.

"Now, the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce wants an amendment to place certain, substantial standards to which an employer must be engaged in interstate commerce before being subject to the act. In other words the chamber seeks a loophole of escape for as many employes as possible from the need to bargain collectively with their workers!

"I have said that I have not known of any action taken by the chamber in the interests of all the people. Recently the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce set up the Allegany County Tax Research Association. They invited me to serve upon this body. I consulted with those who invited me, but I refused their invitation when I found that they had no plans to demand the City of Cumberland collect the delinquent taxes of the Republic Steel Corporation on its idle tin mill property and that it was further revealed that this same Cumberland Chamber of Commerce was collecting fifty dollars of the Cumberland taxpayers funds as dues to finance its own organization.

"In my opinion, it is time that the public was informed of the negative and reactionary proposals and actions of such a group.

"The real requirements of the Wagner act is to have it strengthened so that it can better serve the workers who it was designed to protect. The employer is already well armed and by proposals such as made by the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, wishes to further weaken his employes who ask only for the rights to organize as the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce has organized and as the national association of commerce has organized and as all big business has organized.

The Cumberland Chamber of Commerce has apparently taken as its slogan that "It's good for business, but too good for workers to organize."

"May I add that the statement as issued today by the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce is not entitled to serious consideration, can not be backed by any local need or instances, and is a further indication of the refusal of business to accept the growing principle that workers in industry and trade have human rights which are above the narrow interests of employers."

Piedmont High Defeats Keyser

Keyser, W. Va., Feb. 16.—(Special to the NEWS)—Piedmont high won a hard fought ball game from Keyser here tonight 36 to 28. Keyser held a 13 to 7 lead in the first quarter but a disputed field goal as the half ended put Piedmont in front 16 to 14. Piedmont had no trouble in staying out in front the rest of the game.

Blackburn with 12 points and Trutle with 10 led the scoring.

Tydings Raps Russia In Plea for Finns

Washington, Feb. 16 (AP)—Senator Tydings (D-Md) appealed tonight for funds to aid the Finns in fighting "the murdering, Godless nation of Russia."

In an address prepared for radio delivery, Tydings said the Finns were battling to "save the religion of Almighty God, the homes, the lives of women and children, the free speech, the free press, the liberty, the humanity, the decency, the democracy which is a part of the life of the people of Finland."

Russia, he said, "is the most barbarous, cruel, relentless, remorseless and villainous government in modern times." Since the inception of the present government, he said, Russia has "wallowed in blood and murder, practiced terror and torture."

He spoke in behalf of the "Fighting Funds for Finland," headed by General John F. O'Ryan.

Finns Bomb Railroad

London, Feb. 17. (Saturday)—(AP)—A Reuters (British news agency) report from Helsinki early today said Finnish planes had bombed the railroad connecting Leningrad with the Karelian Isthmus and that several stations were set fire.

Perry Believes Warner System Will Be Dropped

Number of Exponents of Formation Cut by Swan's Resignation

By LAWRENCE PERRY

New York, Feb. 16. (C.N.F.)—With Fred Swan, late of Temple, retiring from responsibilities as a head coach, accepting a line coach job, the number of exponents of the famous Warner double wingback offense is thereby reduced by one. Reduction even of one hurts. For the formation has so fallen into disuse in recent years as to warrant belief that it is not long for this world; not in its entirety at any rate.

Fred Wolf employed it with his North Carolina eleven last year, but as a rule it was reserved by the Tarheels for forward passing, very little for running.

Even Andy Kerr who has stood with Glenn Warner as the most ardent and consistent believer in the double wingback employed it last year as only an occasional element in his offensive plan. None of the leading professional elevens use it and, indeed, if the writer is not at fault, it is not used at all in the National Professional Football League.

It took some years to expose the famous Warner set-up, but when coaches of the country arrived at a solution the maneuver was doomed. It has been and now is strong between the tackles, and if the double wingback team has a powerful line bucker it is good in the middle of the defensive line. Also its merits as a formation from which to launch forward passes are as sound as ever.

Its basic weakness lies in the fact that it is extremely difficult for use in turning the ends. When the offense tries a sweep the defensive ends smash in, the tackles play tighter with the result that the attack is pinched in. As a matter of fact, a five-man line defense handles the double wingback too well to warrant reliance upon it as a stock attacking formation.

Single Wingback Favored

The single wingback in its varied forms with line balanced or unbalanced has displaced not only the Warner system, but the Notre Dame system in its original form as applied by Knute Rockne. This is because of the marked advance recent years have seen in the short side attack. So scientifically, deceptively and powerfully has the weakside assault become that teams using it—as most teams do today—have a two-way offense. Thus the defense must remain equalized. If a developed weakness in the defense is fortified, the attack is able swiftly to strike at spots which remedial measures have left exposed.

As for the Notre Dame system of the days of Rockne, leading proponents of this brand of attack, Elmer Layden, Jimmy Crowley, Clipper Smith and others, have abandoned the scheme of individual blocking as an essential feature. You will find them still using it, hoping for the long touchdown dash—the perfect play; sometimes their hope is justified. But very largely this man-to-man blocking is operated as a switch from the two-on-one plan; the latter is likely to be the stock method of interference rather than the policy of assigning one man to each defensive player.

Incidentally the appointment of Ben Winkleman, former assistant to Tiny Thornhill at Stanford, as head coach of San Jose Teachers, insures the endurance of the double wingback in California. He succeeds Dudley De Groot. And inasmuch as De Grott, also an ardent double wingback man, has gone to Rochester University the East will take Temple's place as holder of the Warner faith. But unless Rochester is going to load up and make a bid for big-time honors the system will be represented only in a minor way here as on the west Coast.

Petersburg Trims Elk Garden 25-19

Petersburg, Feb. 16.—Taking the lead with the opening whistle and riding the top the full distance, Coach "Whitey" Kendall's Petersburg high five defeated Elk Garden 25 to 19 here tonight. The period scores were 9-1, 15-4 and 18-10.

Moomau and Hill shared scoring honors for the winners, each tallying nine markers on three field goals and three fouls. Rawlings was Elk Garden's best with 10 tallies. The lineups:

All Teams Tied In Oakland Church League

Oakland, Feb. 16 — The result of last night's games in the church basketball league brought all four teams into a tie for first place — or last place, a peculiar situation, in which the Catholics defeated the Lutherans and the Episcopals downed the Methodists. All teams have won two games and lost two. The Lutherans have lost both their games to the Catholics while winning from both Episcopals and Methodists. The Catholics have lost games to the Episcopals and Methodists while the Lutherans have wins from both teams.

Last night's games were the opening ones in the second round. Three rounds of games are planned. Next week the Lutherans and Episcopals meet while the Catholics will meet the Methodists.

Battle Royal Is Feature of Elks Club Entertainment

Cumberland Elks entertained 400 Elks and friends Thursday evening at its home on South Center street, with a pig roast buffet dinner, a boxing show, bowling and cards.

A feature of the boxing was a free-for-all battle royal with eight negro scrappers in the ring.

Pete Chamberlain, won a decision over Billy Norwood and Buck Walbert defeated Kid Gordon.

PARADISE IS HERE

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

"Why Natalie! Tell me more about it," exclaimed Mrs. Hayworth.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

CHOLLY HAD been on the air only a week when Pee Wee Tyler, having flown home for a week-end from the private school she attended in New York, saw her picture in the Chicago Globe.

Startled, she read the caption:

"The air waves welcomed this new beauty, Cholly O'Neil, pianist, this week. Miss O'Neil, red-headed, blue-eyed Irish charmer, will sell syrup. Another sure fire bet for television. She hails from Indiana U."

Syrup! That could mean only one thing. The Hayworths were sponsoring her. Furiously, Pee Wee threw the paper away and got up. If Dove had gone so far as to put his red-head on the air on her own program, it looked serious. She had flown home more to see Dove Hayworth than anyone else. She wanted to bring things to an issue.

Mrs. Hayworth was as anxious as the Tylers for her only son and Natalie to marry. The plump dowager positively fawned over her. The Hayworths hadn't the social background of the Tyler clan, but they had a lot more money. In fact, the Tylers were having

Coppers Take Lead after Being Inactive for Months

New York, Feb. 16 (AP)—Under the leadership of coppers and assorted shipbuilding and traction issues, the stock market today put on a last-hour recovery shift that reduced early losses among leaders and put selected favorites up substantially.

While the late bulge aided virtually all departments, it was not sufficient to put the list up as a whole. The Associated Press average of sixty stocks was off .1 of a point at 50.2. Transfers amounted to 684,120 shares against 753,715 yesterday.

Coppers, jogging along in the rear ranks for the past few months, seemed to have been spurred by reports of heavier foreign purchases.

A slight dip in this week's automotive production was undisturbing to the motors.

Rails also inclined to ignore a contra-seasonal drop in last week's freight loadings caused mainly by falling industrial and coal shipments.

Marked up a notch in the Curb were American Cyanamid "B" and Phoenix securities. Turnover of 172,000 shares compared with 173,000 Thursday.

Chicago Grain Prices

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP)—In one of the most hectic ten minute trading periods of recent grain market history wheat prices jumped abruptly almost five cents a bushel today just before the closing bell.

The best explanation of the flurry was that purchasing, which some said originated in the east, inspired by reports of heavy Canadian export business and good sales of U. S. Pacific coast wheat, caught brokers off guard and the pit bare of offerings.

Wheat closed 3-4¾ cents higher than yesterday, May $1.03½-1.04½, July $1.01½-1.02. Corn was unchanged to ⅜ up, May 56½, July 57; oats ½-½ higher; rye 2-2¾ up and lard 2-5 higher.

Garrett County Red Cross Roll Call over Top

Have 389 Members and Cash Receipts of $420--Others To Report

Oakland, Md., Feb. 16 — The announcement of twenty-three additional members to the annual Red Cross roll call from Friendsville this week has sent the quota over the top as far as money is concerned and brings the actual membership to within eleven of the 400 goal originally set at the beginning of the campaign.

Mrs. Paul B. Naylor, roll call chairman, announced that Mrs. E. Greenwals had received 23 memberships and $23.00 from Friendsville residents, making $420.33 in money collected and 389 members.

Mrs. Naylor said Kitzmiller had made no report as yet and that a few more memberships were probably in scattered areas.

Scout Activities

Boy Scout anniversary week closed yesterday with a demonstration in scouting at an assembly program in the local high school. Oakland troop No. 1 had a full week of activities, beginning with rededication service last Thursday evening, a father-son dinner on Friday and church attendance on Sunday.

At the regular court of honor on Monday ten scouts were awarded merit badges. Four scouts were also approved as second class scouts, and one qualified for the rank of Life Scout.

Merit badges were awarded as follows:

Bernard I. Gonder, Jr., farm records and bookkeeping; William Shirer, swimming and handicraft; Charles McIntire, swimming; Harold Ashby, pathfinding; Allen Naylor, woodwork; Fred Sharps, swimming; Robert Sincell, safety, athletics, pathfinding, woodwork; Robert Stevenson, safety; Stephen Coffey, handicraft, swimming; Linn Grant, civics.

Qualifying for second class rank were Charles H. McIntire, Billy Shirer, Fred Sharps, and Stephen Coffey. Linn Grant qualified for the rank of Life Scout, the rank below that of Eagle Scout.

Recognition was given to Bernard I. Gonder, Jr., who has applied for his fifteen-year veterans' badge. Mr. Gonder has been a member of the troop since its organization in November, 1924, and is at present assistant scoutmaster.

Oppose $2.50 Fees

At a regular meeting of the Garrett County Sportsmen's Association a resolution was unanimously adopted opposing the proposal that license fees be made state-wide at $2.50 thus abolishing the county resident license fee.

Members agreed that if more money was the object the sportsmen of Garrett county would not oppose an increase of the present fee, provided a proportionate increase be made throughout the state, including a state-wide license. Adoption of the proposal would result in indiscriminate posting of private land and farms in this county, H. C. Riggs, president, stated.

The meeting proposed that the members of the General Assembly be instructed that the law prohibiting the State Inland Fish and Game Commission from purchasing land in this county be repealed.

Members interested in the propagation of bear proposed that bear be protected in this county for a period of three years in the hope that some of them may make this county a breeding ground. A few have been seen in the county recently, one having been killed in the Swallow Falls section last fall.

Fighting Dandruff

By HELEN FOLLETT

DANDRUFF doesn't care if the scalp and hair are dry or oily; it goes about its obnoxious business just the same. It is a horrid mess. That it is a fungus growth has been definitely determined by medical experts.

Don't try to dislodge it with your finger-nails. If you do, you will be a victim of what is known as habit rash, tiny abrasions that invite infection. Don't disturb it with the fine teeth of the comb. It is all right to use a brush, parting the hair at various places, brushing along the partings.

An oil treatment once a week helps to keep the scalp free of these loathsome scales. Either mineral or olive oil will serve. Heat it, apply with a large medicine dropper, give the scalp a five-minute friction. Spread out fingers and thumbs, do a good job of mauling. If you don't mind getting your hair wet, wrap the head in a heavy towel that has been wrung out of hot water.

Next morning have a shampoo with melted soap. Three latherings, as many rinsings. Use a bath spray and a strong current of water. Dry with warm towels, massage the scalp again. Have the hair dry before using a setting lotion; your wave will endure longer, hair will appear more abundant.

Breathing exercises will put roses in your cheeks, cut down on the cosmetic overhead. You can pluck blushes out of the air easy as pie; they don't cost a cent.

Stand tall, hands on hips. Inhale through the nostrils, throwing out the chest-works while you pull in your tummy works. Fill the lungs down to the last and lowest cells. Exhale through the lips with a whistle, the idea being to expel stagnant air that you've got packed away in your bellows. Five minutes night and morning.

It's good also to make thin girls busty.

Chamber of Commerce is not concerned with the efficient administration of the Wagner act, nor with the protection of victimised Cumberland workers and there is not one of their public acts or statements to support a contrary view.

"I am willing to go further and state that there is no record to my knowledge, where this group has ever proposed or adopted any action which would assure the general wellbeing of the workers and wage earners of Allegany county.

"The Cumberland Chamber of Commerce sent a delegation to Annapolis last year to oppose the payment of a minimum wage law of twenty-five cents an hour to Cumberland workers. The Chamber of Commerce stays silent in the face of statements that Cumberland women are sweated as restaurant help for "wages" as low as $2.50 per week in the center of the city. We have even published the name of such a restaurant operator, but no comment comes from the "representatives" of business.

"The Cumberland Chamber of Commerce says the benefits of the Wagner act should be withdrawn from employes who violate the terms of an agreement, but it keeps quiet on the penalties to be imposed on employers who are guilty.

"For example, there is an agreement between the merchants and the clerks union. Last week, though, female help, used in preparing and conducting a fire sale of shoes were "paid" the "wages" of $1 per day! And, I repeat, no protest comes from the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce.

"It is my opinion that the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce is opposed to any legislation to require collective bargaining. As proof for this statement I refer to their opposition to the passage of a state Labor Relations act at the last session of the Maryland legislature.

"Now, the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce wants an amendment to place certain, substantial standards to which an employer must be engaged in interstate commerce before being subject to the act. In other words the chamber seeks a loophole of escape for as many employes as possible from the need to bargain collectively with their workers!

"I have said that I have not known of any action taken by the chamber in the interests of all the people. Recently the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce set up the Allegany County Tax Research Association. They invited me to serve upon this body. I consulted with those who invited me, but I refused their invitation when I found that they had no plans to demand the City of Cumberland collect the delinquent taxes of the Republic Steel Corporation on its idle tin mill property and that it was further revealed that this same Cumberland Chamber of Commerce was collecting fifty dollars of the Cumberland taxpayers funds as dues to finance its own organization.

"In my opinion, it is time that the public was informed of the negative and reactionary proposals and actions of such a group.

"The real requirements of the Wagner act is to have it strengthened so that it can better serve the workers who it was designed to protect. The employer is already well armed and by proposals such as made by the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, wishes to further weaken his employes who ask only for the rights to organize as the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce has organized and as the national association of commerce has organized and as all big business has organized.

The Cumberland Chamber of Commerce has apparently taken as its slogan that "It's good for business, but too good for workers to organize."

"May I add that the statement as issued today by the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce is not entitled to serious consideration, can not be backed by any local need or instances, and is a further indication of the refusal of business to accept the growing principle that workers in industry and trade have human rights which are above the narrow interests of employers."

Piedmont High Defeats Keyser

Keyser, W. Va., Feb. 16.—(Special to the NEWS)—Piedmont high won a hard fought ball game from Keyser here tonight 36 to 28. Keyser held a 13 to 7 lead in the first quarter but a disputed field goal as the half ended put Piedmont in front 16 to 14. Piedmont had no trouble in staying out in front the rest of the game.

Blackburn with 12 points and Trutle with 10 led the scoring.

Tydings Raps Russia In Plea for Finns

Washington, Feb. 16 (AP)—Senator Tydings (D-Md) appealed tonight for funds to aid the Finns in fighting "the murdering, Godless nation of Russia."

In an address prepared for radio delivery, Tydings said the Finns were battling to "save the religion of Almighty God, the homes, the lives of women and children, the free speech, the free press, the liberty, the humanity, the decency, the democracy which is a part of the life of the people of Finland."

Russia, he said, "is the most barbarous, cruel, relentless, remorseless and villainous government in modern times." Since the inception of the present government, he said, Russia has "wallowed in blood and murder, practiced terror and torture."

He spoke in behalf of the "Fighting Funds for Finland," headed by General John F. O'Ryan.

Perry Believes Warner System Will Be Dropped

By LAWRENCE PERRY

New York, Feb. 16. (C.N.P.)—With Fred Swan, late of Temple, retiring from responsibilities as a head coach, accepting a line coach job, the number of exponents of the famous Warner double wingback offense is thereby reduced by one. Reduction even of one hurts. For the formation has so fallen into disuse in recent years as to warrant belief that it is not long for this world; not in its entirety at any rate.

Fred Wolf employed it with his North Carolina eleven last year, but as a rule it was reserved by the Tarheels for forward passing, very little for running.

Even Andy Kerr who has stood with Glenn Warner as the most ardent and consistent believer in the double wingback employed it last year as only an occasional element in his offensive plan. None of the leading professional elevens use it and, indeed, if the writer is not at fault, it is not used at all in the National Professional Football League.

It took some years to expose the famous Warner set-up, but when coaches of the country arrived at a solution the maneuver was doomed. It has been and now is strong between the tackles, and if the double wingback team has a powerful line bucker it is good in the middle of the defensive line. Also its merits as a formation from which to launch forward passes are as sound as ever.

Its basic weakness lies in the fact that it is extremely difficult for use in turning the ends. When the offense tries a sweep the defensive ends smash in, the tackles play tighter with the result that the attack is pinched in. As a matter of fact, a five-man line defense handles the double wingback too well to warrant reliance upon it as a stock attacking formation.

Single Wingback Favored

The single wingback in its varied forms with line balanced or unbalanced has displaced not only the Warner system, but the Notre Dame system in its original form as applied by Knute Rockne. This is because of the marked advance recent years have seen in the short side attack. So scientifically, deceptively and powerfully has the weakside assault become that teams using it—as most teams do today—have a two-way offense. Thus the defense must remain equalized. If a developed weakness in the defense is fortified, the attack is able swiftly to strike at spots which remedial measures have left exposed.

As for the Notre Dame system of the days of Rockne, leading proponents of this brand of attack, Elmer Layden, Jimmy Crowley, Clipper Smith and others, have abandoned the scheme of individual blocking as an essential feature. You will find them still using it, hoping for the long touchdown dash—the perfect play; sometimes their hope is justified. But very largely this man-to-man blocking is operated as a switch from the two-on-one plan; the latter is likely to be the stock method of interference rather than the policy of assigning one man to each defensive player.

Incidentally the appointment of Ben Winkleman, former assistant to Tiny Thornhill at Stanford, as head coach of San Jose Teachers, insures the endurance of the double wingback in California. He succeeds Dudley De Groot. And inasmuch as De Grott, also an ardent double wingback man, has gone to Rochester University the East will take Temple's place as holder of the Warner faith. But unless Rochester is going to load up and make a bid for big-time honors the system will be represented only in a minor way here as on the west Coast.

All Teams Tied In Oakland Church League

Oakland, Feb. 16 — The result of last night's games in the church basketball league brought all four teams into a tie for first place — or last place, a peculiar situation, in which the Catholics defeated the Lutherans and the Episcopals downed the Methodists. All teams have won two games and lost two. The Lutherans have lost both their games to the Catholics while winning from both Episcopals and Methodists. The Catholics have lost games to the Episcopals and Methodists while the Lutherans have wins from both teams.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

CHOLLY HAD been on the air only a week when Pee Wee Tyler, having flown home for a week-end from the private school she attended in New York, saw her picture in the Chicago Globe.

Startled, she read the caption:

"The air waves welcomed this new beauty, Cholly O'Neil, pianist, this week. Miss O'Neil, red-headed, blue-eyed Irish charmer, will sell syrup. Another sure fire bet for television. She hails from Indiana U."

Syrup! That could mean only one thing. The Hayworths were sponsoring her. Furiously, Pee Wee threw the paper away and got up. If Dove had gone so far as to put his red-head on the air on her own program, it looked serious. She had flown home more to see Dove Hayworth than anyone else. She wanted to bring things to an issue.

Mrs. Hayworth was as anxious as the Tylers for her only son and Natalie to marry. The plump dowager positively fawned over her. The Hayworths hadn't the social background of the Tyler clan, but they had a lot more money. In fact, the Tylers were having a terrific struggle to keep up their end socially.

It would be absolutely necessary for Natalie to marry wealth or they would be penniless in a few years. That had been made very clear to

Training Child In Conversation Is Important

Parents Should Teach Child To Share Responsibilities

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

In the United States we are growing conservation-conscious. What meaning has this for our family and children?

Interest in the conservation of soil ,forest, stream, wild life and other natural resources involves the problems of food supply and human health, including mental health. Then there arises the problem of social responsibility: "Am I my brother's keeper?"

At the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, at Columbus, there was a round-table on "Education for Conservation." This problem of social responsibility kept coming up, and your reporter insisted that the child and his family are the most important items in our natural resources—health, physical, mental, moral (in the widest sense). To this there seemed to be agreement and an understanding that a similar round-table next year would embrace this field.

Responsibility in Family

Since that meeting I have been thinking of this problem of social responsibility in relation to responsibility of the child in the family: In the negative sense, that he learn to keep from doing what will infringe upon the rights and possessions of other; in the positive sense, that he further the welfare and happiness of others.

It is human conservation that we talk about when we consider home citizenship in its widest sense. How can we hope to cultivate a wholesome attitude toward those natural resources not immediately in the child's environment until we can lead him to a similar attitude toward the public buildings, parks and other spaces which belong to the community in which he lives? And how can we cultivate a wholesome attitude in the child toward such possessions of the public until he learns at home and in his neighborhood to respect the rights and possessions of others there?

Personal Sacrifices

How can we hope to induce this child, as he grows up, to choose to make personal sacrifices for the larger social good, in terms of helping to conserve the natural resources, until he has learned to make personal sacrifices in his own environment?

In the home we parents have the problem of cultivating in the growing child, from babyhood, some basic inhibitions so as to conserve his life and the lives of others; also the possessions of others. In addition, we have the problem of cultivating in him a desire to co-operate with others in his home, and to share in the duties and responsibilities for the common good of the family. It means that the growing child will need constantly to learn not to do some thing he would not like to do.

To this end we parents shall try to make painful what we never want the child to do and pleasant what we want him always to do. If we are to get far in education for conservation of our natural resources, material or human, we will have to begin at the crib.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. My sister says she is glad her 19-year-old boy has shown no interest in girls, that since he is always home, they need have no worries about him. I tell her she has more reasons to worry because he is always home and avoids the girls. Who is right?

A. Probably you are. At the present rate, this lad faces painful loneliness and feelings of inferiorty later, if not now. Normally, the adolescent likes to mingle frequently with a number of boys and girls. That lad who begins going with girls usually late may feel so timid about it as to "fall hard" for some one his inferior. The same holds true with girls, as a rule.

Q. We say in the United States of the bride or groom who "has the edge" in respect to education, money, or social standing that "He married well." Is it true?

A. The one who seems to gain "the edge" in marriage usually loses it, being destined thereafter, almost surley, to feel inferior and to act defensively.

Q. What is a good way to train a child to be disobedient?

A. Make many commands and repeat them often.

The Good Earth In Medicine Is Discussed

Kaolin Has Been Part of Physician's Armory for Centuries

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

"The earth with the seal"—terra sigillata— it was called in the old days because it was thought to be so valuable that its genuineness was guaranteed.

Kaolin we call it now. It is a common constituent of many soils and is classified as a silicious earth. It is found in many rich deposits in the U. S. and the Orient. It is used in pottery but has been a part of the physician's armory for many centuries. It has a soothing and healing action on the intestines and has been used for many different kinds of interstinal complaints, from Asiatic cholera to our own colitis.

Its action is twofold on the inflamed intestine. It mechanically takes up large numbers of bacteria and carries them off, dead or alive; second, it takes up poisons by absorption.

Similar Product

It is best given with a similar product, aluminum hydroxide, because kaolin alone may settle out of suspencion and form a hard, clay-like mass. Aluminum hydroxide has greater colloidal activity than kaolin and settles out of suspension less readily. The two together form a light viscid jell .

This jell can be used in a great many disease conditions. On account of its soothing properties it is used to paint the throat in tonsilitis and diphtheria. When the earthy mass comes away, great quantities of bacteria come with it.

It has a reversible chemical reaction and can act as a weak acid or a weak base. This, along with its astringent action, accounts for its favorable action in cases of ulcer of the stomach.

Useful in Colitis

In colitis, and particularly colitis where ulceration has occurred, it finds its greatest field of usefulness. It reduces pain and colic and, by carrying off germs and poisons, aids in building up the general health. One patient gained forty pounds of weight within six weeks after the treatment was started. Mucous formation is greatly reduced.

Other treatment is carried out at the same time with these administrations. In ordinary colitis it is not so necessary, but in the ulcerative type bed rest is enforced. A bland but highly-nutritious diet, consisting of pureed vegetables and ground meat, eggs and cream, must be eaten for some time. Sedatives are often necessary.

LENTEN REDUCING DIET FOR SUNDAY

Breakfast: Fruit in season, oatmeal with cream, small helping OR eggs, bacon and toast; coffee with sugar and cream.

Dinner: Clear soup, average helping any meat, vegetables; one slice bread and butter; mixed salad, one dessert-spoonful of French dressing, small helping any dessert, coffee or tea.

Supper: Cold meat, one slice; Stewed tomatoes or vegetable (from the can); cold dessert, coffee or tea.

M. L.: "I have been suffering from duodenal ulcer for the past two years. Is ulcer curable by being injected with serum? Will it ever bother me again, if cured?"

Answer—Serum is not a recognized treatment for ulcer. Ulcer is very likely to return, no matter how thoroughly it is apparently cured.

Woman, 82, Granted Divorce in Jersey

Elizabeth, N. J., Feb. 16 (AP)—Mrs. Emma Dally Osborn, 82, of Woodbridge, mother of a 62-year-old son by a former marriage, has been granted a divorce on grounds of cruelty from her 62-year-old second husband.

She was believed to be one of the oldest persons ever to receive a New Jersey divorce.

Mrs. Osborn told Advisory Master Dougal Herr that among other things Dr. Harry C. Osborn criticized her for doing things for the son, Franklyn Dally Jr., during the twenty-seven years of their marriage.

McCormick Charges New Dealers Seek Dictatorship in U. S.

Jackson, Mich., Feb. 16. (AP)—Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of the Chicago Tribune, charged here that "the New Deal has been a persistent effort to overthrow our political and economic systems and substitute dictatorship and socialism."

He stated, in a prepared address before the Lincoln Club, that he saw a parallel between certain events in Russia and some developments in the United States during the administration of President Roosevelt.

Col. McCormick recalled C.I.O. strikes in Michigan, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Minnesota and asked: "Has it occurred to you why the abortive C.I.O. revolution was started in Michigan?" he added:

"The Bolshevist revolution of 1917 came out of the factories of Vigorg xxx and out of the marine centers at Kronkstadt, in the Baltic provinces, and in Finland. Without the factory workers and sailors, Lenin would have failed. These plants were centralized in Viborg just as your plants are centralized in Detroit, Flint and Pontiac."

The publisher contended that "the department of labor has put our merchant fleet in the hands of a Communist union."

Barkhead Says FDR Will Back Farm Parity

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 16 (AP)—Senator John H. Bankhead (D-Ala) quoted President Roosevelt here as having given his "assurance" that "at an appropriate time before Congress adjourns" he will favor passage of an appropriation to cover farm parity payments.

Bankhead's statement was in a letter to the Montgomery Advertiser, and said the senator and the president had an "agreement" that passage of a tax bill would not be made "a condition precedent" to the executive's support of the parity measure.

Training Child In Conversation Is Important

Parents Should Teach Child To Share Responsibilities

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

In the United States we are growing conservation-conscious. What meaning has this for our family and children?

Interest in the conservation of soil ,forest, stream, wild life and other natural resources involves the problems of food supply and human health, including mental health. Then there arises the problem of social responsibility: "Am I my brother's keeper?"

At the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, at Columbus, there was a round-table on "Education for Conservation." This problem of social responsibility kept coming up, and your reporter insisted that the child and his family are the most important items in our natural resources—health, physical, mental, moral (in the widest sense). To this there seemed to be agreement and an understanding that a similar round-table next year would embrace this field.

Responsibility in Family

Since that meeting I have been thinking of this problem of social responsibility in relation to responsibility of the child in the family: In the negative sense, that he learn to keep from doing what will infringe upon the rights and possessions of other; in the positive sense, that he further the welfare and happiness of others.

It is human conservation that we talk about when we consider home citizenship in its widest sense. How can we hope to cultivate a wholesome attitude toward those natural resources not immediately in the child's environment until we can lead him to a similar attitude toward the public buildings, parks and other spaces which belong to the community in which he lives? And how can we cultivate a wholesome attitude in the child toward such possessions of the public until he learns at home and in his neighborhood to respect the rights and possessions of others there?

Personal Sacrifices

How can we hope to induce this child, as he grows up, to choose to make personal sacrifices for the larger social good, in terms of helping to conserve the natural resources, until he has learned to make personal sacrifices in his own environment?

In the home we parents have the problem of cultivating in the growing child, from babyhood, some basic inhibitions so as to conserve his life and the lives of others; also the possessions of others. In addition, we have the problem of cultivating in him a desire to co-operate with others in his home, and to share in the duties and responsibilities for the common good of the family. It means that the growing child will need constantly to learn not to do some thing he would not like to do.

To this end we parents shall try to make painful what we never want the child to do and pleasant what we want him always to do. If we are to get far in education for conservation of our natural resources, material or human, we will have to begin at the crib.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. My sister says she is glad her 19-year-old boy has shown no interest in girls, that since he is always home, they need have no worries about him. I tell her she has more reasons to worry because he is always home and avoids the girls. Who is right?

A. Probably you are. At the present rate, this lad faces painful loneliness and feelings of inferiorty later, if not now. Normally, the adolescent likes to mingle frequently with a number of boys and girls. That lad who begins going with girls usually late may feel so timid about it as to "fall hard" for some one his inferior. The same holds true with girls, as a rule.

Q. We say in the United States of the bride or groom who "has the edge" in respect to education, money, or social standing that "He married well." Is it true?

A. The one who seems to gain "the edge" in marriage usually loses it, being destined thereafter, almost surley, to feel inferior and to act defensively.

Q. What is a good way to train a child to be disobedient?

A. Make many commands and repeat them often.

The Good Earth In Medicine Is Discussed

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

"The earth with the seal"—terra sigillata— it was called in the old days because it was thought to be so valuable that its genuineness was guaranteed.

Kaolin we call it now. It is a common constituent of many soils and is classified as a silicious earth. It is found in many rich deposits in the U. S. and the Orient. It is used in pottery but has been a part of the physician's armory for many centuries. It has a soothing and healing action on the intestines and has been used for many different kinds of interstinal complaints, from Asiatic cholera to our own colitis.

Its action is twofold on the inflamed intestine. It mechanically takes up large numbers of bacteria and carries them off, dead or alive; second, it takes up poisons by absorption.

Similar Product

It is best given with a similar product, aluminum hydroxide, because kaolin alone may settle out of suspencion and form a hard, clay-like mass. Aluminum hydroxide has greater colloidal activity than kaolin and settles out of suspension less readily. The two together form a light viscid jell .

This jell can be used in a great many disease conditions. On account of its soothing properties it is used to paint the throat in tonsilitis and diphtheria. When the earthy mass comes away, great quantities of bacteria come with it.

It has a reversible chemical reaction and can act as a weak acid or a weak base. This, along with its astringent action, accounts for its favorable action in cases of ulcer of the stomach.

Useful in Colitis

In colitis, and particularly colitis where ulceration has occurred, it finds its greatest field of usefulness. It reduces pain and colic and, by carrying off germs and poisons, aids in building up the general health. One patient gained forty pounds of weight within six weeks after the treatment was started. Mucous formation is greatly reduced.

Other treatment is carried out at the same time with these administrations. In ordinary colitis it is not so necessary, but in the ulcerative type bed rest is enforced. A bland but highly-nutritious diet, consisting of pureed vegetables and ground meat, eggs and cream, must be eaten for some time. Sedatives are often necessary.

Questions and Answers

M. L.: "I have been suffering from duodenal ulcer for the past two years. Is ulcer curable by being injected with serum? Will it ever bother me again, if cured?"

Answer—Serum is not a recognized treatment for ulcer. Ulcer is very likely to return, no matter how thoroughly it is apparently cured.

Woman, 82, Granted Divorce in Jersey

Elizabeth, N. J., Feb. 16 (AP)—Mrs. Emma Dally Osborn, 82, of Woodbridge, mother of a 62-year-old son by a former marriage, has been granted a divorce on grounds of cruelty from her 62-year-old second husband.

She was believed to be one of the oldest persons ever to receive a New Jersey divorce.

Mrs. Osborn told Advisory Master Dougal Herr that among other things Dr. Harry C. Osborn criticized her for doing things for the son, Franklyn Dally Jr., during the twenty-seven years of their marriage.

McCormick Charges New Dealers Seek Dictatorship in U. S.

Jackson, Mich., Feb. 16. (AP)—Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of the Chicago Tribune, charged here that "the New Deal has been a persistent effort to overthrow our political and economic systems and substitute distatorship and socialism."

He stated, in a prepared address before the Lincoln Club, that he saw a parallel between certain events in Russia and some developments in the United States during the administration of President Roosevelt.

Col. McCormick recalled C.I.O. strikes in Michigan, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Minnesota and asked: "Has it occurred to you why the abortive C.I.O. revolution was started in Michigan?" he added:

"The Bolshevist revolution of 1917 came out of the factories of Vigorg xxx and out of the marine centers at Kronkstadt, in the Baltic provinces, and in Finland. Without the factory workers and sailors, Lenin would have failed. These plants were centralized in Viborg just as your plants are centralized in Detroit, Flint and Pontiac."

The publisher contended that "the department of labor has put our merchant fleet in the hands of a Communist union."

Barkhead Says FDR Will Back Farm Parity

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 16 (AP)—Senator John H. Bankhead (D-Ala) quoted President Roosevelt here as having given his "assurance" that "at an appropriate time before Congress adjourns" he will favor passage of an appropriation to cover farm parity payments.

Bankhead's statement was in a letter to the Montgomery Advertiser, and said the senator and the president had an "agreement" that passage of a tax bill would not be made "a condition precedent" to the executive's support of the parity measure.

West Virginia Meets Colonials Here Tonight

Washington, D. C. Team Is Favored To Beat W.V.U.

Mountaineers Appear Ready To Give Colonials Stiff Battle

College basketball will return to Cumberland again tonight in what promises to be as thrilling a show as any ever seen on a local basketball floor.

George Washington University of Washington, D. C., and West Virginia University of Morgantown, W. Va., will clash on Fort Hill high school's spacious gym at 9 o'clock, and unless the dope bucket is kicked sky-high the fans are in for a real treat.

The Colonials from Washington are slight favorites due to the fine record Bill Reinhard's aggregation has made this season. However, the West Virginians coached by Richard "Dyke" Raese, former Davis High mentor appear to be definitely improving in each game and the rangy Mountaineers are set to continue their winning streak.

West Virginia scored a 40 to 38 victory over Georgetown at Washington, Monday night and followed this up with a decisive 44-32 walloping of Washington and Jefferson at Morgantown Thursday night. It was only the second defeat of the year for W & J. The Mountaineers have won nine games and lost four.

Accent On Height

The accent will be on height in tomorrow's game . . . Jimmy Ruch, West Virginia's sophomore sharpshooter who has tallied 138 points to top the Mountaineers, stands six-two and weighs 180 pounds . . . The other half of Raese's sophomore scoring combination, Rudy Baric, now starting at center after playing guard in early games, towers six-three and weighs 185 pounds. . . .He has bagged 123 markers . . . Most of the other starts of both teams are six-footers or taller.

The Mountaineers and Colonials have met only one opponent in common this season, Georgetown, and strangely enough, both games were played on the Tech High floor in Washington . . .G. W. defeated the Hoyas' there last month 49-41, and West Virginia scored this week's victory on the same boards . . .But the fact that Tech gym is also the home floor of G. W. must be taken into consideration in any comparative score estimate of the rivals.

Local Referees Approved

Three local referees will handle the main event and the Allegany High-West Virginia frosh preliminary tomorrow . . .W. V. U. and G. W. coaches have approved Johnny Long and Van Roby for the varsity game, while Charles "Chick" Imes will referee the opening number

Practically all of the nine Mountaineer cagers to see service in last year's 29-37 overtime battle here are on Raese's present squad — only Harry Lothes being lost by graduation, but the lone letterman certain to start is Guard Sammy Mandich . . .Co-Captains Brooks and Steve Chepko, the scrappy little forward, have lost their starting jobs to sophomores.

Captain George "Jug" Garber is the lone G. W. tosser to play here last winter still in the G. W. fold, but four other members of the present squad are lettermen . . Coach "Bill" Reinhart has come up with another winning team, the Colonial record showing 12 wins in 15 starts, despite the loss of Bob Faris, Jack Butterworth, Sid Silkowitz and other first-stringers.

Neither Reinhart nor Raese is the "worry wart" type of coach . . . Both sit on the bench with more or less complacency regardless of the score . . . Reinhart hails from the "Show Me" state of Missouri, being a native of Osborne, but starred and coached at the University of Oregon . . . He played for Oregon agafnst Harvard in the Rose Bowl game of 1920 . . . Reinhart coached at Oregon until 1935, developing top stars in football, basketball and baseball—Joe Gordon of the Yankees played under him, and has continued to produce outstanding teams in both football and basketball at G. W. . . . "Tuffy" Leemans, New York Giant grid star, is one of his products . . . His five-year basketball record at G. W. shows 70 victories and only 22 defeats . . . Eight of the losses came during the 1938-39 campaign.

Contrasting Defenses

The rivals will use contrasting defenses, West Virginia specializing in the zone and G.W. in the man-for-man . . . George Washington usually stresses the fast break on the attask, but has won several games by accurate bombing from the backcourt . . . West Virginia also tries to work the ball into the basket for close shots . . . So far Coach Raese has failed to uncover a long-shot artist of Lothes' talent, but if the Mountaineers flash the speed to set-up plays against George Washington's man-for-man guarding they won't have to worry on that score.

It promises to be a great battle . . . The preliminary game should also produce plenty of thrills for the fans of this section.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Feb. 16, (AP) — Word from the West to the effect that Max Baer is toughening himself by digging up tree stumps with the hope that some promoter will reciprocate by digging up Max Baer brings to mind the strange case of Lou Nova.

Baer's statement on his thirty-first birthday, pointing out that he is a new Max Baer, ready to relieve Joe Louis of his title, brings Nova into the picture. It was just a little less than a year ago that Max breezed into town for a bout with Nova, telling one and all he was a new Max Baer, and it turned out the only thing new about him was a haircut.

Anyway, a year ago Lou Nova, next to Louis himself, was the most discussed heavyweight in the business, the Sir Galahad whose goal was the championship. He had come East on short notice in November, 1938, to sub for Bob Pastor in a bout with Gunnar Barlund after Pastor had whacked a piece out of his bike leg with an axe.

Nova beat Barlund, a tough cookie, and seemed to be on his way.

We saw him first about a year ago, a big, rugged, rather bashful youth with broad face, deep-set eyes, high cheek-bones and a will of his own. In that workout he seemed to have one major fault, a fault he never could correct. His feet never seemed to find out about his general plans until too late.

With him was quiet, slim, gentle Ray Carlen, almost too darned nice and above-board to be a fight manager, but with the courage to stand up on his hind legs and tell Gene Tunney to go hoe his own cabbages when Gene suggested that Nova was being hurried to a Louis slaughter too quickly.

Nova next defeated Tommy Farr in fifteen rounds, and the fact he had Farr in more trouble than did Louis added to the young California's prestige, although those dull-witted feet still brought a question to the minds of the ring wise.

We next saw Nova at that fantastic camp up the Hudson, where amid a jungle atmosphere he brooded over Yogi philosophy as he prepared to meet Baer.

He beat Baer and moved one step nearer his goal.

Success brought a swagger and cockiness to the likable kid. His temerity vanished.

That cockiness might have had something to do with his undoing. He was matched with Galento for a Philadelphia fight. The match wasn't promising. Here was a clean-living, youthful Giant pitted against a comic, globular figure whose road work consisted of running over his accounts and running down Joe Louis.

But Galento won, and looking back on Nova's exhibition of that night it seems that he was a slow, clumsy old man in a mental fog.

We saw him in his dressing room afterward, a pathetic figure trying to jest away heartbreak.

That was the last we saw of him. He went West and news trickled back that he was a very sick man, that he never would fight again, that the fine physique had become gaunt.

Whether he fights again is his own business, but if he does he'll have the long, rocky trail to climb all over again. He was so near the top, and in one brief hour dropped to the bottom again.

He's a nice kind and everyone wishes him well, and that goes double for Ray Carlen, the gentleman whose hopes also went tumbling in that tragic Philadelphia story.

Allegany Trims Beall 51 to 32 Before 1100 Fans

Campers Ran Up 20 to 5 Lead in First Quarter and Won Easily

Before a crowd of nearly 1,100 fans Allegany high school downed the scrappy Beall high quint of Frostburg by the score of 51 to 32, in the final of a three game affair here last night.

The Campers jumped into the lead at the sound of the opening whistle and were never headed. Gaffney opened the scoring with two goals and was quickly followed by his team mates Bell and Mont with tallies from the field that netted the Campers a 10 to 0 lead, Mont collected from the chairty line while Sherman counted from the field to bolster the Campers lead to a thirteen point margin. Brode, lanky center for Beall took matters into his own hands and collected a field goal only to be set back by Mont, Bell and Sherman, Burkett made a free toss and Brode tallied his second goal from scrimmage as the period ended with the visitors on the short end of count 20-5.

Subs See Action

Coach Bowers sent a new team in as play resumed, Sharrett and Athey carrying the brunt of the attack by three points between them, Prichard made good at the foul line to make it 23-6. Winters scored from the field for the Campers as the visitors took to a small scoring spurt to grab four points contributed by A. Harvey and Prichard then Allegany took their turn as Sharrett tallied.

With the regulars back in the Campers began to click with goals by Mont and See, as the second half opened, Gaffney and Brode gave an exhibition of hot tempers and the former was banished from the game by referee Fearer, the Allegany rooting section took to their high horse and displayed the poorest kind of sportsmanship by booing for several minutes before Fearer, who was very patient called a technical foul on the crowd, from that time on every decision of Frearers was booed, which didn't do the Campers any credit of fair play. Brode tallied three points amid the riff and was closely followed with goals by Prichard and Harvey to bring the count to 31-18. Bell counted on a set shot and Sherman followed up with two from the field. Harvey looped a goal as the session ended with the Campers holding a seventeen point margin 37-20.

Bell High Scorer

Lou Bell opened the last period with two lightning goals as Brode counted for the visitors with two points. Bell scored from the field his last and seventh tally of the evening. Harvey and Brode picked up five points between them as Athey and Winters, subs, each collected a basket. Grenya, also a sub, scored to make the count 49 to 27. Burkett tallied a goal and free throw for the visitors as Prichard made good a free throw. Wilson garnered a basket as the game ended 51 to 32.

Bell was high man for the Campers with fourteen points, Sherman and Mont being runnerups with seven tallies apiece. Brode was the loud noise for Beall with eight points. The Allegany girls, led by

Cambridge Accepts Central's Challenge

Lonaconing, Feb. 16 (Special to The News)—Cambridge high school has accepted the challenge of Central high's girls team for a state championship game to be played here.

Principal Arthur F. Smith, announced today that he had received a letter from W. Emmett Andrews, principal of Cambridge high accepting the challenge.

The game will be played here Saturday, March 2. Both Cambridge and Central are undefeated this season. Cambridge defeated Central at Cambridge last year 22 to 16 for the championship.

LaSalle Cagers Sweep Series With Gallitzin

Joe Nolan Hero as North Enders Score 28-26 Extra-Period Win

Gallitzin, Pa., Feb. 16 — LaSalle High cagers of Cumberland (Md.) swept their two-game series with Gallitzin high here tonight by turning back the locals 28-26 in an extra-period battle. Joe Nolan, LaSalle forward, was the hero of the battle, dropping in a pair of fouls in the overtime session after the regular game had ended in a 26-26 deadlock.

LaSalle jumped away to a 14-7 lead at the end of the opening stanza and played the losers on even terms in the second round which ended with LaSalle on top 21-14. However, the scrappy Marylanders were outscored in the third period six to three which closed with the home crew four markers behind at 24-20.

In the fourth semester the Gallitzin crew caught the Marylanders at 24-all and the score was knotted several times after that. Coach Art Slocum of the LaSalle outfit moved his star pivot man — Ted Rowan — to the forward post and inserted Ed McGraw at the center position.

"Lefty" Smith and Rowan paced the winners with 14 points, the former tallying eight on four baskets and the latter six on one less. Mc Greary was Gallitzin's whole show with 15 markers. The lineups:

Fort Hill Drops Second Game to Bulldogs, 30-20

Sentinels Trail over Full Route in C.V.A.L. Tilt at Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 16—Fort Hill cagers of Cumberland, Md., defending champions of the Cumberland Valley Athletic League, dropped their second loop game of the season to the Martinsburg Bulldogs here tonight. The score was 30-20. The Bulldogs defeated the Sentinels on their own floor earlier in the season, 23-22.

The Cumberlanders were on the short end of the score throughout and were seven minutes getting their first points, Junior Rice tallying a twin pointer to close the first period with the Bulldogs holding a 9-2 lead. The winners outscored the Sentinels in the second round, the score reading 18-8 at the half, but the invaders staged a rally in the next chapter which brought them within seven points of the winners, 22-15 as the quarter ended.

Laidlow and Edmonds, guard and forward, paced the Martinsburg team with 17 points between them. Each dumped eight buckets with the former adding a foul to his total. Rice and Carnell, were the losers' best with 15 markers. Rice scored four doubledeckers for eight points while Carnell converted five fouls out of seven chances in addition to a basket. The lineups:

FORT HILL	G	FG	Pts.
Carnell f	1	5-7	7
Rice f	4	0-0	8

Proceeds from Contest Will Go to Finnish Relief Fund

The first sport event to be held in Cumberland for the benefit of the Finnish relief fund—the clash Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock on the SS. Peter and Paul School court between the Cumberland Dragons and Kaplon Clothiers—will find the Dragons, outstanding amateur club of the district last season, seeking revenge for a setback at the hands of the Clothiers earlier this year.

Not only will the teams be trying to demonstrate to local fans the high calibre of amateur basketball as played in this section but will also be battling for top place in the city amateur championship race.

In winning 11 of 13 battles this season, the Dragons have averaged 46 points per game and their opponents 29.5.. Victories have been scored over the Homewood Hurricanes 45-36, Hagerstown Y. M. C. A. 30-24, Windber Whalley Motors 67-34, Overholt Distillers of Connellsville, Pa., 56-31, Garrett and Zilch 68-29, Crane Clothiers 45-34 and 34-24, Meyersdale Ex-High 79-23, Bantam Press Club of Washington, D. C., 50-21, Davis Warriors 41-27 and the College All-Stars 33-31.

The defeats were administered by Kaplon's Clothiers 38-29 and Connellsville 32-22 but needed reserve strength was acquired this week with the signing of Jimmy Stakem, former LaSalle and Villanova star, and Frank Driver.

After bowing in their first start of the season to Candy Kitchen, the Clothiers registered 11 straight victories. In the preliminary clash at 1:45, Candy Kitchen will meet the Keyser Red Rock Colas, who have a good record after getting away to a late start.

State Teachers Win on Forfeit

Alderson-Broaddus Team Leaves Floor after Long Calls Technical

Frostburg, Feb. 16. —(Special to the NEWS) — Frostburg State Teachers College basketers were awarded a forfeit over the Alderson-Broaddus quint here tonight after the Baptists had held the upper hand most of the way and then walked off the floor.

With three minutes left to play in the game, and the visitors leading 57-53, Referee Johnny Long, Cumberland, awarded the Teachers the victory after the Alderson-Broaddus outfit pulled their walkout. The immediate cause was a technical foul, called by Long on the visitors' star forward, Griffith, who refused to give the ball to the referee after he had caleld a jump ball, and walked off the floor.

The Frostburgers waited five minutes for the visitor to come back on the court and then Long called the forfeit.

The locals were ahead 33-32 at the half and managed to hold it for about five minutes, when the West Virginians spurted and at one point held a nine-point advantage. Griffith was high point-getter for the losers with eleven field goals and eight of ten fouls for thirty points, while Rice led the winners with nineteen points.

Allegany Will Meet WVU Frosh Tonight at 7:30

Little Mountaineers Have Won Seven out of Nine Games

Allegany high school will meet the West Virginia Freshman basketball club at Fort Hill high school gym tonight at 7:30 in the preliminary to the West Virginia-George Washington college game, in what promises to be a hard-fought, interesting contest.

The "Little Mountaineers" will be favored to turn back Allegany, but followers of the Camper aggregation are confident the visitors will be given a tough fight by Walter L. "Bill" Bowers team.

Albie Colebank, who has been coaching the WVU Frosh cagers for the past few seasons has come up with another fine team. Colebank's team won seven straight games before losing to the Scottdale, Pa., Overholts last Saturday at Scottdale 52 to 42. Thursday night the W. & J. Freshman cagers defeated them in a thrilling 49 to 45 game.

Colebank has a rangy team averaging around six feet and weighing around 170 pounds. The tallest player is Hess, six feet, one inch and the heavies is Fryer who tips the scales at 200 pounds.

Several former scholastic stars are members of the Freshman squad, including Bill Hess, all-state at Elkins who played with the W. & J. Freshmen last season; Walter "Lefty" Rollins from Ceredo-Kenova; Charles Findley, all-District of Columbia center last year and "Scotty" Hamilton, all-state selection from Grafton.

Hamilton, a fine passer and excellent shot is ill and will not play here. He was unable to play in the last two games and the team was weakened considerably.

Coach Bowers will use his regular starting lineup against the "Little Mountaineers" and Mont, Gaffney, See, Bell and Sherman are expected to give the West Virginians a real struggle.

Probable starting lineups:

Pos.	WVU Freshmen	Allegany High
B.	Hess	Mont
F.	Rollins	See
C.	Fryer	Gaffney
G.	Kesling	Bell
G.	Dollinger	Sherman

West Virginia Meets Colonials Here Tonight

Washington, D. C. Team Is Favored To Beat W.V.U.

Mountaineers Appear Ready To Give Colonials Stiff Battle

College basketball will return to Cumberland again tonight in what promises to be as thrilling a show as any ever seen on a local basketball floor.

George Washington University of Washington, D. C., and West Virginia University of Morgantown, W. Va., will clash on Fort Hill high school's spacious gym at 9 o'clock, and unless the dope bucket is kicked sky-high the fans are in for a real treat.

The Colonials from Washington are slight favorites due to the fine record Bill Reinhard's aggregation has made this season. However, the West Virginians coached by Richard "Dyke" Raese, former Davis High mentor appear to be definitely improving in each game and the rangy Mountaineers are set to continue their winning streak.

West Virginia scored a 40 to 38 victory over Georgetown at Washington, Monday night and followed this up with a decisive 44-32 walloping of Washington and Jefferson at Morgantown Thursday night. It was only the second defeat of the year for W & J. The Mountaineers have won nine games and lost four.

Accent On Height

The accent will be on height in tomorrow's game . . . Jimmy Ruch, West Virginia's sophomore sharpshooter who has tallied 138 points to top the Mountaineers, stands six-two and weighs 180 pounds . . . The other half of Raese's sophomore scoring combination, Rudy Baric, now starting at center after playing guard in early games, towers six-three and weighs 185 pounds . . . He has bagged 123 markers . . . Most of the other starts of both teams are six-footers or taller.

The Mountaineers and Colonials have met only one opponent in common this season, Georgetown, and strangely enough, both games were played on the Tech High floor in Washington . . . G. W. defeated the Hoyas' there last month 49-41, and West Virginia scored this week's victory on the same boards . . . But the fact that Tech gym is also the home floor of G. W. must be taken into consideration in any comparative score estimate of the rivals.

Local Referees Approved

Three local referees will handle the main event and the Allegany High-West Virginia frosh preliminary tomorrow . . . W. V. U. and G. W. coaches have approved Johnny Long and Van Roby for the varsity game, while Charles "Chick" Imes will referee the opening number

Practically all of the nine Mountaineer cagers to see service in last year's 29-37 overtime battle here are on Raese's present squad — only Harry Lothes being lost by graduation, but the lone letterman certain to start is Guard Sammy Mandich . . . Co-Captains Brooks and Steve Chepko, the scrappy little forward, have lost their starting jobs to sophomores.

Captain George "Jug" Garber is the lone G. W. tosser to play here last winter still in the G. W. fold, but four other members of the present squad are lettermen . . . Coach "Bill" Reinhart has come up with another winning team, the Colonial record showing 12 wins in 15 starts, despite the loss of Bob Paris, Jack Butterworth, Sid Silkowitz and other first-stringers.

Neither Reinhart nor Raese is the "worry wart" type of coach . . . Both sit on the bench with more or less complacency regardless of the score . . . Reinhart hails from the "Show Me" state of Missouri, being a native of Osborne, but starred and coached at the University of Oregon . . . He played for Oregon agafnst Harvard in the Rose Bowl game of 1920 . . . Reinhart coached at Oregon until 1935, developing top stars in football, basketball and baseball—Joe Gordon of the Yankees played under him, and has continued to produce outstanding teams in both football and basketball at G. W. . . . "Tuffy" Leemans, New York Giant grid star, is one of his products . . . His five-year basketball record at G. W. shows 70 victories and only 22 defeats . . . Eight of the losses came during the 1938-39 campaign.

Contrasting Defenses

The rivals will use contrasting defenses, West Virginia specializing in the zone and G.W. in the man-for-man . . . George Washington usually stresses the fast break on the attask, but has won several games by accurate bombing from the backcourt . . . West Virginia also tries to work the ball into the basket for close shots . . . So far Coach Raese has failed to uncover a long-shot artist of Lothes' talent, but if the Mountaineers flash the speed to set-up plays against George Washington's man-for-man guarding they won't have to worry on that score. It promises to be a great battle . . . The preliminary game should also produce plenty of thrills for the fans of this section.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Feb. 16, (AP) — Word from the West to the effect that Max Baer is toughening himself by digging up tree stumps with the hope that some promoter will reciprocate by digging up Max Baer brings to mind the strange case of Lou Nova.

Baer's statement on his thirty-first birthday, pointing out that he is a new Max Baer, ready to relieve Joe Louis of his title, brings Nova into the picture. It was just a little less than a year ago that Max breezed into town for a bout with Nova, telling one and all he was a new Max Baer, and it turned out the only thing new about him was a haircut.

Anyway, a year ago Lou Nova, next to Louis himself, was the most discussed heavyweight in the business, the Sir Galahad whose goal was the championship. He had come East on short notice in November, 1938, to sub for Bob Pastor in a bout with Gunnar Barlund after Pastor had whacked a piece out of his bike leg with an axe.

Nova beat Barlund, a tough cookie, and seemed to be on his way.

We saw him first about a year ago, a big, rugged, rather bashful youth with broad face, deep-set eyes, high cheek-bones and a will of his own. In that workout he seemed to have one major fault, a fault he never could correct. His feet never seemed to find out about his general plans until too late.

With him was quiet, slim, gentle Ray Carlen, almost too darned nice and above-board to be a fight manager, but with the courage to stand up on his hind legs and tell Gene Tunney to go hoe his own cabbages when Gene suggested that Nova was being hurried to a Louis slaughter too quickly.

Nova next defeated Tommy Farr in fifteen rounds, and the fact he had Farr in more trouble than did Louis added to the young California's prestige, although those dull-witted feet still brought a question to the minds of the ring wise.

We next saw Nova at that fantastic camp up the Hudson, where amid a jungle atmosphere he brooded over Yogi philosophy as he prepared to meet Baer.

He beat Baer and moved one step nearer his goal.

Success brought a swagger and cockiness to the likable kid. His temerity vanished.

That cockiness might have had something to do with his undoing. He was matched with Galento for a Philadelphia fight. The match wasn't promising. Here was a clean-living, youthful Giant pitted against a comic, globular figure whose road work consisted of running over his accounts and running down Joe Louis.

But Galento won, and looking back on Nova's exhibition of that night it seems that he was a slow, clumsy old man in a mental fog.

We saw him in his dressing room afterward, a pathetic figure trying to jest away heartbreak.

That was the last we saw of him. He went West and news trickled back that he was a very sick man, that he never would fight again, that the fine physique had become gaunt.

Whether he fights again is his own business, but if he does he'll have the long, rocky trail to climb all over again. He was so near the top, and in one brief hour dropped to the bottom again.

He's a nice kind and everyone wishes him well, and that goes double for Ray Carlen, the gentleman whose hopes also went tumbling in that tragic Philadelphia story.

Allegany Trims Beall 51 to 32 Before 1100 Fans

Campers Ran Up 20 to 5 Lead in First Quarter and Won Easily

Before a crowd of nearly 1,100 fans Allegany high school downed the scrappy Beall high quint of Frostburg by the score of 51 to 32, in the final of a three game affair here last night.

The Campers jumped into the lead at the sound of the opening whistle and were never headed. Gaffney opened the scoring with two goals and was quickly followed by his team mates Bell and Mont with tallies from the field that netted the Campers a 10 to 0 lead, Mont collected from the chairty line while Sherman counted from the field to bolster the Campers lead to a thirteen point margin. Brode, lanky center for Beall took matters into his own hands and collected a field goal only to be set back by Mont, Bell and Sherman, Burkett made a free toss and Brode tallied his second goal from scrimmage as the period ended with the visitors on the short end of count 20-5.

Subs See Action

Coach Bowers sent a new team in as play resumed, Sharrett and Athey carrying the brunt of the attack by three points between them, Prichard made good at the foul line to make it 23-6. Winters scored from the field for the Campers as the visitors took to a small scoring spurt to grab four points contributed by A. Harvey and Prichard then Allegany took their turn as Sharrett tallied.

With the regulars back in the Campers began to click with goals by Mont and See, as the second half opened, Gaffney and Brode gave an exhibition of hot tempers and the former was banished from the game by referee Fearer, the Allegany rooting section took to their high horse and displayed the poorest kind of sportsmanship by booing for several minutes before Fearer, who was very patient called a technical foul on the crowd, from that time on every decision of Frearers was booed, which didn't do the Campers any credit of fair play. Brode tallied three points amid the riff and was closely followed with goals by Prichard and Harvey to bring the count to 31-18. Bell counted on a set shot and Sherman followed up with two from the field. Harvey looped a goal as the session ended with the Campers holding a seventeen point margin 37-20.

Bell High Scorer

Lou Bell opened the last period with two lightning goals as Brode counted for the visitors with two points. Bell scored from the field his last and seventh tally of the evening. Harvey and Brode picked up five points between them as Athey and Winters, subs, each collected a basket. Grenya, also a sub, scored to make the count 49 to 27. Burkett tallied a goal and free throw for the visitors as Prichard made good a free throw. Wilson garnered a basket as the game ended 51 to 32.

Bell was high man for the Campers with fourteen points, Sherman and Mont being runnerups with seven tallies apiece. Brode was the loud noise for Beall with eight points. The Allegany girls, led by

Cambridge Accepts Central's Challenge

Lonaconing, Feb. 16 (Special to The News)—Cambridge high school has accepted the challenge of Central high's girls team for a state championship game to be played here.

Principal Arthur F. Smith, announced today that he had received a letter from W. Emmett Andrews, principal of Cambridge high accepting the challenge.

The game will be played here Saturday, March 2. Both Cambridge and Central are undefeated this season. Cambridge defeated Central at Cambridge last year 22 to 16 for the championship.

LaSalle Cagers Sweep Series With Gallitzin

Joe Nolan Hero as North Enders Score 28-26 Extra-Period Win

Gallitzin, Pa., Feb. 16 — LaSalle High cagers of Cumberland (Md.) swept their two-game series with Gallitzin high here tonight by turning back the locals 28-26 in an extra-period battle. Joe Nolan, LaSalle forward, was the hero of the battle, dropping in a pair of fouls in the overtime session after the regular game had ended in a 26-26 deadlock.

LaSalle jumped away to a 14-7 lead at the end of the opening stanza and played the losers on even terms in the second round which ended with LaSalle on top 21-14. However, the scrappy Marylanders were outscored in the third period six to three which closed with the home crew four markers behind at 24-20.

In the fourth semester the Gallitzin crew caught the Marylanders at 24-all and the score was knotted several times after that. Coach Art Slocum of the LaSalle outfit moved his star pivot man — Ted Rowan — to the forward post and inserted Ed McGraw at the center position.

"Lefty" Smith and Rowan paced the winners with 14 points, the former tallying eight on four baskets and the latter six on one less. Mc Greary was Gallitzin's whole show with 15 markers. The lineups:

Fort Hill Drops Second Game to Bulldogs, 30-20

Sentinels Trail over Full Route in C.V.A.L. Tilt at Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 16—Fort Hill cagers of Cumberland, Md., defending champions of the Cumberland Valley Athletic League, dropped their second loop game of the season to the Martinsburg Bulldogs here tonight. The score was 30-20. The Bulldogs defeated the Sentinels on their own floor earlier in the season, 23-22.

The Cumberlanders were on the short end of the score throughout and were seven minutes getting their first points, Junior Rice tallying a twin pointer to close the first period with the Bulldogs holding a 9-2 lead. The winners outscored the Sentinels in the second round, the score reading 18-8 at the half, but the invaders staged a rally in the next chapter which brought them within seven points of the winners, 22-15 as the quarter ended.

Laidlow and Edmonds, guard and forward, paced the Martinsburg team with 17 points between them. Each dumped eight buckets with the former adding a foul to his total. Rice and Carnell, were the losers' best with 15 markers. Rice scored four doubledeckers for eight points while Carnell converted five fouls out of seven chances in addition to a basket. The lineups:

Dragons To Meet Kaplons Sunday In Benefit Game

Proceeds from Contest Will Go to Finnish Relief Fund

The first sport event to be held in Cumberland for the benefit of the Finnish relief fund—the clash Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock on the SS. Peter and Paul School court between the Cumberland Dragons and Kaplon Clothiers—will find the Dragons, outstanding amateur club of the district last season, seeking revenge for a setback at the hands of the Clothiers earlier this year.

Not only will the teams be trying to demonstrate to local fans the high calibre of amateur basketball as played in this section but will also be battling for top place in the city amateur championship race.

In winning 11 of 13 battles this season, the Dragons have averaged 46 points per game and their opponents 29.5. Victories have been scored over the Homewood Hurricanes 45-36, Hagerstown Y. M. C. A. 30-24, Windber Whalley Motors 67-34, Overholt Distillers of Connellsville, Pa., 56-31, Garrett and Zilch 68-29, Crane Clothiers 45-34 and 34-24, Meyersdale Ex-High 79-23, Bantam Press Club of Washington, D. C., 50-21, Davis Warriors 41-27 and the College All-Stars 33-31.

The defeats were administered by Kaplon's Clothiers 38-29 and Connellsville 32-22 but needed reserve strength was acquired this week with the signing of Jimmy Stakem, former LaSalle and Villanova star, and Frank Driver.

After bowing in their first start of the season to Candy Kitchen, the Clothiers registered 11 straight victories. In the preliminary clash at 1:45, Candy Kitchen will meet the Keyser Red Rock Colas, who have a good record after getting away to a late start.

State Teachers Win on Forfeit

Alderson-Broaddus Team Leaves Floor after Long Calls Technical

Frostburg, Feb. 16. —(Special to the NEWS) — Frostburg State Teachers College basketers were awarded a forfeit over the Alderson-Broaddus quint here tonight after the Baptists had held the upper hand most of the way and then walked off the floor.

With three minutes left to play in the game, and the visitors leading 57-53, Referee Johnny Long, Cumberland, awarded the Teachers the victory after the Alderson-Broaddus outfit pulled their walkout. The immediate cause was a technical foul, called by Long on the visitors' star forward, Griffith, who refused to give the ball to the referee after he had caleld a jump ball, and walked off the floor.

The Frostburgers waited five minutes for the visitor to come back on the court and then Long called the forfeit.

The locals were ahead 33-32 at the half and managed to hold it for about five minutes, when the West Virginians spurted and at one point held a nine-point advantage. Griffith was high point-getter for the losers with eleven field goals and eight of ten fouls for thirty points, while Rice led the winners with nineteen points.

Funny Stuff

Cincinnati (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds baseball club shouldn't lack for comedy down around the first base position.

Acquisition of Cyril "Butch" Moran gives the Reds, with Joe Mack already on hand, a Moran and Mack combination trying out for a job at the initial sack.

Sunday School Title Series Starts Today

Grace Baptist and Centre Street Methodist Play at 2:30

The first of a three game series for the championship of the Junior Sunday School League will get under way this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Central Y.M.C.A.

Grace Baptist and Centre street Methodist finished the season in a "dead heat" each club winning nine games and losing but one. The teams appear to be about evenly matched and close and hard-fought games are predicted by followers of the clubs.

The second game of the series will be played a week from today and if the third game is necessary it will be played March 2.

The probable starting lineups are:

Pos.	Grace Baptist	Centre Street
F	A. Rotruck	McCoy
F	N. Rotruck	Stroup
C	Loyer	Fuller
G	Turner	Flies
G	Crites	Lee

Referee—Cliff Fearer.

Central Girls Defeat Barton

Lonaconing, Feb. 16 (Special to the NEWS) — The Central high school girls undefeated this season continued their winning ways tonight but were given a scare by Barton, the final score being 22 to 13.

Central was completely off at the foul lines and failed to convert a single goal out of ten attempts. Clark with 12 points led the scoring.

The first quarter was close with Central holding a 6 to 4 edge. Barton went scoreless in the second period, while Central made four. Central scored 12 points in the last half to 9 for Barton.

The lineups:

Allegany Will Meet WVU Frosh Tonight at 7:30

Little Mountaineers Have Won Seven out of Nine Games

Allegany high school will meet the West Virginia Freshman basketball club at Fort Hill high school gym tonight at 7:30 in the preliminary to the West Virginia-George Washington college game, in what promises to be a hard-fought, interesting contest.

The "Little Mountaineers" will be favored to turn back Allegany, but followers of the Camper aggregation are confident the visitors will be given a tough fight by Walter L. "Bill" Bowers team.

Albie Colebank, who has been coaching the WVU Frosh cagers for the past few seasons has come up with another fine team. Colebank's team won seven straight games before losing to the Scottdale, Pa., Overholts last Saturday at Scottdale 52 to 42. Thursday night the W. & J. Freshman cagers defeated them in a thrilling 49 to 45 game.

Colebank has a rangy team averaging around six feet and weighing around 170 pounds. The tallest player is Hess, six feet, one inch and the heavies is Fryer who tips the scales at 200 pounds.

Several former scholastic stars are members of the Freshman squad, including Bill Hess, all-state at Elkins who played with the W. & J. Freshmen last season; Walter "Lefty" Rollins from Ceredo-Kenova; Charles Findley, all-District of Columbia center last year and "Scotty" Hamilton, all-state selection from Grafton.

Hamilton, a fine passer and excellent shot is ill and will not play here. He was unable to play in the last two games and the team was weakened considerably.

Coach Bowers will use his regular starting lineup against the "Little Mountaineers" and Mont, Gaffney, See, Bell and Sherman are expected to give the West Virginians a real struggle.

Probable starting lineups:

Pos.	WVU Freshmen	Allegany High
R	Hess	Mont
F	Rollins	See
C	Fryer	Gaffney
G	Kesling	Bell
G	Dollinger	Sherman

Cleo McNeal Whips Ingram in CAC Feature

Canton's Colored Welter Takes All Ten Heats in Win

Brant TKO'ed in Semi-windup by Pittsburgh's Ira Hughes

Shrout Keeps Record Clean; Wilson Loses to Jackson

With Cleo McNeal and Ray Ingram furnishing about all the fireworks on the card, the fourth Cumberland Athletic Club show went over with a bang last night. McNeal after knocking the Washington boy down for a nine count in the second kept him on the run for the rest of the bout, trying to land a finisher.

The only bona fide kayo on the card came in the first bout when Kayo Shrout layed Billy Van Meter in the second, after Van Meter took the opening round by a clase margin. The referee stopped it when Van Meter was obviously on "queer street" Charlie Brant lost his first professional start here when Ira Hughes, colored light-heavy from Pittsburgh, opened a gash over his right eye in the second canto of the scheduled eight round semi-windup.

McNeal Outstanding

In the main go, Cleo McNeal was head and shoulders above Ray Ingram of Washington, former top ranking featherweight, who after the second round apparently was interested only in staying the route. McNeal pounded Ingram to the ropes in every round and tried in vain for an opening through which to throw his knockout punch. Running into McNeal's Sunday punch in the second round, Ingram played safe and covered for most of the rest of the fight. McNeal crowding the Washingtonian to the ropes would meet only a glove covered face and no place for the finisher. McNeal weighed 144, Ingram 142.

After a first round feeler by Charlie Brant, in which Ira Hughes, Pittsburgh negro, went ahead on points, the boy who took Brant thrice before, opened a cut in Brant's right eyelid early in the second and worked on it for the remainder of the round. After the second round, Doctor Schindler stopped the fight because of the seriousness of the gash. Brant weighed 185, Hughes 172.

Shrout Wallops Van Meter

Kayo Shrout, 184, had no trouble keeping his Allegany County championship as he proceeded to pound Billy Van Meter into submission after 29 seconds of the second. Van Meter weighed 206.

Bobby Wilson, 153, Washington, winner at the last show was taken across by Tiger Jackson, 146, Akron colored weter, although both boys were staggered a few times during the milling. In the other four rounder on the program, Al Gilbert, 165, Washington belted out a decision over John Fleming, 165, of Pittsburgh, after taking a neat lacing in the first canto.

Grantsville Independents Defeat Addison, Pa.

Grantsville, Feb. 16—Grantsville defeated Addison (Pa.) Independents yesterday afternoon 28-21. Durst started off the game with a goal for Grantsville. Two more followed in rapid succession, made by Schaefer and Stowell. Schaefer also tossed two other baskets during the period. Shope made one goal and one foul shot and M. Wright one foul goal for Addison before the quarter ended 12-4 with Grantsville leading.

Coach Bill Grimm ran in his second team during the second quarter and Addison held them scoreless while they took a lead of 15-12.

Grantsville again took the lead early in the third period and at the end of the frame the score stood 21-19. The second team went in again to play the last two minutes of the game.

Boxing, Eye-Opener

East Lansing, Mich. (AP) — Add argument in favor of college boxing:

It helps teach athletes the value of keeping their eyes open.

At least that's what L. D. Burhans, Michigan State College boxing coach, thinks.

He says:

"One of the first things a boy learns in boxing is to keep his eyes open. If he shuts them, the chances are he will get hit. The lesson he learns can be put to great use in other sports. I think that it applies to football, especially."

Our Sports Expert Leaves Us—A Few Random Notes

By JOHN LARDNER

New York, Feb. 16 (N.A.N.A.) — Before we turn the bow of the fugger south for a brief vacation (anyone w ohyassetaoin shrdlu (anyone who says, "vacation from what?" will be penalized fifteen yards), we would like to set down a few random notes collected on

Bimelech, the Bradley three-year-old, will open at no better than 5 to 2 in most of the Kentucky Derby future books . . . After peering at Godoy vs. Louis, James J. Johnston, the boy bandit, still thinks he has the best South American heavyweight now doing business in this country . . . James' South American is Valentin Campolo, as tall as an Ande and twice as fast . . . Tommy Shortell, the pudge who voted for Godoy in that title fight, had just been sprung from a six-month stay in a hospital . . . The fight brought the usual rumors of a "fix," which are denied by all parties, and probably with truth . . . Godoy's "return-match" value is hardly worth the risk of a scandal.

Our hunch for the $50,000 Widener at Hialeah next month is The Chief . . . And for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, Kayak II to repeat . . . after which, the horse will be entitled to walk into any court of law and get his name changed to Kayak First . . . A nice derby long shot is Star Chance . . . though how this Llama, or any other, is going to beat Bimelech we do not by any means see.

Here's That Hostak Again

It's a little-known fact that Mysterious Al Hostak, the private middleweight champion of Seattle, Wash. (If there is a Hostak) once slipped into New York City all unbeknownst to the critics, spies, and scouts, and Uncle Mike Jacobs . . . His family was visiting in the middle west, and Mysterious Al and his brother decided to drive the car on east and take in the world's fair for a day . . . They did so, and slipped out again the next morning, and Mr. Jacobs clicked his store teeth in baffled rage when he heard about it . . . This Hostak is a slippery customer . . . If there is a Hostak.

Incidentally, if there is a Hostak, we think he will beat the daylights out of Tony Zale, who licked him recently, when they meet again in Seattle . . . The air is so pure nowadays among the Pacific Coast colleges that Lou Zamperini, one of the world's greatest runners, had to leave U. S. C. because he couldn't pay his tuition . . . He's trying to get back . . . It's said that Judge Landis will move out of his usual spring headquarters in Belleair because Leland Stanford MacPhail and the Dodgers are coming there . . . The Judge does not care for the unrefined conversation of L. S. MacPhail.

Joe Di Maggio is ranked No. 8 among the country's ten best-dressed men by the Custom Tailors Guild of America . . . but if Joe doesn't buy twenty suits this year, watch him drop out of there . . . Syracuse University's new book of football records and history is one of the best jobs of its kind ever done . . . We recommend it as a model for all colleges . . . Critics of horse-riding say that Roy Jack Flinchum, the new jockey sensation, has everything but a sense of pace . . . and that can be acquired . . . Like many another successful jockey, Eddie Arcaro rides "ace-deuce" — his left stirrup longer than the right.

Can Dewey Run For President?

If Al Davis beats Lou Ambers in their over-the-weight bout next week, Davis vs. Armstrong should draw one of the biggest gates for small men in recent years . . . Thomas E. Dewey seems to have failed to get the goods on Joseph Jacobs so far . . . can Honest Tom run for president with a clear conscience with Yussel the Muscle still at large? . . . Or, to put it in another way, can he run for president? . . . Joe Louis is anxious to quit fighting for good, and only the iron will of Michael S. Jacobs blocks his path . . . Paavo Nurmi understands more English than he seems to . . . The flying Finn is a cute character.

Pittsburgh University is edging closer to the Big Ten . . . she will be admitted formally at the end of next year, barring unforeseen developments at Chicago . . . Eddie Collins let out a fearsome beef in behalf of the Boston Red Sox when the new rule, giving pitchers a full two-way stride on the mound, was passed . . . And that's understandable, for Eddie's team is all hitters and no pitchers . . . If the rumored Red Sox-Athletics trade for Bob Johnson and Frank Hayes goes through, that Boston batting order will be a pitcher's nightmare.

Billy Myer's holdout is not very popular with Powel Crosley, owner of Cincinnati, who figures that Bill still owes him $60,000 for bodting the last game of the World Series away . . . Of course, there are two ways of looking at this, and Myers is on the other end of the glasses . . . Would Cincinnati have been in the World Series without him in the first place, he asks . . . And the same question is being asked of Ed Barrow, Yankee president, by Di Maggio, Dickey, Rolfe, Crosetti, Gordon, and Dahlgren . . . They have Mr. Barrow outnumbered . . . But he's the guy who knows the combination to the safe.

Seabiscuit To Race in Santa Anita Handicap

Kayak II, Heelfly and Ten Others in Field against "Biscuit"

Los Angeles, Feb. 16. (AP)—The "Big Three" of the Santa Anita Handicap lineup, Seabiscuit, Kayak II and Heelfly, go postward with ten other candidates tomorrow in the $10,000 added San Carlos Handicap unless bad weather sets in.

One of two remaining events for the stake division before the $100,000 handicap March 2, the San Carlos will serve as an important test in the come-back plans of Charles S. Howard's Seabiscuit, as well as give a "tightening race" for Howard's Kayak II, George W. Stratton's reconditioned Heelfly and the rest of the eligibles.

Others named for the seven-furlong event were Ligaroti, Preceptor II, Can't Wait, Specify, Viscounty, Daybreak, Sun Egret, Arigotal Lassator and Aur Mat.

Seabiscuit, in at 127 pounds with the familiar jockey Red Pollard slated to ride, will be making his second appearance of the meeting after having been on the shelf almost a year. He ran a good third to Heelfly and Sun Egret at six furlongs Feb. 9.

Dragons Swamp Johnstown Five

Springing into a 10-0 lead early in the first period, the Cumberland Dragons coasted to an easy 44-16 victory over the Johnstown Eagles last night on the Central Y.M.C.A. floor.

Eugene "Snooks" Winters, led both teams in scoring with 16 points on six fielders and four of six fouls. The rest of the Dragon scoring was evenly distributed among the other seven players. Jimmy Stakem made his debut with the locals and played a strong defensive game in addition to bagging five points.

Although the Flood City team missed many shots, the hard aggressive play of the Serpents was mainly responsible for the Eagles' low score. Weltzel and Thomas were the losers' top scorers with four markers apiece. The lineups:

DRAGONS	G	FG	Pts.
Schaidt f	1	0-0	2

Reds Can Buy Four Players and Motor Bus for $500

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 16. (AP)—The National League champion Reds sent their Assistant General Manager nearly 2,000 miles into the West today to inspect seven ball players and a motor bus. The total asking price for players and bus was $500.

The seven players were all that remained of the Tucson, Ariz., club of the Class D, Arizona-Texas League, seven others (14 being the player limit) having been dropped or otherwise scattered since a 1939 season in which the club finished last on both ends of a split season.

The motor bus, desert sand-blasted, otherwise was "good transportation," officials were told—and the deal was on.

Assistant General Manager Frank C. Lane, in charge of farm club operations, was expected to meet Sunday with H. S. Corbett, president of the Cowboy Club, to close it.

Despite its lowly station in the four-club league, Tucson managed to eke out one record last year:

It topped all comers in number of hit batsmen—63.

The Reds are to pay $400 additional for a season's rent of the municipal ball park, in which, said officials here, a crowd of 200 or 300 probably is "something."

Addition of the Tucson club brings to eight the roster of Reds' farms.

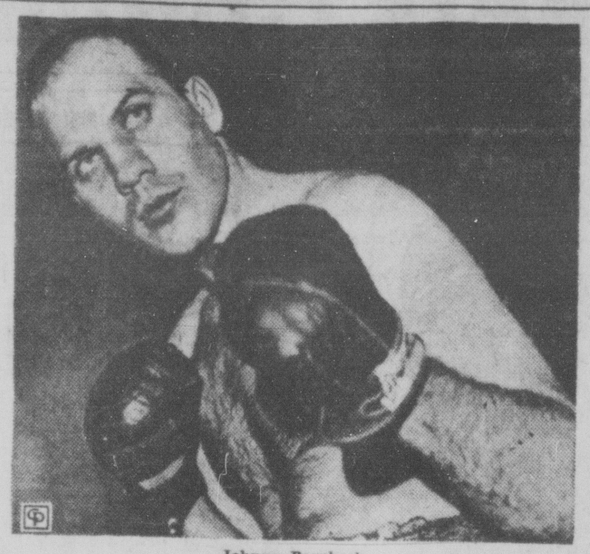
Joie Ray Retains Wanamaker Mark

New York, Feb. 16 — Joie Ray's mark of winning the Wanamaker Mile seven times still stands. Glen Cunningham who won it six times, will start a gradual retirement after this year. His attempt to win the Wanamaker this year failed.

Clippers Seek Games

The Cumberland Clippers, recently-organized basketball team, has dates open for games with other independent clubs of the district. Outfits interested should write Joe Mackert, 319 Pulaski street, Cumberland.

MR. LOUIS, HERE'S NEXT ONE



Johnny Paycheck

Here's the next opponent of Joe Louis in an April bout. He is Johnny Paycheck of Des Moines, Ia., one of the most promising of "white hopes." Paycheck has a great record in the ring and packs both a punch and boxing ability. He is being touted as the best opponent yet to face the champion.

Paul Waner Is Beaten by Shea In Golf Tourney

Pittsburgh Outfielder, Defending Champion, Looses First Match

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 16. (AP)—Paul Waner, National Baseball-golf champion in 1938 and finalist last year, was unceremoniously dumped out of the current tournament at Palma Ceia today in a first round match. He lost 6 and 5 to Marvin Shea, Detroit coach.

Otherwise, favorites paraded through their first matches and prepared for a double header tomorrow when quarter-final and semi-final matches will be played. The thirty-six-hole finals will be played Sunday.

Waner, rated by many as a sure bet to reach the semi-finals, offered no excuse for his one-sided defeat.

"I will say, however," he commented, "that the guy who told me Palma Ceia favored a left-handed golfer was all wet."

Shea shot a 39 on the first nine to lead by five holes, then coasted in.

Joe Medwick, the medalist, and Wes Ferrell, the defending champion, both advanced handily.

Medwick turned in an approximate 76 to oust Denny Galehouse, 3 and 2, and Ferrell had a 77 to defeat Heinie Manush, 2 and 1.

Paul Derringer, Cincinnati pitcher, who is another favorite, breezed through his match with Johnny Rizzo, big Pittsburgh outfielder, for a 4 and 3 victory.

Jack Russell, Chicago pitcher, hit his stride in a match with Lloyd Brown, Newark pitcher, winning 5 and 4 in another minor upset.

Jimmy Foxx, powerhouse slugger of the Boston Red Sox, dropped Lloyd Waner, tiny Pittsburgh star, out of the championship flight by a 3 and 2 score. As usual, Foxx was hitting his tee shots a mile, but had trouble around the greens.

Schoolboy Rowe, giant Detroit pitcher, and Al Simmons, Philadelphia outfielder, completed the quarter final bracket.

Rowe downed Johnny Moore, 3 and 2, and Simmons moved Johnny Cooney to the sidelines by the same margin.

Feather Merchants' Win Streak Broken

Romney, W. Va., Feb. 16—The Romney A. C. basketball team snapped the nine-game winning streak of the Petersburg Feather Merchants with a 39-24 victory in a fast and well-played game here this week.

Romney took a 7-6 lead in the first quarter, boosted its margin to 18-12 by the half and was in front 31-16 at the close of the third session. Bob Kyle with 16 points starred for the winners while "Whitey" Kendall was high for Petersburg with eight markers. The lineups:

Charley Fulmer Is Taken by Death

Philadelphia, Feb. 16 (AP)—Charley "Chick" Fulmer, regarded as one of the greatest shortstops in baseball sixty years ago, died yesterday. He was 89 on Tuesday.

"Fulmer was a great ball player, one of the real old-timers," declared Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics.

In his prime Fulmer was manager and captain of the Cincinnati team that won the American Association championship in 1882.

He started playing with Philadelphia in the National Association in 1869. Before he retired he also played with Cleveland, Rockford, New York Mutuals, Louisville, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Cincinnati and St. Louis.

All Pirate Catchers Now Under Contract

Pittsburgh, Feb. 16 (AP) —Arrival of the signed contract of Ray Berres from his home in Kenosha, Wis., brought all five members of the Pirates' catching staff in line today for the 1940 season. The club denied a report Berres' salary had been cut, saying he would receive the same pay as last season. Only four Bucs are now unsigned.

Frisch Talks of Pirates' Chances

Says 20 Game Winning Pitcher Will Put Them in First Division

Pittsburgh, Feb. 16 (AP)—Frankie Frisch predicted today that if his Pirates' pitching staff can produce a twenty-game winner, the Bucs will wind up in the National League's first division this year.

"One twenty-game man with some dependable support would make it a big season for the Buccos," the club's new pilot elaborated.

Frisch also discussed other angles of his team for the first time:

"Our catching troubles should be ironed out before the race progresses far.

"The infield should be one of the good foursomes of the league, and we will have an effective outfield, especially if one or two of those kids stay in the pace they showed in the fag end of last season.

"The outfield probably will not measure up to that Medwick-Moore-Slaughter combine, but it will be good."

Asked what he thought the first division line-up would be, he replied:

"On winter paper form, I think the Cardinals and Reds are sure-shot first division entries, and these two should be the flag favorites."

Cutting in on Cunningham Is Fenske Habit

By BILL BONI

New York, Feb. 16. (AP)—Cutting in on Glenn Cunningham's private mile-running domain has become a 1940 habit with Chuck Fenske. Tomorrow night, in the twenty-seventh running of the New York A. C.'s Baxter mile at Madison Square Garden, he stands an excellent chance of breaking another Cunningham monopoly.

Like the other plank-track fixtures, the Baxter has born the indelible Cunningham stamp for the last seven years. Over that stretch, the Kansas veteran has won five times, the last three in succession.

But circumstances, consisting chiefly of his own lack of proper training and Fenske's great form, have conspired to put the "Master Miler" behind the eight ball. This should be his last showing in the New York A. C. mile and, while it would be nice to see the man with the flame-scarred legs and barrel chest bow out a winner, the form chart doesn't say so.

He's gone to the post in five major races this winter, and in each the gold medal has gone to someone else, to Gene Venzke once and Fenske four times. His last time out, in Boston last Saturday, Glenn suffered the added indignity of having Lou Zamperini as well as Fenske beat him over the finish line. Those two, Venzke and Archie San Romani will be in the field tomorrow and, if one of them will set himself up as a pane-setting sacrificial lamb, Cunningham may even see his meet record of 4:08.6 go by the boards.

Cubs To Leave For Camp Monday

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP) —Manager Gabby Hartnett and Bob Lewis, traveling secretary, will be in charge of the first group of Chicago Cubs to head for spring training at Catalina Island, the Cub office said today. The group made up largely by catchers and pitchers, will leave here Monday, with the rest of the Cubs scheduled to leave February 26 and the full squad slated to start drill March 1.

19 Horses Will Run in Widener Cup Race Today

Sir Damion, Second Last Year Heads List of Entries

Miami, Fla., Feb. 16 (AP) — Marshall Field's Sir Damion, second in the Widener Challenge Cup race last year, will head nineteen entries in the $10,000 added McLennan Memorial at Hialeah park tomorrow.

The smart field of three-year-olds and up contains eighteen candidates for this year's $50,000 added Widener event.

Sir Damion drew top weight of 122 pounds and will have Jockey Don Meade astride in an effort to overcome his poor 1940 showing with a victory in the important race. Sir Damion was second in the 1939 Widener to Bull Lea, then won the rich Dixie Handicap at Pimlico.

It will be the first start of the meet for Field's entry, after a layoff caused by recurrence last summer of an old leg ailment.

Weight of 118 pounds was assigned to the LeMar Stock Farm's Mars Stings, Maxwell Howard's highly regarded the Chief and Calumet Farm's Easy Mon. Others scaled down to 103 pounds. Trainer Earl Sande, who saddled Stagehand, McLennan winner last year, now directs the Chief.

Missing from the list will be the mighty Challedon, declared out of the race by owner William L. Brann because cold weather delayed his training at Columbia, S. C.

The McLennan is run over a mile and one furlong distance.

Davis High Wallops Harpers Ferry 61-13

Harpers Ferry, W. Va., Feb. 16—A rampaging Davis High basketball team cut the cords for 29 field goals and added three free throws to pin a 61-13 setback on Harpers Ferry High cagers here last night.

Led by White and Pell who shared 29 points, Davis took a 28-1 lead during the first period and was ahead 43-5 at the half and 45-11 at the end of the third quarter. Six boys shared Harpers Ferry's half-dozen baskets. The lineups:

Cleo McNeal Whips Ingram in CAC Feature

Shrout Keeps Record Clean; Wilson Loses to Jackson

With Cleo McNeal and Ray Ingram furnishing about all the fireworks on the card, the fourth Cumberland Athletic Club show went over with a bang last night. McNeal after knocking the Washington boy down for a nine count in the second kept him on the run for the rest of the bout, trying to land a finisher.

The only bona fide kayo on the card came in the first bout when Kayo Shrout layed Billy Van Meter in the second, after Van Meter took the opening round by a clase margin. The referee stopped it when Van Meter was obviously on "queer street". Charlie Brant lost his first professional start here when Ira Hughes, colored light-heavy from Pittsburgh, opened a gash over his right eye in the second canto of the scheduled eight round semi-windup.

McNeal Outstanding

In the main go, Cleo McNeal was head and shoulders above Ray Ingram of Washington, former top ranking featherweight, who after the second round apparently was interested only in staying the route. McNeal pounded Ingram to the ropes in every round and tried in vain for an opening through which to throw his knockout punch. Running into McNeal's Sunday punch in the second round, Ingram played safe and covered for most of the rest of the fight. McNeal crowding the Washingtonian to the ropes would meet only a glove covered face and no place for the finisher. McNeal weighed 144, Ingram 142.

After a first round feeler by Charlie Brant, in which Ira Hughes Pittsburgh negro, went ahead on points, the boy who took Brant thrice before, opened a cut in Brant's right eyelid early in the second and worked on it for the remainder of the round. After the second round, Doctor Schindler stopped the fight because of the seriousness of the gash. Brant weighed 185, Hughes 172.

Shrout Wallops Van Meter

Kayo Shrout, 184, had no trouble keeping his Allegany County championship as he proceeded to pound Billy Van Meter into submission after 29 seconds of the second. Van Meter weighed 206.

Bobby Wilson, 153, Washington, winner at the last show was taken across by Tiger Jackson, 146, Akron colored weter, although both boys were staggered a few times during the milling. In the other four rounder on the program, Al Gilbert, 165, Washington belted out a decision over John Fleming, 165, of Pittsburgh, after taking a neat lacing in the first canto.

The officials: Judges; Harry Nelson and Tim Dolan. Timekeeper, Leo Barley; Announcer, Sam Cozad and Referee, Charlie Short of Baltimore.

Grantsville Independents Defeat Addison, Pa.

Grantsville, Feb. 16—Grantsville defeated Addison (Pa.) Independents yesterday afternoon 28-21. Durst started off the game with a goal for Grantsville. Two more followed in rapid succession, made by Schaefer and Stowell. Schaefer also tossed two other baskets during the period. Shope made one goal and one foul shot and M. Wright one foul goal for Addison before the quarter ended 12-4 with Grantsville leading.

Coach Bill Grimm ran in his second team during the second quarter and Addison held them scoreless while they took a lead of 15-12.

Grantsville again took the lead early in the third period and at the end of the frame the score stood 21-19. The second team went in again to play the last two minutes of the game.

Boxing, Eye-Opener

East Lansing, Mich. (AP) — Add argument in favor of college boxing:

It helps teach athletes the value of keeping their eyes open.

At least that's what L. D. Burhans, Michigan State College boxing coach, thinks.

He says:

"One of the first things a boy learns in boxing is to keep his eyes open. If he shuts them, the chances are he will get hit. The lesson he learns can be put to great use in other sports. I think that it applies to football, especially."

Our Sports Expert Leaves Us—A Few Random Notes

By JOHN LARDNER

New York, Feb. 16 (N.A.N.A.) — Before we turn the bow of the lugger south for a brief vacation (anyone w ohyassetaoin shrdlu (anyone who says, "vacation from what?" will be penalized fifteen yards), we would like to set down a few random notes collected on

Bimelech, the Bradley three-year-old, will open at no better than 5 to 2 in most of the Kentucky Derby future books . . . After peering at Godoy vs. Louis, James J. Johnston, the boy bandit, still thinks he has the best South American heavyweight now doing business in this country . . . James' South American is Valentin Campolo, as tall as an Ande and twice as fast . . . Tommy Shortell, the pudge who voted for Godoy in that title fight, had just been sprung from a six-month stay in a hospital . . . The fight brought the usual rumors of a "fix," which are denied by all parties, and probably with truth... Godoy's "return-match" value is hardly worth the risk of a scandal.

Our hunch for the $50,000 Widener at Hialeah next month is The Chief . . . And for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, Kayak II to repeat . . . after which, the horse will be entitled to walk into any court of law and get his name changed to Kayak First . . . A nice derby long shot is Star Chance . . . though how this Llama, or any other, is going to beat Bimelech we do not by any means see.

Here's That Hostak Again

It's a little-known fact that Mysterious Al Hostak, the private middleweight champion of Seattle, Wash. (If there is a Hostak) once slipped into New York City all unbeknownst to the critics, spies, and scouts, and Uncle Mike Jacobs . . . His family was visiting in the middle west, and Mysterious Al and his brother decided to drive the car on east and take in the world's fair for a day . . . They did so, and slipped out again the next morning, and Mr. Jacobs clicked his store teeth in baffled rage when he heard about it . . . This Hostak is a slippery customer . . . If there is a Hostak.

Incidentally, if there is a Hostak, we think he will beat the daylights out of Tony Zale, who licked him recently, when they meet again in Seattle . . . The air is so pure nowadays among the Pacific Coast colleges that Lou Zamperini, one of the world's greatest runners, had to leave U. S. C. because he couldn't pay his tuition . . . He's trying to get back . . . It's said that Judge Landis will move out of his usual spring headquarters in Belleair because Leland Stanford MacPhail and the Dodgers are coming there . . . The Judge does not care for the unrefined conversation of L. S. MacPhail.

Joe Di Maggio is ranked No. 8 among the country's ten best-dressed men by the Custom Tailors Guild of America . . . but if Joe doesn't buy twenty suits this year, watch him drop out of there . . . Syracuse University's new book of football records and history is one of the best jobs of its kind ever done . . . We recommend it as a model for all colleges . . . Critics of horse-riding say that Roy Jack Flinchum, the new jockey sensation, has everything but a sense of pace . . . and that can be acquired . . . Like many another successful jockey, Eddie Arcaro rides "ace-deuce" — his left stirrup longer than the right.

Can Dewey Run For President?

If Al Davis beats Lou Ambers in their over-the-weight bout next week, Davis vs. Armstrong should draw one of the biggest gates for small men in recent years . . . Thomas E. Dewey seems to have failed to get the goods on Joseph Jacobs so far . . . can Honest Tom run for president with a clear conscience with Yussel the Muscle still at large? . . . Or, to put it in another way, can he run for president? . . . Joe Louis is anxious to quit fighting for good, and only the iron will of Michael S. Jacobs blocks his path . . . Paavo Nurmi understands more English than he seems to . . . The flying Finn is a cute character.

Pittsburgh University is edging closer to the Big Ten . . . she will be admitted formally at the end of next year, barring unforeseen developments at Chicago . . . Eddie Collins let out a fearsome beef in behalf of the Boston Red Sox when the new rule, giving pitchers a full two-way stride on the mound, was passed . . . And that's understandable, for Eddie's team is all hitters and no pitchers . . . If the rumored Red Sox-Athletics trade for Bob Johnson and Frank Hayes goes through, that Boston batting order will be a pitcher's nightmare.

Billy Myer's holdout is not very popular with Powel Crosley, owner of Cincinnati, who figures that Bill still owes him $60,000 for bodting the last game of the World Series away . . . Of course, there are two ways of looking at this, and Myers is on the other end of the glasses . . . Would Cincinnati have been in the World Series without him in the first place, he asks . . . And the same question is being asked of Ed Barrow, Yankee president, by Di Maggio, Dickey, Rolfe, Crosetti, Gordon, and Dahlgren... They have Mr. Barrow outnumbered . . . But he's the guy who knows the combination to the safe.

Seabiscuit To Race in Santa Anita Handicap

Kayak II, Heelfly and Ten Others in Field against "Biscuit"

Los Angeles, Feb. 16. (AP)—The "Big Three" of the Santa Anita Handicap lineup, Seabiscuit, Kayak II and Heelfly, go postward with ten other candidates tomorrow in the $10,000 added San Carlos Handicap unless bad weather sets in.

One of two remaining events for the stake division before the $100,000 handicap March 2, the San Carlos will serve as an important test in the come-back plans of Charles S. Howard's Seabiscuit, as well as give a "tightening race" for Howard's Kayak II, George W. Stratton's reconditioned Heelfly and the rest of the eligibles.

Others named for the seven-furlong event were Ligaroti, Preceptor II, Can't Wait, Specify, Viscounty, Daybreak, Sun Egret, Arigotal Lassator and Aur Mat.

Seabiscuit, in at 127 pounds with the familiar jockey Red Pollard slated to ride, will be making his second appearance of the meeting after having been on the shelf almost a year. He ran a good third to Heelfly and Sun Egret at six furlongs Feb. 9.

Dragons Swamp Johnstown Five

Springing into a 10-0 lead early in the first period, the Cumberland Dragons coasted to an easy 44-16 victory over the Johnstown Eagles last night on the Central Y.M.C.A. floor.

Eugene "Snooks" Winters, led both teams in scoring with 16 points on six fielders and four of six fouls. The rest of the Dragon scoring was evenly distributed among the other seven players. Jimmy Stakem made his debut with the locals and played a strong defensive game in addition to bagging five points.

Although the Flood City team missed many shots, the hard aggressive play of the Serpents was mainly responsible for the Eagles' low score. Weltzel and Thomas were the losers' top scorers with four markers apiece. The lineups:

Reds Can Buy Four Players and Motor Bus for $500

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 16. (AP)—The National League champion Reds sent their Assistant General Manager nearly 2,000 miles into the West today to inspect seven ball players and a motor bus. The total asking price for players and bus was $500.

The seven players were all that remained of the Tucson, Ariz., club of the Class D, Arizona-Texas League, seven others (14 being the player limit) having been dropped or otherwise scattered since a 1939 season in which the club finished last on both ends of a split season.

The motor bus, desert sand-blasted, otherwise was "good transportation," officials were told—and the deal was on.

Assistant General Manager Frank C. Lane, in charge of farm club operations, was expected to meet Sunday with H. S. Corbett, president of the Cowboy Club, to close it.

Despite its lowly station in the four-club league, Tucson managed to eke out one record last year:

It topped all comers in number of hit batsmen—63.

The Reds are to pay $400 additional for a season's rent of the municipal ball park, in which, said officials here, a crowd of 200 or 300 probably is "something."

Addition of the Tucson club brings to eight the roster of Reds' farms.

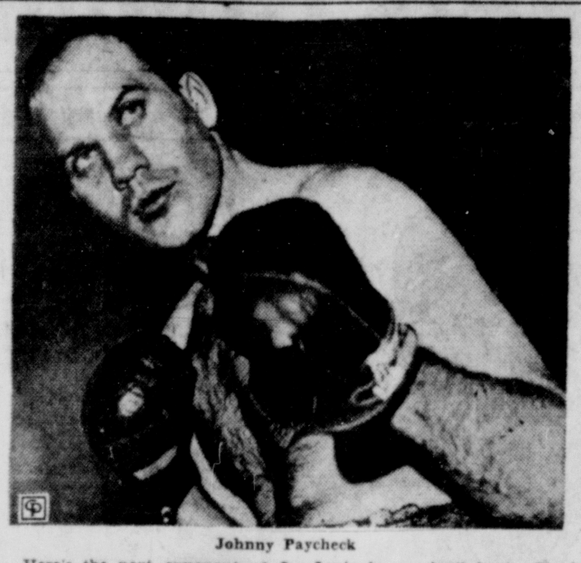
Joie Ray Retains Wanamaker Mark

New York, Feb. 16 — Joie Ray's mark of winning the Wanamaker Mile seven times still stands. Glen Cunningham who won it six times, will start a gradual retirement after this year. His attempt to win the Wanamaker this year failed.

Clippers Seek Games

The Cumberland Clippers, recently-organized basketball team, has dates open for games with other independent clubs of the district. Outfits interested should write Joe Mackert, 319 Pulaski street, Cumberland.

MR. LOUIS, HERE'S NEXT ONE



Johnny Paycheck

Here's the next opponent of Joe Louis in an April bout. He is Johnny Paycheck of Des Moines, Ia., one of the most promising of "white hopes." Paycheck has a great record in the ring and packs both a punch and boxing ability. He is being touted as the best opponent yet to face the champion.

Paul Waner Is Beaten by Shea In Golf Tourney

Pittsburgh Outfielder, Defending Champion, Looses First Match

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 16. (AP)—Paul Waner, National Baseball-golf champion in 1938 and finalist last year, was unceremoniously dumped out of the current tournament at Palma Ceia today in a first round match. He lost 6 and 5 to Marvin Shea, Detroit coach.

Otherwise, favorites paraded through their first matches and prepared for a double header tomorrow when quarter-final and semi-final matches will be played. The thirty-six-hole finals will be played Sunday.

Waner, rated by many as a sure bet to reach the semi-finals, offered no excuse for his one-sided defeat.

"I will shy, however," he commented, "that the guy who told me Palm Ceia favored a left-handed golfer was all wet."

Shea shot a 39 on the first nine to lead by five holes, then coasted in.

Joe Medwick, the medalist, and Wes Ferrell, the defending champion, both advanced handily.

Medwick turned in an approximate 76 to oust Denny Galehouse, 3 and 2, and Ferrell had a 77 to defeat Heinie Manush, 2 and 1.

Paul Derringer, Cincinnati pitcher, who is another favorite, breezed through his match with Johnny Rizzo, big Pittsburgh outfielder, for a 4 and 3 victory.

Jack Russell, Chicago pitcher, hit his stride in a match with Lloyd Brown, Newark pitcher, winning 5 and 4 in another minor upset.

Jimmy Foxx, powerhouse slugger of the Boston Red Sox, dropped Lloyd Waner, tiny Pittsburgh star, out of the championship flight by a 3 and 2 score. As usual, Foxx was hitting his tee shots a mile, but had trouble around the greens.

Schoolboy Rowe, giant Detroit pitcher, and Al Simmons, Philadelphia outfielder, completed the quarter final bracket.

Feather Merchants' Win Streak Broken

Romney, W. Va., Feb. 16—The Romney A. C. basketball team snapped the nine-game winning streak of the Petersburg Feather Merchants with a 39-24 victory in a fast and well-played game here this week.

Romney took a 7-6 lead in the first quarter, boosted its margin to 18-12 by the half and was in front 31-16 at the close of the third session. Bob Kyle with 16 points starred for the winners while "Whitey" Kendall was high for Petersburg with eight markers. The lineups:

Charley Fulmer Is Taken by Death

Philadelphia, Feb. 16 (AP)—Charley "Chick" Fulmer, regarded as one of the greatest shortstops in baseball sixty years ago, died yesterday. He was 89 on Tuesday.

"Fulmer was a great ball player, one of the real old-timers," declared Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics.

In his prime Fulmer was manager and captain of the Cincinnati team that won the American Association championship in 1882.

He started playing with Philadelphia in the National Association in 1869. Before he retired he also played with Cleveland, Rockford, New York Mutuals, Louisville, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Cincinnati and St. Louis.

All Pirate Catchers Now Under Contract

Pittsburgh, Feb. 16 (AP) —Arrival of the signed contract of Ray Berres from his home in Kenosha, Wis., brought all five members of the Pirates' catching staff in line today for the 1940 season. The club denied a report Berres' salary had been cut, saying he would receive the same pay as last season. Only four Bucs are now unsigned.

Frisch Talks of Pirates' Chances

Says 20 Game Winning Pitcher Will Put Them in First Division

Pittsburgh, Feb. 16 (AP)—Frankie Frisch predicted today that if his Pirates' pitching staff can produce a twenty-game winner, the Bucs will wind up in the National League's first division this year.

"One twenty-game man with some dependable support would make it a big season for the Buccos," the club's new pilot elaborated.

Frisch also discussed other angles of his team for the first time:

"Our catching troubles should be ironed out before the race progresses far.

"The infield should be one of the good foursomes of the league, and we will have an effective outfield, especially if one or two of those kids stay in the pace they showed in the fag end of last season.

"The outfield probably will not measure up to that Medwick-Moore-Slaughter combine, but it will be good."

Asked what he thought the first division line-up would be, he replied:

"On winter paper form, I think the Cardinals and Reds are sure-shot first division entries, and these two should be the flag favorites."

Cutting in on Cunningham Is Fenske Habit

By BILL BONI

New York, Feb. 16. (AP)—Cutting in on Glenn Cunningham's private mile-running domain has become a 1940 habit with Chuck Fenske. Tomorrow night, in the twenty-seventh running of the New York A. C.'s Baxter mile at Madison Square Garden, he stands an excellent chance of breaking another Cunningham monopoly.

Like the other plank-track fixtures, the Baxter has born the indelible Cunningham stamp for the last seven years. Over that stretch, the Kansas veteran has won five times, the last three in succession.

But circumstances, consisting chiefly of his own lack of proper training and Fenske's great form, have conspired to put the "Master Miler" behind the eight ball. This should be his last showing in the New York A. C. mile and, while it would be nice to see the man with the flame-scarred legs and barrel chest bow out a winner, the form chart doesn't say so.

He's gone to the post in five major races this winter, and in each the gold medal has gone to someone else, to Gene Venzke once and Fenske four times. His last time out, in Boston last Saturday, Glenn suffered the added indignity of having Lou Zamperini as well as Fenske beat him over the finish line. Those two, Venzke and Archie San Romani will be in the field tomorrow and, if one of them will set himself up as a pane-setting sacrificial lamb, Cunningham may even see his meet record of 4:08.6 go by the boards.

Cubs To Leave For Camp Monday

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP) —Manager Gabby Hartnett and Bob Lewis, traveling secretary, will be in charge of the first group of Chicago Cubs to head for spring training at Catalina Island, the Cub office said today. The group made up largely by catchers and pitchers, will leave here Monday, with the rest of the Cubs scheduled to leave February 26 and the full squad slated to start drill March 1.

19 Horses Will Run in Widener Cup Race Today

Sir Damion, Second Last Year Heads List of Entries

Miami, Fla., Feb. 16 (AP) — Marshall Field's Sir Damion, second in the Widener Challenge Cup race last year, will head nineteen entries in the $10,000 added McLennan Memorial at Hialeah park tomorrow.

The smart field of three-year-olds and up contains eighteen candidates for this year's $50,000 added Widener event.

Sir Damion drew top weight of 122 pounds and will have Jockey Don Meade astride in an effort to overcome his poor 1940 showing with a victory in the important race. Sir Damion was second in the 1939 Widener to Bull Lea, then won the rich Dixie Handicap at Pimlico.

It will be the first start of the meet for Field's entry, after a layoff caused by recurrence last summer of an old leg ailment.

Weight of 118 pounds was assigned to the LeMar Stock Farm's Man O' Stings, Maxwell Howard's highly regarded the Chief and Calumet Farm's Easy Mon. Others scaled down to 103 pounds. Trainer Eddie Sande, who saddled Stagehand, Mc-Lennan winner last year, now directs the Chief.

Missing from the list will be the mighty Challedon, declared out of the race by owner William L. Brann because cold weather delayed his training at Columbia, S. C.

The McLennan is run over a mile and one furlong distance.

Davis High Wallops Harpers Ferry 61-13

Harpers Ferry, W. Va., Feb. 16.—A rampaging Davis High basketball team cut the cords for 29 field goals and added three free throws to pile a 61-13 setback on Harpers Ferry High cagers here last night.

Led by White and Pell who shared 29 points, Davis took a 28-1 lead during the first period and was ahead 43-5 at the half and 45-11 at the end of the third quarter. Six boys shared Harpers Ferry's half dozen baskets. The lineups:

'Green Hell' Has Daring Love Theme

Six men and one woman marooned hundreds of miles from civilization in a dence Amazon jungle.

Such is the premise of "Green Hell," initial Famous Productions pictures for Universal release, now at the Liberty theater.

Many stories could be built on that foundation. Frances Marion, ace Hollywood scenarist, is said to have considered more than a dozen different attacks and discarded them as being "too close to the usual formula."

Then she conceived the development of this idea which has reached the screen in "Green Hell." As a first step toward making her story "different," she decided against drawing on the lower levels of humanity for her characters. She would, she decided, make them gentlemen and a lady. Thus, their adventures, their desires and their tribulations would be all the more dramatic.

And so Joan Bennett, who co-stars with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in the picture, comes to the screen as a cultured, refined woman who suddenly finds herself a captive of the jungle, marooned in the camp of six explorers.

Donahue's Orchestra At Strand Two Days

Al Donahue, one of the more popular orchestra leaders, will appear at the Strand theater, for two days only, with a midnight show Sunday, and will play continuous performances Monday.

Donahue, one of the better sellers on Vocalion records, comes to Cumberland direct from engagements at the Strand theater in New York City; The Rainbow Room in Radio City, N. Y., Frank Dailey's Meadowbrook in Cedar Grove, N. J., and at present is on a tour of the leading colleges where he is featured at the "proms".

He is to play the Johns Hopkins College "prom" in Baltimore on February 22.

At the Cumberland engagement, Donahue, will offer the same presentation that was seen at the Strand, N. Y., Rainbow Room, and Meadowbrook engagements.

Featured with unusual musical organization are such favorite radio stars as Paula Kelly; Phil Brito, heard over NBC every Tuesday on his own radio programs; Charlie Caroll, who is called the "Whacky Drummer" and many others.

The featured attraction on the screen for this engagement will be "Charlie Chan in Panama" featuring Sidney Toler and others.

Once again Darryl F. Zanuck produces a merry domestic comedy based on a hilarious idea: an ex-husband who wants to find a husband for his wife so he can stop paying heavy alimony but who balks when she turns down the prospect he dips up for her in favor of a Romeo. The cast includes Joel McCrea, Nancy Kelley, Roland Young, Mary Boland, Cesar Romero, Mary Healey and Lyle Talbot.

Maryland To Have A Broadway Show

A Broadway show, brought here by Nils Thor Granlund, will play the Maryland stage this Sunday midnight and Monday. Special performances will be given each afternoon and evening to accomodate the expected crowds. It is exactly the same show which is playing this week at the RKO Shubert theater in Cincinnati and will play the Lyric theater in Indianapolis next week. It is also the same show that played Loew's State theater, New York, three times this year.

Granlund will bring with him for the local engagement his show girls of Broadway, together with art models. A beautiful "White Russian" princess, Sonya Katlarskaya, who was singing in a cabaret in Shanghai; a beautiful English girl, Sylvia McKaye, Chiquita of Cuba and Gloria Anderson of Sweden are some of the beauties who will be in the cast.

Grantlund is not an actor, but is a producer of girl revues, and manages to present funny shows in vaudeville. He says he is responsible for "Hellzapoppin" as it was his idea he took to the Shuberts and Olson and Johnson, that resulted in their opening on Broadway. His present show is described as both funny and fast.

The screen attraction is Edmund Lowe in the drama, "Wolf of New York".

Real Fast Talking In Maryland Picture

A fast - talking picture is Hollywood's description of Howard Hawks' Columbia picture, "His Girl Friday," which stars Cary Grant and Rosalind Russell at the Maryland theater with Ralph Bellamy in a major role. The romantic comedy drama, is said to hit a new speed pace for fast cross-fire talk.

Lodge Cunningham, in charge of the sound recording for the film, points out that the average person will not exceed eighty words a minute during ordinary conversation; that court reporters are considered competent to meet any emergency if they can transcribe 140 words a minute and that the late Floyd Gibbons, pioneer in the fast-talking news commentator field, barked 240 words a minute. Grant, Miss Russell and Bellamy maintain a pace between 175 and 250 words a minute in "His Girl Friday."

Hawks, commenting on this terrific pace, said, "There is only one limit to the speed with which speech can be recorded. It must be articulate and easily understood by everyone listening."

60 FRENZIED SECONDS!

Sixty frenzied seconds and the Panama Canal is doomed! But we must not reveal the conclusion of "Charlie Chan in Panama". Above, (left to right) Kane Richmond, Jean Rogers and Sidney Toler (as Chan) in the Twentieth Century-Fox film opening Sunday Midnight and also showing Monday in connection with the appearance of Al Donahue and his orchestra on the stage.

IN MARYLAND STAGE REVUE

One of the features with N. T. G. and his revue opening Sunday midnight and also playing Monday on the Maryland theater stage.

McCoy Western Closes Today at the Embassy

Closing today at the Embassy theater will be the double feature attraction consisting of Tim McCoy in the western "Texas Wildcats." The second feature is Charles Bickford in "Thou Shalt Not Kill."

In addition to the two features there will be another chapter of "Overland with Kit Carson."

Opening tomorrow at the Embassy will be the twin hit attraction consisting of Samuel Goldwyn's "Hurricane," starring Dorothy Lamour, John Hall and C. Aubrey Smith, and Jack Holt in "Fugitive at Large." Patricia Ellis and Stanley Fields have supporting roles in this film.

Dead End Kids Are Now on Garden Screen

"The Dead End Kids on Dress Parade," a Warner Brothers picture starring the Dead End Kids, is now at the Garden Theater.

In this picture, the famous bunch of screen toughs do a complete turnabout and become model American youths in a modern American military academy. Still the scrap-happy holligans, however, Leo Gorcey leads the Kids, this time as a city slicker who comes to military school to show the cadets a thing or two.

How Gorcey gets a little discipline himself by the other Dead Enders, Billy Halop, Gabried Dell, Huntz Hall, Bobby Jordan, and Bernard Punsley, forms the basis of this lively film of life in a boys' military academy.

Although Purnell Pratt has played in more than thirty films establishing himself as a character man of the screen, until 1936, he had never been under a long term contract to a studio; preferring to free lance.

His screen role in Republic's "Come on, Rangers," now at the Garden Theater, tops a succession of roles including "Alibi", "Ladies of the Big House", "Common Clay", "The Trespasser", "Scarface", "Cassino Murder Case", "Diamond Jim", "A Night at the Opera" and "Dancing Feet."

He is cast as an unscrupulous politician in, 'Come On, Rangers", which stars Cowboy Roy Rogers. Supporting players include Raymond Hatton, J. Farrell MacDonald, Bruce MacFarline, Lane Chandler, Harry Woods and Mary Hart.

The wide-spread superstition that to break a mirror causes seven years of bad luck originated with the Romans about the first century of the Christian era.

Chief Justice Hughes's father was a minister and was deeply disappointed when his son chose the law for his calling instead of the ministry.

Vaudeville in America originated in Boston in 1883.

'Green Hell' Has Daring Love Theme

Six men and one woman marooned hundreds of miles from civilization in a dence Amazon jungle.

Such is the premise of "Green Hell," initial Famous Productions pictures for Universal release, now at the Liberty theater.

Many stories could be built on that foundation. Frances Marion, ace Hollywood scenarist, is said to have considered more than a dozen different attacks and discarded them as being "too close to the usual formula."

Then she conceived the development of this idea which has reached the screen in "Green Hell." As a first step toward making her story "different," she decided against drawing on the lower levels of humanity for her characters. She would, she decided, make them gentlemen and a lady. Thus, their adventures, their desires and their tribulations would be all the more dramatic.

And so Joan Bennett, who co-stars with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in the picture, comes to the screen as a cultured, refined woman who suddenly finds herself a captive of the jungle, marooned in the camp of six explorers.

Donahue's Orchestra At Strand Two Days

Al Donahue, one of the more popular orchestra leaders, will appear at the Strand theater, for two days only, with a midnight show Sunday, and will play continuous performances Monday.

Donahue, one of the better sellers on Vocalion records, comes to Cumberland direct from engagements at the Strand theater in New York City; The Rainbow Room in Radio City, N. Y., Frank Dailey's Meadowbrook in Cedar Grove, N. J., and at present is on a tour of the leading colleges where he is featured at the "proms".

He is to play the Johns Hopkins College "prom" in Baltimore on February 22.

At the Cumberland engagement, Donahue, will offer the same presentation that was seen at the Strand, N. Y., Rainbow Room, and Meadowbrook engagements.

Featured with unusual musical organization are such favorite radio stars as Paula Kelly; Phil Brito, heard over NBC every Tuesday on his own radio programs; Charlie Caroll, who is called the "Whacky Drummer" and many others.

The featured attraction on the screen for this engagement will be "Charlie Chan in Panama" featuring Sidney Toler and others.

Once again Darryl F. Zanuck produces a merry domestic comedy based on a hilarious idea: an ex-husband who wants to find a husband for his wife so he can stop paying heavy alimony but who balks when she turns down the prospect he dips up for her in favor of a Romeo. The cast includes Joel McCrea, Nancy Kelley, Roland Young, Mary Boland, Cesar Romero, Mary Healey and Lyle Talbot.

Maryland To Have A Broadway Show

A Broadway show, brought here by Nils Thor Granlund, will play the Maryland stage this Sunday midnight and Monday. Special performances will be given each afternoon and evening to accomodate the expected crowds. Rates Are Tripled For Grahamtown Water Customers

Company Will Reduce Prices if Revenue Is More than Needed

Frostburg, Feb. 16—The Public Service Commission of Maryland has approved a schedule of rates submitted by the Frostburg-Grahamtown Water Company, a privately owned concern which is purchasing water from the city of Frostburg and selling it to Grahamtown water users who had been short of water for several months. The rates effective with the change of the source of supply will triple the rates in effect when the company purchased water from the Frostburg Water Company.

In approving the rates, the Commission stated its action was taken with the distinct understanding that if at the end of the first month it is found that more revenue is produced than is necessary to provide for the higher cost of water obtained from the city of Frostburg, the charges will at once be reduced to the proper level.

The watre company will be compelled to keep an accurate record of receipts and expenditures during the month and report to the Commission at the earliest possible date after the end of the month.

The action of the Commission was revealed in a letter received here yesterday by the Frostburg-Grahamtown Water Company and signed by Frank Harper, executive secretary of the Commission who stated that "In order to keep the cost down to the lowest possible level it is essential that the company make every effort promptly to collect all charges for water service and the service of those consumers who do not pay would be discontinued after written notice."

Vale Summit Scouts

The celebration of Boy Scout week by the Vale Summit troop of the Potomac Council, which started February 8 with a troop visitation night and closed Wednesday, Feb. 14, with a program honoring the memory of Abraham Lincoln, was reported to be the most elaborate affair the troop and its leaders have so far attempted.

The entire troop of St. Michael's church, this city, was the guest of the Vale Summit troop on the opening night. Saturday, Feb. 10, was Scout fun day, featuring a hike to Dan's Rock. Sunday, Feb. 11, was observed as "reverence day", the Scouts attending the Vale Summit Methodist church to hear a sermon by the Rev. Norris A. Lineweaver. Feb. 12 was designated "rededication day", when appropriate exercises were held. This affair was attended by officers of the Vale Summit parent-teacher association who gave short talks in praise of the work being done by the Vale Summit troop and its leaders. The troop was also congratulated for winning the "ten year" award.

One of the largest events of the week was parent night, Friday, Feb. 9, when the following program was rendered: song and Scout Vespers, by the troop; Scout oath and allegiance to the flag, by the Scouts; address, Scoutmaster Thomas LaVelle; review of basketball games, Willis Scott, chairman; signaling exhibition, James Scott, Marshall Albright and Thomas Cain; musical selection, Kenney trio and the Scout prayer.

The Vale Summit troop is made up as follows: Willis C. Scott, chairman; Theodore Davis and Leo Kenney, members of the Scout committee; Thomas LaVelle, Scoutmaster, Walter Williams, assistant scoutmaster, and the following scouts: Marshall Albright, Francis Blubaugh, Theodore Davis, Lloyd Davis, Oscar Llewellyn, Melvin Loar, William Urbas, Thomas Cain, James Scott, William Leake, Lewis Sleeman, Arthur McKee, Stanley McKee and Olin Loar. The following are cubs: Lewis Henry, Glenn Loar, Emery Loar, William Duckworth, Ralph Davis, Harold Scott, Joseph Kenney, Lewis Albright, Paul and James Higgins.

Yorwerth Mills Rites

Funeral services for the late Yorwerth Mills, 38, former resident of Frostburg who had been employed in the press room of The Detroit Press since April, 1925, was held Wednesday afternoon at the Harvey A. Neeley chapel, 5683 Maybury Grand avenue, Detroit.

Mr. Mills died of pneumonia Sunday night in Receiving Hospital, Detroit. Born in Wales, June 1, 1902, he came to Frostburg with his parents when he was eight years old. The family moved to Detroit eight years later. Surviving are his wife, Edna, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Mills and six brothers and sisters, Mrs. Constance Service, Miss Edna May Mills, William, James, Edith, David and Edmund Mills, all of Detroit. "Lady, Be God" is one of the laugh hits of the season, an intermingling of mirthful lines, rollicking situations and clever characterizations.

School Lunches

Over 300 Hardy county school children are receiving hot lunches daily through the seven centers established for this purpose by the WPA.

According to Mrs. R. Karl McNeill, who is in charge of the hot lunch project in this county, two new centers have been opened during the past week. In the Wardensville school, the P.T.A. is sponsoring the work and provided lunches for 45 students on February 5, its opening day. Workers in the project are Mrs. Ella Miley, Mrs. Bertha Webster, Mrs. Dantie Landaker, and Miss Hilda Strosnider.

Hot lunches were served to the children of the Baker's Run school for the first time last Wednesday. Miss Edith Godlove and Mrs. Myrtle Hawkins have charge of the work in this school. Other centers throughout the county are Moorefield, Fort Run, Rig, Wallace and Run schools.

Many individuals as well as several organizations have contributed to this project.

Politicians Must Pay Fees for Billboards

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 16. (AP)—Road Commissioner Burr H. Simpson said today the 1939 state outdoor advertising law applies to political candidates, and if they post highway signs they will have to pay.

An annual license fee of $100, plus $1 for each sign, is required by the statute, but "indoor" signs are exempted, Simpson said in a letter to district engineers.

Also exempted from the ruling is advertising leased from any commercial company owning billboards.

Country Roads Near Grantsville Are Impassable

Many Are Snowbound by Six to Eighteen Foot Drifts

Grantsville, Feb. 16.—For the second time in the past few weeks people in the rural sections are snowbound. The blizzard which raged all day Wednesday and part of the night piled snow in drifts several feet high. School buses from Avilton, Finzel, Bittinger and New Germany did not get in at all yesterday, but with the exception of Bittinger, they were on hand this morning. It required about six hours for the snow plow to open the New Germany road last night it was said. The Bittinger bus broke an axle trying to get through Wednesday and it is doubtful if it will be able to get in for about a week.

Louis J. Ross, supervisor, termed this the worst snow this winter. He said he had a crew of about 100 men working on the Bittinger road this morning and unless more wind caused the snow to drift further, he expected to have the road open by Monday. The supervisor said the men had to use shovels as the snow was drifted to a depth of six to eight feet and was packed so solid it was impossible to use a snow plow. In some places the drifts reached a depth of ten or twelve feet and others of from fifteen to eighteen feet. Traffic on the main highway was back to normal this morning.

Offer $1,000 Reward To Anyone Finding A "Worse Highway"

New Martinsville, W. Va., Feb. 16 (AP) — The Chamber of Commerce today offered a qualified $1,000 reward to anyone who could find a "worse highway" in West Virginia than Route 20.

The chamber made public its offer after receiving from Governor Homer Holt an answer to its complaints against the condition of the road. The chamber said Holt claimed the state spent $196,000 on the route last year.

Route 20 runs from New Martinsville through Wetzel county to Harrison county. The chamber qualified its offer by saying any other highway proposed for the reward must be of comparable length and serve a territory of equal population.

Two persons were killed at a railroad crossing on the route near Jacksonburg several weeks ago.

Rates Are Tripled For Grahamtown Water Customers

Company Will Reduce Prices if Revenue Is More than Needed

Frostburg, Feb. 16—The Public Service Commission of Maryland has approved a schedule of rates submitted by the Frostburg-Grahamtown Water Company, a privately owned concern which is purchasing water from the city of Frostburg and selling it to Grahamtown water users who had been short of water for several months. The rates effective with the change of the source of supply will triple the rates in effect when the company purchased water from the Frostburg Water Company.

In approving the rates, the Commission stated its action was taken with the distinct understanding that if at the end of the first month it is found that more revenue is produced than is necessary to provide for the higher cost of water obtained from the city of Frostburg, the charges will at once be reduced to the proper level.

The watre company will be compelled to keep an accurate record of receipts and expenditures during the month and report to the Commission at the earliest possible date after the end of the month.

The action of the Commission was revealed in a letter received here yesterday by the Frostburg-Grahamtown Water Company and signed by Frank Harper, executive secretary of the Commission who stated that "In order to keep the cost down to the lowest possible level it is essential that the company make every effort promptly to collect all charges for water service and the service of those consumers who do not pay would be discontinued after written notice."

Vale Summit Scouts

The celebration of Boy Scout week by the Vale Summit troop of the Potomac Council, which started February 8 with a troop visitation night and closed Wednesday, Feb. 14, with a program honoring the memory of Abraham Lincoln, was reported to be the most elaborate affair the troop and its leaders have so far attempted.

The entire troop of St. Michael's church, this city, was the guest of the Vale Summit troop on the opening night, Saturday, Feb. 10, was Scout fun day, featuring a hike to Dan's Rock. Sunday, Feb. 11, was observed as "reverence day", the Scouts attending the Vale Summit Methodist church to hear a sermon by the Rev. Norris A. Lineweaver. Feb. 12 was designated "rededication day", when appropriate exercises were held. This affair was attended by officers of the Vale Summit parent-teacher association who gave short talks in praise of the work being done by the Vale Summit troop and its leaders. The troop was also congratulated for winning the "ten year" award.

One of the largest events of the week was parent night, Friday, Feb. 9, when the following program was rendered: song and Scout Vespers, by the troop; Scout oath and allegiance to the flag, by the Scouts; address, Scoutmaster Thomas LaVelle; review of basketball games, Willis Scott, chairman; signaling exhibition, James Scott, Marshall Albright and Thomas Cain; musical selection, Kenney trio and the Scout prayer.

The Vale Summit troop is made up as follows: Willis C. Scott, chairman; Theodore Davis and Leo Kenney, members of the Scout committee; Thomas LaVelle, Scoutmaster, Walter Williams, assistant scoutmaster, and the following scouts: Marshall Albright, Francis Blubaugh, Theodore Davis, Lloyd Davis, Oscar Llewellyn, Melvin Loar, William Urbas, Thomas Cain, James Scott, William Leake, Lewis Sleeman, Arthur McKee, Stanley McKee and Olin Loar. Politicians Must Pay Fees for Billboards

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 16. (AP)—Road Commissioner Burr H. Simpson said today the 1939 state outdoor advertising law applies to political candidates, and if they post highway signs they will have to pay.

An annual license fee of $100, plus $1 for each sign, is required by the statute, but "indoor" signs are exempted, Simpson said in a letter to district engineers.

Also exempted from the ruling is advertising leased from any commercial company owning billboards.

Country Roads Near Grantsville Are Impassable

Many Are Snowbound by Six to Eighteen Foot Drifts

Grantsville, Feb. 16.—For the second time in the past few weeks people in the rural sections are snowbound. The blizzard which raged all day Wednesday and part of the night piled snow in drifts several feet high. School buses from Avilton, Finzel, Bittinger and New Germany did not get in at all yesterday, but with the exception of Bittinger, they were on hand this morning. It required about six hours for the snow plow to open the New Germany road last night it was said. The Bittinger bus broke an axle trying to get through Wednesday and it is doubtful if it will be able to get in for about a week.

Louis J. Ross, supervisor, termed this the worst snow this winter. He said he had a crew of about 100 men working on the Bittinger road this morning and unless more wind caused the snow to drift further, he expected to have the road open by Monday. The supervisor said the men had to use shovels as the snow was drifted to a depth of six to eight feet and was packed so solid it was impossible to use a snow plow. In some places the drifts reached a depth of ten or twelve feet and others of from fifteen to eighteen feet. Traffic on the main highway was back to normal this morning.

Brief Mention

Mrs. Byron H. Bender entertained the Missionary Society of St. John's Evangelical and Reformed church at her home at Little Crossings Wednesday evening. Because of the storm many members were unable to be present.

The Southern States Cooperative will hold a supper conference at the Casselman hotel here tomorrow evening to discuss plans for their spring program. The meeting is called for 7:30 o'clock. Max F. Borden, Baltimore, representative, and L. O. Brumback, district manager, Richmond, Va., are scheduled to address the group.

Mrs. William E. Tarbell entertained the Teachers Club at three tables of contract bridge last evening at her home. Mrs. C. O. Bender, Mrs. Ira L. Huff and Mrs. Frank E. Conkling were additional guests.

Mrs. F. L. Osborne arrived last night from her home at East Orange, N. J., and will spend two weeks here as a guest of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Zeller. Mr. and Mrs. Warren Brown, Buffalo, N. Y., stopped here yesterday for a brief visit with Mr. and Mrs. Zeller before proceeding to Florida for a short vacation.

C. O. Bender, Elwood Klotz, Blaire Buckel, Walter Youngin and Henry L. Durst attended a sales meeting at the Uniontown, Pa., Country Club this evening.

The Grantsville basketball team will meet the Friendsville quintet in the school auditorium here Monday afternoon.

Scott Holliday was fined $10.75 at a hearing before the local magistrate, on charges of exceeding the speed limit. The arrest was made by State Police Officer J. T. Knight.

Offer $1,000 Reward To Anyone Finding A "Worse Highway"

New Martinsville, W. Va., Feb. 16 (AP) — The Chamber of Commerce today offered a qualified $1,000 reward to anyone who could find a "worse highway" in West Virginia than Route 20.

The chamber made public its offer after receiving from Governor Homer Holt an answer to its complaints against the condition of the road. The chamber said Holt claimed the state spent $196,000 on the route last year.

Route 20 runs from New Martinsville through Wetzel county to Harrison county. The chamber qualified its offer by saying any other highway proposed for the reward must be of comparable length and serve a territory of equal population.

Two persons were killed at a railroad crossing on the route near Jacksonburg several weeks ago.

Terrific Storm Did Not Dampen Republican Rally

Local Speakers 'Pinch Hit' at Successful Petersburg Meeting

Petersburg, W. Va., Feb. 16— The most severe storm in the state in years ,which broke early yesterday morning and disrupted communication and air lines and blocked roads throughout a large area of West Virginia, prevented the arrival of Walter S. Hallanan, Robert H. C. Kay and Calvert L. Estill, all of Charleston, W. Va., to address a giant Republican Lincoln Day dinner held Wednesday in the graded school building.

The storm failed to dampen the ardor of those who filled the building to overflowing, and local leaders responding on the spur of the moment, turned what had looked like a failure into one of the greatest rallies the party has ever seen here.

Advised that Hallanan and his party would be unable to get here, the committee in charge of the dinner phoned to Kingwood in an effort to get Melvin Snyder, former Republican nominee for Congress, to appear on the after dinner program. Snyder got as far as Terra Alta, when the blizzard stopped him from coming further, and forced him to remain there. He could not even return to Kingwood. D. E. Cuppett Sr., of Thomas, who was to act as toastmaster, was also snowbound.

Last night's dinner did not lack enthusiasm, however, and a good time was enjoyed by those who attended.

A. J. Welton presided, and inspiring speeches were made by D. C. Harper; H. G. Muntzing and Hetzel Pownall, Moorefield; E. L. Judy, Petersburg. B. F. Mitchell led the group singing with Mrs. J. M. K. Reid at the piano. Rev. Carl Welch delivered the invocation. A telegram from Mr. Hallanan was read by Mr. Welton. Over one hundred and fifty attended the meeting.

Invite to Dance

The members of Company 519, Camp North Fork, have issued invitations to a dance which will be held there Saturday evening. Alex Goldberg and his Goldpieces will furnish the music.

Missionary Program

Sunday evening, Feb. 18, an interesting program will be given at the Church of the Brethren. Mrs. Norman Seese, the pastor's wife, will tell some things about China. She will sing in the Chinese language and show how they dress and tell something about their ways of living. Rev. and Mrs. Seese spent several years in China before coming to Petersburg to serve the Brethren church.

Mrs. Susan Sears

Mrs. Susan Layton Sears, widow of the late Joseph Sears, died at her home here Wednesday after an illness of several months duration. She was a daughter of the late Joseph Layton and Susan Smith Layton, Petersburg. She is survived by two sons, Ambrose and John Sears, Petersburg, and two brothers, J. H. Layton and John Layton, Pansy, and a host of grandchildren. She was a member of the United Brethren church Petersburg. Burial was in the Maple hill cemetery.

Brief Mention

Mr. and Mrs. Edward George, Petersburg, announce the arrival of a daughter at their home here Wednesday.

Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Oliver left today for Hagerstown, Maryland, where they will visit for a few days.

The Townsend club will hold its regular meeting at the Court House Monday evening, February 19., at 7:30 o'clock.

The Rev. R. N. Young, a former pastor of the United Brethren Church here, who is now residing at Keyser, underwent another operation in a Cumberland hospital Tuesday of this week. A daughter Miss Marie Young, Baltimore, is nursing her father.

U. L. Harman, Marydel, Deleware, and J. H. Harman, Dover, Deleware, who spent several days here visiting Mr. and Mrs. George Ours, have returned home.

Miss Mary Fundenburg, Joe Wimer and T. J. Grove are at Morgantown this week attending Farm and Home Week at West Virginia University.

Mr. and Mrs. George Porter, Washington, D. C., have announced the arrival of a son at their home in that city. Mr. and Mrs. Porter formerly lived here and Mr. Porter was connected with the CCC Camp.

Mrs. Melvin Muntzing has returned from visiting her mother at Beverly. Her mother returned with her and will visit here for a few days.

E. O. Brill was the purchaser of the Elizabeth Freed property from K. C. VanMeter, Jr., trustee, on Town Hill Saturday, at a price of $300.00.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Schaffer, Bayard, W. Va., have announced the arrival of a daughter born Wednesday at the Parsons hospital. Mr. Schaffer is a former high school teacher in Bayard high school.

Special services honoring Dr. W. T. Highberger, Maysville, whose birthday will be Sunday, are being held at the Union Church, Maysville, Sunday afternoon.

Free Course Given In Farm Mechanics At Meyersdale

Open to All--Requirement for Certificate Is 80 per cent Attendance

Meyersdale, Pa., Feb. 16 — The department of vocational agriculture of the local high school again offers this year a part time course in farm mechanics for out-of-school boys and men living on farms in order that they may secure as much information as possible in the modern way of doing things on the farm. The classes will meet in the basement of the new high school building each Monday evening at 8 o'clock, and will continue throughout the remainder of the school year.

The courses will be under the direction of Prof. J. Hartshorn, voag supervisor of the high school, and there will be no charge for enrollment or instruction. A certificate will be awarded those who complete the course, and the minimum requirements are 80% attendance.

Want Cannery

Business leaders from Grantsville, Md., Salisbury, Springs and Meyersdale will meet Tuesday evening, February 20th, at 7:30 o'clock, in the schoolhouse at Springs to discuss the movement started by citizens from the southern end of Somerset county to secure a much needed canning factory. It is claimed that such a factory in this section would provide a medium for the more satisfactory marketing of the vegetables and fruits grown by the farmers in this community.

It is announced that able speakers who are familiar with the canning industry will be present at the meeeting to discuss the feasibility of locating such an industry at some central point in this territory.

Hoyman Funeral Rites

Services for William E. Hoyman, Jr., 43, of Summit township, were held this afternoon in Amity Evangelical and Reformed church by the Rev. Nelson C. Brown, assisted by the Rev. Howard K. Hilner. Interment was in Garrett.

He was a son of William and Tena (Keefer) Hoyman. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Estella (Miller) Hoyman, a daughter, Dorothy, and an adopted son, William Hoyman, Jr., and these brothers and sisters: Lewis Hoyman, Frostburg, Md.; Roy and Alvin Hoyman, Garrett; Mrs. Donald Owens, Johnstown; Mrs. Arthur Knepp, Mrs. Mahlon Fike, Mrs. Charles Long, and Mrs. Joseph Barnhart, all of Meyersdale, and Mrs. Irvin Baker, Garrett. His father resides in Cumberland, Md.

Street Marking Plans

At the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce it was decided to have a joint meeting with the borough council to start a project for the marking of the streets. Under the proposed arrangement the council is to furnish the materials for the signs and have the NYA workshop make the signs, the work, of course, to be done gratis, which is the rule under the setup of the NYA.

Personal Mention

Prof. George Pfrogner, orchestra instructor of the local high school, with Miss Dorothy Critchfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul M. Critchfield, North street; Miss Barbara Burke, Shade township, and Emmet Heiple, Rockwood, left last evening for Berwyn to take part in the All-State Orchestra Festival, and will return home Saturday evening.

Raymond Nessly, Keystone street, is spending the weekend as the guest of his brother, Carleton Nessly, York.

Mrs. Ernest Boyer, Broadway street, had as her guests this week her daughter, Mrs. John Lichliter, and infant, of Salisbury.

At the meeting of the Boynton Parent-Teacher association last evening the Rev. Carl Buterbaugh, pastor of the local Methodist church, as guest speaker, delivered an address on the subject, "Effects of the Home Upon Children."

Mrs. Carl Wahl, Cumberland, Md., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Saylor, Olinger street.

Mrs. J. E. McCartney, Meyers avenue, returned last evening from McKeesport, where she visited several days with her sister, Mrs. Savina Skewis.

West Virginia Waits For Sun To Clear Off Crippling Snow Blanket

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 16. (AP)— The state dug through a rapidly melting covering of snow today to open every primary highway to at least one-way traffic, and waited for rain.

Only one route, State 88, was not completely cleared, and the Road Commission said that in Brooke county traffic had been thrown into one lane.

Many secondary roads, piled high with snow drifts during the storm, still were closed. The commission said the greatest trouble was in the Elkins area, Northern Panhandle, Preston and Webster counties.

Temperatures climbed in the state from near-zero levels, to the 30's, and a bright sun in many sections aided in melting the snow and ice.

The state had an average low of 10 degrees.

A forecast of rain, meanwhile, increased fears of high water in some of the smaller streams.

Coal Company Store Burns

Welch, W. Va., Feb. 16. (AP)—The Kingston-Pocahontas Coal Company store at nearby Big Sandy was destroyed by fire today with an estimated $3,000 to $5,000 loss of stock.

Elmore Graham, the manager, reported the blaze apparently started when a stove overturned in an office. Mail of a postoffice in the structure was removed.

"There's Money About," She Says--They Find It

Bluefield, W. Va., Feb. 16. (AP)—Harriet Romanza Bailey's oft-repeated assertion that "there's a lot of money around this house" led relatives after her death to a gold and silver hoard of $3,000.

Mrs. Molley Lewis of Tazewell Road, a niece, said Mrs. Bailey, 84, a widow who lived alone, had the money hidden in chimney crevices and attic spots.

In addition $4,000 was on deposit in Bluefield banks, Mrs. Lewis said.

Return Murder Verdict

Pineville, W. Va., Feb. 16. (AP)—A conviction of second degree murder was returned today against Alvin Dee Atwood, 30, of Corinne, for the slaying of Oscar Doneleau, 31, after a dice game at Corinne last June 3.

Atwood pleaded temporary insanity. A motion by his attorney for a new trial will be argued Monday.

Local Speakers 'Pinch Hit' at Successful Petersburg Meeting

Petersburg, W. Va., Feb. 16— The most severe storm in the state in years ,which broke early yesterday morning and disrupted communication and air lines and blocked roads throughout a large area of West Virginia, prevented the arrival of Walter S. Hallanan, Robert H. C. Kay and Calvert L. Estill, all of Charleston, W. Va., to address a giant Republican Lincoln Day dinner held Wednesday in the graded school building.

The storm failed to dampen the ardor of those who filled the building to overflowing, and local leaders responding on the spur of the moment, turned what had looked like a failure into one of the greatest rallies the party has ever seen here.

Advised that Hallanan and his party would be unable to get here, the committee in charge of the dinner phoned to Kingwood in an effort to get Melvin Snyder, former Republican nominee for Congress, to appear on the after dinner program. Snyder got as far as Terra Alta, when the blizzard stopped him from coming further, and forced him to remain there. He could not even return to Kingwood. D. E. Cuppett Sr., of Thomas, who was to act as toastmaster, was also snowbound.

Last night's dinner did not lack enthusiasm, however, and a good time was enjoyed by those who attended.

A. J. Welton presided, and inspiring speeches were made by D. C. Harper; H. G. Muntzing and Hetzel Pownall, Moorefield; E. L. Judy, Petersburg. B. F. Mitchell led the group singing with Mrs. J. M. K. Reid at the piano. Rev. Carl Welch delivered the invocation. A telegram from Mr. Hallanan was read by Mr. Welton. Over one hundred and fifty attended the meeting.

Invite to Dance

The members of Company 519, Camp North Fork, have issued invitations to a dance which will be held there Saturday evening. Alex Goldberg and his Goldpieces will furnish the music.

Missionary Program

Sunday evening, Feb. 18, an interesting program will be given at the Church of the Brethren. Mrs. Norman Seese, the pastor's wife, will tell some things about China. She will sing in the Chinese language and show how they dress and tell something about their ways of living. Rev. and Mrs. Seese spent several years in China before coming to Petersburg to serve the Brethren church.

Mrs. Susan Sears

Mrs. Susan Layton Sears, widow of the late Joseph Sears, died at her home here Wednesday after an illness of several months duration. She was a daughter of the late Joseph Layton and Susan Smith Layton, Petersburg. She is survived by two sons, Ambrose and John Sears, Petersburg, and two brothers, J. H. Layton and John Layton, Pansy, and a host of grandchildren. She was a member of the United Brethren church Petersburg. Burial was in the Maple hill cemetery.

Brief Mention

Mr. and Mrs. Edward George, Petersburg, announce the arrival of a daughter at their home here Wednesday.

Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Oliver left today for Hagerstown, Maryland, where they will visit for a few days.

The Townsend club will hold its regular meeting at the Court House Monday evening, February 19., at 7:30 o'clock.

The Rev. R. N. Young, a former pastor of the United Brethren Church here, who is now residing at Keyser, underwent another operation in a Cumberland hospital Tuesday of this week. A daughter Miss Marie Young, Baltimore, is nursing her father.

U. L. Harman, Marydel, Deleware, and J. H. Harman, Dover, Deleware, who spent several days here visiting Mr. and Mrs. George Ours, have returned home.

Miss Mary Fundenburg, Joe Wimer and T. J. Grove are at Morgantown this week attending Farm and Home Week at West Virginia University.

Mr. and Mrs. George Porter, Washington, D. C., have announced the arrival of a son at their home in that city. Mr. and Mrs. Porter formerly lived here and Mr. Porter was connected with the CCC Camp.

Mrs. Melvin Muntzing has returned from visiting her mother at Beverly. Her mother returned with her and will visit here for a few days.

E. O. Brill was the purchaser of the Elizabeth Freed property from K. C. VanMeter, Jr., trustee, on Town Hill Saturday, at a price of $300.00.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Schaffer, Bayard, W. Va., have announced the arrival of a daughter born Wednesday at the Parsons hospital. Mr. Schaffer is a former high school teacher in Bayard high school.

Special services honoring Dr. W. T. Highberger, Maysville, whose birthday will be Sunday, are being held at the Union Church, Maysville, Sunday afternoon.

Free Course Given In Farm Mechanics At Meyersdale

Open to All--Requirement for Certificate Is 80 per cent Attendance

Meyersdale, Pa., Feb. 16 — The department of vocational agriculture of the local high school again offers this year a part time course in farm mechanics for out-of-school boys and men living on farms in order that they may secure as much information as possible in the modern way of doing things on the farm. The classes will meet in the basement of the new high school building each Monday evening at 8 o'clock, and will continue throughout the remainder of the school year.

The courses will be under the direction of Prof. J. Hartshorn, voag supervisor of the high school, and there will be no charge for enrollment or instruction. A certificate will be awarded those who complete the course, and the minimum requirements are 80% attendance.

Want Cannery

Business leaders from Grantsville, Md., Salisbury, Springs and Meyersdale will meet Tuesday evening, February 20th, at 7:30 o'clock, in the schoolhouse at Springs to discuss the movement started by citizens from the southern end of Somerset county to secure a much needed canning factory. It is claimed that such a factory in this section would provide a medium for the more satisfactory marketing of the vegetables and fruits grown by the farmers in this community.

It is announced that able speakers who are familiar with the canning industry will be present at the meeeting to discuss the feasibility of locating such an industry at some central point in this territory.

Hoyman Funeral Rites

Services for William E. Hoyman, Jr., 43, of Summit township, were held this afternoon in Amity Evangelical and Reformed church by the Rev. Nelson C. Brown, assisted by the Rev. Howard K. Hilner. Interment was in Garrett.

He was a son of William and Tena (Keefer) Hoyman. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Estella (Miller) Hoyman, a daughter, Dorothy, and an adopted son, William Hoyman, Jr., and these brothers and sisters: Lewis Hoyman, Frostburg, Md.; Roy and Alvin Hoyman, Garrett; Mrs. Donald Owens, Johnstown; Mrs. Arthur Knepp, Mrs. Mahlon Pike, Mrs. Charles Long, and Mrs. Joseph Barnhart, all of Meyersdale, and Mrs. Irvin Baker, Garrett. His father resides in Cumberland, Md.

Street Marking Plans

At the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce it was decided to have a joint meeting with the borough council to start a project for the marking of the streets. Under the proposed arrangement the council is to furnish the materials for the signs and have the NYA workshop make the signs, the work, of course, to be done gratis, which is the rule under the setup of the NYA.

Personal Mention

Prof. George Pfrogner, orchestra instructor of the local high school, with Miss Dorothy Critchfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul M. Critchfield, North street; Miss Barbara Burke, Shade township, and Emmet Heiple, Rockwood, left last evening for Berwyn to take part in the All-State Orchestra Festival, and will return home Saturday evening.

Raymond Nessly, Keystone street, is spending the weekend as the guest of his brother, Carleton Nessly, York.

Mrs. Ernest Boyer, Broadway street, had as her guests this week her daughter, Mrs. John Lichliter, and infant, of Salisbury.

At the meeting of the Boynton Parent-Teacher association last evening the Rev. Carl Buterbaugh, pastor of the local Methodist church, as guest speaker, delivered an address on the subject, "Effects of the Home Upon Children."

Mrs. Carl Wahl, Cumberland, Md., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Saylor, Olinger street.

Mrs. J. E. McCartney, Meyers avenue, returned last evening from McKeesport, where she visited several days with her sister, Mrs. Savina Skewis.

Miss Betty Baker, of Latrobe, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Harding, Keystone street.

West Virginia Waits For Sun To Clear Off Crippling Snow Blanket

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 16. (AP)—The state dug through a rapidly melting covering of snow today to open every primary highway to at least one-way traffic, and waited for rain.

Only one route, State 88, was not completely cleared, and the Road Commission said that in Brooke county traffic had been thrown into one lane.

Many secondary roads, piled high with snow drifts during the storm, still were closed. The commission said the greatest trouble was in the Elkins area, Northern Panhandle, Preston and Webster counties.

Temperatures climbed in the state from near-zero levels, to the 30's, and a bright sun in many sections aided in melting the snow and ice.

The state had an average low of 10 degrees.

A forecast of rain, meanwhile, increased fears of high water in some of the smaller streams.

Coal Company Store Burns

Welch, W. Va., Feb. 16. (AP)—The Kingston-Pocahontas Coal Company store at nearby Big Sandy was destroyed by fire today with an estimated $3,000 to $5,000 loss of stock.

Elmore Graham, the manager, reported the blaze apparently started when a stove overturned in an office. Mail of a postoffice in the structure was removed.

"There's Money About," She Says--They Find It

Bluefield, W. Va., Feb. 16. (AP)—Harriet Romanza Bailey's oft-repeated assertion that "there's a lot of money around this house" led relatives after her death to a gold and silver hoard of $3,000.

Mrs. Molley Lewis of Tazewell Road, a niece, said Mrs. Bailey, 84, a widow who lived alone, had the money hidden in chimney crevices and attic spots.

In addition $4,000 was on deposit in Bluefield banks, Mrs. Lewis said.

Return Murder Verdict

Pineville, W. Va., Feb. 16. (AP)—A conviction of second degree murder was returned today against Alvin Dee Atwood, 30, of Corinne, for the slaying of Oscar Doneleau, 31, after a dice game at Corinne last June 3.

Atwood pleaded temporary insanity. A motion by his attorney for a new trial will be argued Monday.

In Memoriams

In loving memory of our mother, Mrs. Martha A. Langer, wife of the late August H. Langer, who died 12 years ago, February 16, 1928.

Just a thought of sweet remembrance,
Just a memory fond and true,
Just a token of affection,
And a heartache still, for you.

Just a sigh for older moments,
Just a smile of love anew,
Just a tear in silence falling,
And a yearning just for you.

In Memoriams

In loving memory of our mother, Mrs. Martha A. Langer, wife of the late August H. Langer, who died 12 years ago, February 16, 1928.

Just a thought of sweet remembrance,
Just a memory fond and true,
Just a token of affection,
And a heartache still, for you.

Just a sigh for older moments,
Just a smile of love anew,
Just a tear in silence falling,
And a yearning just for you.

THE LANGER CHILDREN.

Truck Kills Child, 5; School Boy Injured

Tot Was Coasting Down Driveway In Toy Wagon

A five-year-old Columbia avenue child died at 5 p. m. yesterday three hours after his little red express wagon had collided with a bakery truck.

The boy was Edward Dale Kirk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Kirk, of 800 Columbia avenue. He ran his wagon into the truck which William E. Kegg was backing out of his driveway at 806 Columbia avenue.

Kegg, 62, veteran driver for the Community Baking Company, drove his truck into his driveway yesterday when he came home for dinner.

Accident in Driveway

He started to back out around 2 p. m., didn't notice the Kirk boy coasting down the Kegg driveway from the street. The boy was coming down the drive at a fast clip with his right knee resting on the cart as he pushed with his left leg.

Mrs. Edgar W. Kegg, daughter-in-law of the truck driver, was in the backyard of her home at 808 Columbia avenue when the truck started to back out.

She heard the truck start up and also heard the wagon coming down the driveway. She ran forward to warn the boy, but was too late.

"The little boy didn't see the truck at all," she said. "He was looking back at my son, Billy (age 5), who was following along behind the wagon. The wagon crashed into the right hind wheel of the truck and the boy was thrown to the ground."

Boy Believed Unhurt

The youngster was not unconscious after the upset and did not appear to be badly hurt. Kegg wanted to take the boy to a hospital for a checkup but it wasn't considered necessary.

The boy was examined by a physician at his home. The physician called again at 4 p. m., when the patient appeared to be doing nicely.

The little boy died shortly after 5 p. m. A ruptured kidney was given as the cause of the death after a thorough examination.

Driver Blameless

Kegg, who had driven a truck for twenty-eight years without an accident, was completely exonerated of any blame in the case by State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris after an interview in his office last night.

Kegg, shaken after the tragic accident, explained that he had the door of his truck open as he backed out and could see the driveway in his reflector windshield.

"However, I couldn't see the right-hand side of the drive," he said. "The Kirk boy was rolling down the drive on that side."

(The driveway has concrete runs for the wheels of an automobile with sod in the center.)

Twins and Sister Survive

Prior to the investigation in the State's attorney's office, Mr. Kirk had assured County Investigator Terrence J. Boyle that the tragedy "was an accident." Kirk asked that Investigator Boyle relay this opinion to Kegg.

Investigator Boyle, State Trooper Austin H. Bikle and City Detective Robert E. Flynn investigated the accident yesterday evening.

Corriganville Lad Suffers Broken Legs; Truck Overturns

The thing that so many Corriganville parents dread happened again yesterday afternoon.

A 7-year-old boy was struck down on his way home from school by a loaded coal truck.

As fate would have it, the youngster escaped with his life, but he lies today in Memorial hospital, both legs broken at the knee.

Parents of the community who live along the Mt. Savage road pointed out that their children have to walk for a half mile to a mile along a busy road which affords very little room for pedestrians, as the accompaying photograph shows.

Parents Protest

Parents have protested this situation for a long time and have requested that their children, or at least the smallest ones, be hauled in a school bus. Their plea has not been heeded, however.

The boy who was struck down yesterday was Raymond Joseph Burkett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lee Burkett, who live about three-quarters of a mile up the Mt. Savage road from the school. Mr. Burkett is a Celanese worker.

The driver of the coal truck was Kenneth Bittner, 30, of Sand Patch, Pa., who made a heroic effort to miss the boy when he ran out into the road.

The truck left the road and turned over on its side in a swamp. Neither the driver nor his cousin, Doyle Bittner, also of Sand Patch, was hurt.

The truck driver ran to the home of Harry Raygor nearby to get aid for the boy, who was lying in a heap on the left side of the road. William Yontz, of Mt. Savage, came by, however, and took the boy to the hospital.

Joel Raygor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Raygor, was walking with the boy who was hit.

State Trooper Austin H. Bikle investigated the accident, and ordered the truck driver held under $500 bond pending the outcome of the child's injuries. The driver made bond.

Another Corriganville child was hit last fall by a truck shortly after leaving the school.

County Home Declared In Good Condition

An inspection of the county home yesterday by the county commissioners yesterday revealed that the institution generally was in good shape, the commissioners said.

Commissioner James Holmes stated that outside of some plaster work and other minor repairs, little needs to be done there at the present time.

Orr First To File Election Petition

He lives at 544 Fairview avenue.

Principal To Speak On Youth Problems

Victor D. Heisey, principal of Fort Hill high school, will discuss "Problems of Youth" at a meeting of the Cumberland Ministerial Union at Central Y. M. C. A. Monday at 10:30 a. m.

The Rev. Jesse P. Dawson Jr., pastor of Grace Methodist church, will have charge of the devotional period.

Lower Rail Rates Expected To Boost B&O Business

A reduction in railroad rates to a basic two-cents a mile after March 24 is expected to bring a twenty-five per cent increase in passenger travel out of Cumberland, Matthew W. Grove, traveling passenger agent for the B. & O. said yesterday.

The change from a present two and a half cent rate was ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The two-cent rate was effective from June 1, 1936 to July 25, 1938.

A comparison of the present and new rates follows:

Cumberland to	Present Rate	Ex. New Rate
Washington	$ 3.78	$ 3.05
Baltimore	4.69	3.80
Philadelphia	7.07	5.70
New York	9.32	7.50
Pittsburgh	3.73	3.00
Akron	7.73	5.40
Cleveland	7.07	5.65
Chicago	15.48	12.40
Parkersburg	5.11	4.10
Cincinnati	10.19	8.15
Louisville	12.09	10.10
St. Louis	18.77	15.05

Car Hits Coal Truck, Man's Face Slashed

One man was in Miners hospital at Frostburg and one was in the county jail after a car crashed into the back of a coal truck on Big Savage mountain Thursday night.

The injured man is Marion Riley, 34, of Sykesville, a telephone company lineman, who was a passenger in the car. He was hurled against the windshield and suffered multiple lacerations about the face that required thirty-six stitches to close. The driver, who was cut about the hands, was John E. Garlitz, 24, of 124 McCulloh street, Frostburg.

State Troopers George J. Miller and Austin H. Bikle placed reckless driving charges against Garlitz. They said the truck was operated by Joseph E. May, 722 Leiper street.

Interesting Data Given On Savage River Dam

The Savage River Dam project, now almost three months behind schedule, will make up for lost time when a crew of 1,500 men begins throwing dirt sometime this summer, Owen E. Hitchins, member of the Upper Potomac River Commission, told guests at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon at the Central YMCA yesterday.

Mr. Hitchins stated that the delays had been caused:

1—By difficulties in acquiring the land which will be flooded.

2—By the tardiness of the state forest department in recognizing the right of the workers to work on their land.

3—By the worst winter in twenty-two years.

Eight billion gallons of water will be impounded in the dam, which is scheduled to be completed by March 1, 1942, Mr. Hitchins told an interested audience.

532 Men at Work Now

At the present time the crew of 532 men is concentrating on the tunnel through which the water will flow while the dam is being built and which will be used later as an outlet.

Once the tunnel is completed, work will start on the dam proper, which will be one of the largest earthwork dams in the United States.

Twelve hundred feet thick at the base, the dam will have various layers of different types of soil all laid in to obtain the greatest possible strength and durability. The dam will be 178 feet thick at the top.

Dam Has One Purpose

The sole purpose of the dam, Mr. Hitchins explained, is to store water for release into the Savage river, and thus the Potomac, when the streams are running low during the dry summer months.

Later, the speaker estimated that should the Potomac go dry this dam would supply a minimum flow of water of around eleven million gallons per day for approximately 140 days.

The dam will provide a water backup of around three and a half miles, the speaker said. A shoreline of from fifteen to eighteen miles was predicted.

Scenic Section Opened

"This dam is going to help to open up a hitherto quite unexplored and unusually scenic section," the speaker said.

After tracing the history of the three-million dollar project from its beginning, Hitchins said, "we've had some headaches already; probably will have some more before we get through, but we'll get it done."

The speaker was piled with questions following his talk with the queries ranging from "Will you hold a celebration when the job is done?" to "Will people be allowed to swim in the artifical lake created."

Celebration? Maybe

Hitchins refused to comment on a celebration or on what swimming facilities the lake might offer. He said the lake would be used for drinking water by some communities and that the matter of swimming "is a headache the health department will have to work out."

Once completed, the dam will require only a small operating force, the speaker said.

John J. McMullen, newly appointed chairman of the Upper Potomac River Commission, was unable to be present because of the death of his cousin, Francis J. McMullen.

Busy Committee Starts New Fact-Finding Bee To Help Cumberland

The latest investigation of the committee is to dig up the dope concerning the supply of materials needed in the manufacture of artificial silk at the Celanese Corporation of America.

It is just possible, thinks the committee, that concerns manufacturing products such as machinery, bobbins and spinning and weaving equipment, might find it profitable to move in close to the source of demand in Cumberland.

Plans to investigate such cities as Wilmington, Meadeville, Front Royal, Parkersburg, Marcus Hook and others in the area are now being drawn up. It is just possible, the committee thinks, that the entire area is lacking in these auxiliary concerns.

After the fact-finding is completed the committee plans to prepare an attractive booklet and shoot it out to companies which might find it interesting.

Scatterbrains Entertain

The Scatterbrains collected them long enough to hold a short business meeting Thursday at the home of Miss June Storm, president.

Purpose of the party held later was to honor Miss Zelda Sacks on the occasion of her "?" birthday, and Miss Catherine Cornwell, who will be "?" today.

New Scatterbrins welcomed to the fold were Edna Postlewait, Dorothy Northcraft, and Anna Bittner.

Refreshments were served to the honored guests, new members, and June Kirk, Marilyn House, Genevieve Peaslee, Betty Curry, Hannah Galladay, and special visitors James Partleton, Edward Carroll, Norman Amtower, and "Jack" and "Inky," the two dogs.

Light Crashing Charged

Clarence Winters, of Shaft, was arrested yesterday afternoon by Officer John H. Stitcher for driving through a white light at the intersection of Baltimore and Centre streets. He will be given a hearing in Police court tomorrow.

Jail Sentence for Board Bill Starts Debate on Constitution

The right of Trial Magistrates court to jail a person for an unpaid board bill, was challenged yesterday after a court decision provoked an informal debate between magistrates and the defense attorney. The debate over the constitutionality of the Maryland law involved may be argued later on a legal basis in Circuit court.

Earl Twigg, 133 Union street, was given a suspended sentence of sixty days in jail after he pleaded guilty before Magistrate Frank A. Perdew when tried on charges sworn to by Mrs. Grace O. Frost, 115 Henry street, accusing him of owing board and room rent for the time he stayed at her house last year.

Constitution Violated?

I. Duke Avnet, attorney for Twigg, is studying the decision as he said it may be the Celanese worker was ordered jailed for inability to pay a debt, an action prohibited by the Constitution. If he decides the action of the court was unconstitutional he will draw up a writ of certiorari asking a review by Circuit court, he said.

Twigg roomed and boarded at Mrs. Frost's from last May until December 19. In July he was injured at work and was off, and on returning to wark was injured again in a few days. Since that time he has had no income, pending his appeal for compensation.

Magistrate Perdew paroled Twigg for six months when he promised to pay the bill and $4 court costs.

Although the records in the case show he pleaded guilty Twigg said he admitted owing the bill, but had not intended to plead guilty to a criminal charge.

Avnet was not present when the case was heard. He later came to Trial Magistrates court and asked to have the case opened for additional testimony, but the court would not allow the request. Avnet then said he would ask the higher court to rule on the decision and Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., came to the defense of his partner.

Magistrate Bruce said the court's action was like the Federal government's prosecution of income tax evaders, and Avnet countered with his idea that the court could rightly prosecute if fraud were proved, but that criminal proceedings are not properly used to collect a bill.

Mayor Argues Again For Dam Jobs

Owen E. Hitchins, member of the Upper Potomac River Commission, yesterday had a most attentive listener in Mayor Harry Irvine when he made his talk on the Savage River Dam project.

Especially interesting to Mayor Irvine was the fact that 1500 men will be employed on the project once it gets going full-stride.

Back at his office in City Hall, Mayor Irvine commented that Cumberland was apparently still out in the cold as far as getting local workers on the project.

"If the 1,500 men are to be put to work up there, at least 500 of them should be from Cumberland," the mayor declared. "They could ge there on time," he added, recalling that Hitchins had stated that it was a fifty-minue drive from Cumberland to the dam site in good weather.

Hagerstown Choir Sings Tomorrow

A Capella Group's Program Announced

The Hagerstown A Capella choir will make its fourth annual appearance in Cumberland Sunday for a program of religious music at St. Luke's Lutheran church, Bedford and Columbia streets, tomorrow at 7:30 p. m.

Raymond K. Hollinger will conduct the choir in a concert of three groups of songs. The first group will include "The Music of Life," by Cain, "Now Thank We All Our God," by Gruger and Mueller, "In Mirth and in Gladness," by Neidt, and "O Sing Unto the Lord," by Hasler, as choral numbers; concluding with a solo, "Sunrise and Sunset," by Spross, sung by Donald Plott.

Second group of numbers by the choir will include "Salvation is Created," by Tschesnokoff, "The Cherubic Hymn," by Gretchaninoff, and "Send Forth Thy Spirit," by Schustky. "Hear My Prayer," by Arkhanelsky, "Exaltation," by Christiansen, and "The Lord Bless You and Keep You," by Lutkin, will be the final selections offered by the choir.

Drunken Driver Admits Guilt

William Grindle, of Detmold, paid fines totaling $106 after he pleaded guilty to three traffic charges at a hearing yesterday before Magistrate Owen L. Porter in Frostburg. Grindle, arrested Thursday night near Clarysville by State Trooper H. F. Schultheis, was accused of drunken driving, reckless driving, and not having his operator's license in his possession.

Tax Meetings Scheduled

The Allegany County Tax Research Association of the Chamber of Commerce has tentatively scheduled three meetings for the week of Feb. 26 at Cumberland, Frostburg and Flintstone, H. W. Smith, chamber secretary, said yesterday. Further information regarding the scheduled meetings will be released in the near future.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Raphael Runion, 428 Columbia street, announce the birth of a daughter last night at Allegany hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Beverlin, of Cash Valley, RFD 1, announce the birth of a son last night at Allegany hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Johnson of Artemas, Pa., announce the birth of a son yesterday at Allegany hospital.

John T. Jones Hits Chamber's Labor Stand

Replies to Attack Made by Business On Wagner Act

John T. Jones, president of District No. 16, of the United Mine Workers of America and president of the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, yesterday issued a statement in answer to the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce action Thursday night, in which the group called for revision of the Wagner act.

"Today's Cumberland News reports that the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce directors have approved four specific revisions of the National Labor Relations Act," the statement says.

"It is surprising that the local chamber did not see fit to quote any local instances or incidents to support their views. Instead, they have been content to merely give repitition of the stand taken by their national body.

"People and organizations who are familiar with the operation of the Wagner act in Western Maryland are impressed by the fact that every case initiated by the C. I. O. local unions has been ended by results which fully justified their actions.

"But the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, at least to my knowledge, has never taken any positive or constructive action to change the injustices of employers which led to the adoption by Congress of the Wagner act.

"Consider, as one example, the case of the employes of the local Kelly Springfield tire plant. The workers, through their own union, entered charges of violation, discrimination, and wrong doing by the management on July 15, 1936. Yet, it was not until June, 1938, that restitution was ordered made to the wronged and victimized employes. May I draw public notice to the fact that the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce did not utter one word of protest at the actions of the Kelly plant management or at the long delays until justice was done and the wrongs ordered righted by the National Labor Relations Board.

"Then, also, there is the case of the employes of the Tri-State Towel Company who were the victims of gross discrimination because they dared to exercise their rights to join a union as is guaranteed under the laws of the United States.

"These employes, through their union, made their complaint to the Labor Board in September, 1938. It was only last week, February, 1940, that these employes received the money due them for their employer's wrongdoing. Even then, all they received was remedial pay, the employer did not even have to reinstate them! Dare the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce officials mention these incidents or even give them public discussion?

"The Cumberland Chamber of Commerce made no statement on the wrongdoing of these employers. They issue no criticism of lawbreakers. Instead, they call for amendments to the Act which will make it easier to aid such employers to victimize and intimidate their workers.

"Another instance is the case of the management of the Taylor tin plate mill. The little respect given to the Wagner act by the management is well known to the residents of South Cumberland.

"I charge that the Cumberland

Reserve Officers Meet Here Monday Night

Captain Walter M. Fuller will discuss "Air-Corps Coordination with Ground Troops" at the monthly meeting of the Western Maryland Chapter, Reserve Officers Association, Monday at 8:15 p. m., at the State Armory.

SKI BULLETIN

Another big week-end, perhaps the last of the winter, is expected at the New Germany winter sports center today and tomorrow.

The weather was clear at 11 o'clock last night, and the thermometer down to twenty.

The snow is around a foot deep, and the slope should provide excellent skiing as soon as the snow has been packed down.

The road in from U. S. 40 was in good condition yesterday, except for a number of stretches where one-way traffic was necessary.

Chains or special-tread tires will be needed.

A number of reservations for the week-end have been made by Baltimore and Washington parties, as well as Cumberland skiers, residents of the New Germany area reported.

The Baltimore weather bureau yesterday predicted more snow for Western Maryland tonight.

Clear Lot Title After 11 Years

Bank Receiver Loses Suit

The cloud on the property of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Demarest of Frostburg, today had been cleared after eleven long years and a drawn-out unraveling process in the courts.

Back in May, 1929, five months before the stock market crash, Mr. and Mrs. Demarest had a little ready cash and decided they would buy a couple of lots.

After looking around they made a $130 down payment on two lots in the Annan Knolls addition located on the Winchester Pike between Cresaptown and the Six Mile House.

Total Price $1,300

The deal drawn up between the Demarests and the Annan Real Estate Company set the price of the two lots at $1,300, with the balance to be paid at regular intervals.

The payments were made and the day came when the Demarests owed only one payment of $41, after which the property would have been theirs under ordinary circumstances.

However, extraordinary events had occurred in the meantime, including the First National Bank of Frostburg going into receivership in 1931. Prior to this, Roberdeau Annan's mortgage of $19,000 against the lots in the addition had been assigned to the bank for additional security on a note.

After the bank had been placed in receivership an equity court decision declared that the defunct bank had a one-quarter ownership in the two properties and the Demarests, three-quarters.

Former Ruling Changed

The Demarests were unwilling to pay the final installment until a good deed and clear title was delivered to them. This, according to the complainant's petition, was not done.

Yesterday, Associate Judge William A. Huster, of Circuit Court, removed any previously claimed equity held by the receiver for the bank and said that full title for the lots should be given to the Demarests as soon as they paid the $41.

Clarence Lippel was counsel for the Demarests in their battle for their title, while Attorney W. Earle Cobey represented the receiver of the First National Bank.

Pallbearers Named For McMullen Rites

Francis Joseph McMullen, who died Thursday after a colorful career as athlete and Cumberland personality, will be buried this morning.

Active pallbearers who were named yesterday will be Eugene T. Gunning, Joseph K. Mooney, Kenneth Lindsay, William V. Keegan, Allan W. Twigg, and Dr. Charles C. Zimmerman.

Honorary pallbearers will be James T. White, William A. Gunter, John J. Cavanaugh, John J. Long, Walter L. Bowers, Edmund Lippold, Eugene B. Stein, Leo P. Brown, James A. Black, Peter J. Carpenti, David Murrie, and Joseph B. Finan.

Deaths

Mrs. Elmira S. Piper

Mrs. Elmira S. Piper, widow of Michael J. Piper, died yesterday at her home near Oldtown. She was 60.

Survivors are three daughters, Mrs. Ray Abe and Mrs. John Davis, of Oldtown, and Miss Florence Piper, at home; and three sons, Wilbur, of Oldtown, and Guy and Columbus, at home.

Henry Fenton Askey

Henry Fenton Askey died yesterday morning at his home on the Bedford road. He was 70.

He was a member of the Presbyterian church and of the Masonic fraternity of Buena Vista, Va. Surviving are his wife, Mrs Abbie B. Askey; two daughters, Mrs. Bernice Morehead and Mrs. Helen Gilpin; a son, Robert F. Askey; and two grandchildren, Robert and Curtis Gilpin.

Mrs. John A. Hammond

Mrs. Mary M. Hammond, wife of John A. Hammond, died at her home in Ridgeley yesterday morning. She was 67.

She was a daughter of the late Edward and Emily Wilson. The body will remain at Stein's chapel.

Surviving, besides her husband, is a son, Leon C. Hammond, of Rid-

County Official Warns Citizens Back in Taxes

Also Announces Record-Breaking Early Collections

A sharp note of warning to 2,000 delinquent taxpayers in Allegany county was issued yesterday by Alban C. Thompson, county treasurer, who declared that the "backsliders" would either pay or be advertised.

The tardy delinquents who have already received service notices have until March 1 to call on the treasurer. March 1 is the deadline on the sixty-day period of grace extended by the office.

Notices Cost Money

Levy notices, which cost the recipients anywhere from $1.10 up, will then be sent out. Failure to comply promptly with these notices will result in the treasurer's office taking action, Thompson warned.

"I'm not fooling," Thompson stated curtly yesterday. "We still have $160,000 to collect in 1939 taxes and we are going to do our level best to collect them."

At this point Walter Johnston, county auditor, announced that the tremendous 1939 collections clearly indicated that people had the money and that they were able to pay up.

Early Collections Heavy

Of the total levy of $1,335,000, exactly $998,192.43 was collected in the first ninety days of the 1939 collection year, Johnston said. The collection year staris June 1.

The collection, amounting to 74 percent of the levy, established an all-time record in Allegany county for a ninety-day period. Collections for the corresponding period in 1938 totaled 68 per cent and, in 1937, 63 per cent.

This record-breaking collection even surpasses the record set in the boom years prior to 1929-30, the two officials declared.

"This proves to my satisfaction that the money is in the county and that people are now in a position to pay up," Thompson declared.

Many Get Discount

The unprecedented influx of tax money that marked the collection months of June, July and August last year enabled many citizens to take advantage of the discount rate.

"For the first time in years, we find that not only the corporations and business firms, but also the 'little fellows' took advantage of the discount rates", Thompson said.

The discount rates are as follows: June, 5 per cent; July, 4 per cent and August, 3 per cent.

Time Payments Explained

Another tax problem explained yesterday by Thompson was the rule governing time payments. Explaining that many persons were apparently confused regarding time-payment of taxes, the treasurer said that monthly payments were allowable providing the total amount was paid up at the end of the tax year.

"However, this does not mean that delinquents can come in this time of the year and suggest that they make time-payments for old taxes," the treasurer stated.

Streamlined Auditing Proves Most Helpful To County Commissioners

The county commissioners are coming to the conclusion that streamlined auditing has great advantages over the old fashioned methods of the country grocery store variety.

The convincer in the case is County Auditor Walter Johnston, a quiet figure juggler at the Court House who has been doing a whale of a lot of work since he assumed his new duties.

When Derby Stakem took the commissioner's chair the first day he found a neat leather portfolio on his desk. The inscription "Mr. Stakem" adorned the cover in gold letters.

The portfolios used by the commissioners is Johnson's work. They are packed with clean-cut statements regarding all expenditures. Some of the figures show what the commissioners will have to lay out on such dates as Aug. 1, 1978 and other decidedly advanced dates.

Johnston admits he takes pleasure in putting stacks and stacks of figures in readable and understandable form.

The statements have the virtue of being easy to find and easy to understand. Any commissioner can put his finger on any item in the book in a jiffy due to Johnston's stream-lined system.

Students See Movie On Deadly Gas

A movie showing the deadly effects of carbon monoxide gas was shown students of Fort Hill high school at an assembly yesterday morning in the school auditorium.

The film, a U. S. Bureau of Mines production, was brought to the school by the science department under the direction of Walter H. Boone. Miss Anna Avers discussed "The Pure Food and Drug Act." Donald Ringler told of the precautions to take against the monoxide poison.

Richard Frey and Bernard Eyler gave a demonstration of the magic of chemistry which brought out an advertisement for the 1940 Sabre, school year book, on a blank sheet of paper. Harold Tansill was in charge of the program.

Rummage Sale Today

Truck Kills Child, 5; School Boy Injured

Tot Was Coasting Down Driveway In Toy Wagon

A five-year-old Columbia avenue child died at 5 p. m. yesterday three hours after his little red express wagon had collided with a bakery truck.

The boy was Edward Dale Kirk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Kirk, of 800 Columbia avenue. He ran his wagon into the truck which William E. Kegg was backing out of his driveway at 806 Columbia avenue.

Kegg, 62, veteran driver for the Community Baking Company, drove his truck into his driveway yesterday when he came home for dinner.

Accident in Driveway

He started to back out around 2 p. m., didn't notice the Kirk boy coasting down the Kegg driveway from the street. The boy was coming down the drive at a fast clip with his right knee resting on the cart as he pushed with his left leg.

Mrs. Edgar W. Kegg, daughter-in-law of the truck driver, was in the backyard of her home at 808 Columbia avenue when the truck started to back out.

She heard the truck start up and also heard the wagon coming down the driveway. She ran forward to warn the boy, but was too late.

"The little boy didn't see the truck at all," she said. "He was looking back at my son, Billy (age 5), who was following along behind the wagon. The wagon crashed into the right hind wheel of the truck and the boy was thrown to the ground."

Boy Believed Unhurt

The youngster was not unconscious after the upset and did not appear to be badly hurt. Kegg wanted to take the boy to a hospital for a checkup but it wasn't considered necessary.

The boy was examined by a physician at his home. The physician called again at 4 p. m., when the patient appeared to be doing nicely.

The little boy died shortly after 5 p. m. A ruptured kidney was given as the cause of the death after a thorough examination.

Driver Blameless

Kegg, who had driven a truck for twenty-eight years without an accident, was completely exonerated of any blame in the case by State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris after an interview in his office last night.

Kegg, shaken after the tragic accident, explained that he had the door of his truck open as he backed out and could see the driveway in his reflector windshield.

"However, I couldn't see the right-hand side of the drive," he said. "The Kirk boy was rolling down the drive on that side."

Twins and Sister Survive

Prior to the investigation in the State's attorney's office, Mr. Kirk had assured County Investigator Terrence J. Boyle that the tragedy "was an accident." Kirk asked that Investigator Boyle relay this opinion to Kegg.

Investigator Boyle, State Trooper Austin H. Bikle and City Detective Robert E. Flynn investigated the accident yesterday evening.

Corriganville Lad Suffers Broken Legs; Truck Overturns

The thing that so many Corriganville parents dread happened again yesterday afternoon.

A 7-year-old boy was struck down on his way home from school by a loaded coal truck.

As fate would have it, the youngster escaped with his life, but he lies today in Memorial Hospital, both legs broken at the knee.

Parents of the community who live along the Mt. Savage road pointed out that their children have to walk for a half mile to a mile along a busy road which affords very little room for pedestrians, as the accompanying photograph shows.

Parents Protest

Parents have protested this situation for a long time and have requested that their children, or at least the smallest ones, be hauled in a school bus. Their plea has not been heeded, however.

The boy who was struck down yesterday was Raymond Joseph Burkett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lee Burkett, who live about three-quarters of a mile up the Mt. Savage road from the school. Mr. Burkett is a Celanese worker.

The driver of the coal truck was Kenneth Bittner, 30, of Sand Patch, Pa., who made a heroic effort to miss the boy when he ran out into the road.

The truck left the road and turned over on its side in a swamp. Neither the driver nor his cousin, Doyle Bittner, also of Sand Patch, was hurt.

The truck driver ran to the home of Harry Raygor nearby to get aid for the boy, who was lying in a heap on the left side of the road. William Yontz, of Mt. Savage, came by, however, and took the boy to the hospital.

Joel Raygor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Raygor, was walking with the boy who was hit.

State Trooper Austin H. Bikle investigated the accident, and ordered the truck driver held under $500 bond pending the outcome of the child's injuries. The driver made bond.

Another Corriganville child was hit last fall by a truck shortly after leaving the school.

County Home Declared In Good Condition

An inspection of the county home yesterday by the county commissioners yesterday revealed that the institution generally was in good shape, the commissioners said.

Commissioner James Holmes stated that outside of some plaster work and other minor repairs, little needs to be done there at the present time.

Orr First To File Election Petition

James A. Orr yesterday became the first candidate to file his petition papers as a candidate for the City Council.

Orr, linotype operator for the Times and Alleganian Company, is one of eight candidates who have taken out petition papers to run for council.

He lives at 544 Fairview avenue.

Principal To Speak On Youth Problems

Victor D. Heisey, principal of Fort Hill high school, will discuss "Problems of Youth" at a meeting of the Cumberland Ministerial Union at Central Y. M. C. A. Monday at 10:30 a. m.

The Rev. Jesse P. Dawson Jr., pastor of Grace Methodist church, will have charge of the devotional period.

Lower Rail Rates Expected To Boost B&O Business

A reduction in railroad rates to a basic two-cents a mile after March 24 is expected to bring a twenty-five per cent increase in passenger travel out of Cumberland, Matthew W. Grove, traveling passenger agent for the B. & O. said yesterday.

The change from a present two and a half cent rate was ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The two-cent rate was effective from June 1, 1936 to July 25, 1938.

A comparison of the present and new rates follows:

Cumberland to	Present Rate	Ex. New Rate
Washington	$ 3.78	$ 3.05
Baltimore	4.69	3.80
Philadelphia	7.07	5.70
New York	9.32	7.50
Pittsburgh	3.73	3.00
Akron	7.73	5.40
Cleveland	7.07	5.65
Chicago	15.48	12.40
Parkersburg	5.11	4.10
Cincinnati	10.19	8.15
Louisville	12.09	10.10
St. Louis	18.77	15.05

Car Hits Coal Truck, Man's Face Slashed

One man was in Miners hospital at Frostburg and one was in the county jail after a car crashed into the back of a coal truck on Big Savage mountain Thursday night.

The injured man is Marion Riley, 34, of Sykesville, a telephone company lineman, who was a passenger in the car. He was hurled against the windshield and suffered multiple lacerations about the face that required thirty-six stitches to close. The driver, who was cut about the hands, was John E. Garlitz, 24, of 124 McCulloh street, Frostburg.

State Troopers George J. Miller and Austin H. Bikle placed reckless driving charges against Garlitz. They said the truck was operated by Joseph E. May, 722 Leiper street.

Interesting Data Given On Savage River Dam

The Savage River Dam project, now almost three months behind schedule, will make up for lost time when a crew of 1,500 men begins throwing dirt sometime this summer, Owen E. Hitchins, member of the Upper Potomac River Commission, told guests at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon at the Central YMCA yesterday.

Mr. Hitchins stated that the delays had been caused:

1—By difficulties in acquiring the land which will be flooded.

2—By the tardiness of the state forest department in recognizing the right of the workers to work on their land.

3—By the worst winter in twenty-two years.

Eight billion gallons of water will be impounded in the dam, which is scheduled to be completed by March 1, 1942, Mr. Hitchins told an interested audience.

532 Men at Work Now

At the present time the crew of 532 men is concentrating on the tunnel through which the water will flow while the dam is being built and which will be used later as an outlet.

Once the tunnel is completed, work will start on the dam proper, which will be one of the largest earthwork dams in the United States.

Twelve hundred feet thick at the base, the dam will have various layers of different types of soil all laid in to obtain the greatest possible strength and durability. The dam will be 178 feet thick at the top.

Dam Has One Purpose

The sole purpose of the dam, Mr. Hitchins explained, is to store water for release into the Savage river, and thus the Potomac, when the streams are running low during the dry summer months.

Later, the speaker estimated that should the Potomac go dry this dam would supply a minimum flow of water of around eleven million gallons per day for approximately 140 days.

The dam will provide a water backup of around three and a half miles, the speaker said. A shoreline of from fifteen to eighteen miles was predicted.

Scenic Section Opened

"This dam is going to help to open up a hitherto quite unexplored and unusually scenic section," the speaker said.

After tracing the history of the three-million dollar project from its beginning, Hitchins said, "we've had some headaches already; probably will have some more before we get through, but we'll get it done."

The speaker was piled with questions following his talk with the queries ranging from "Will you hold a celebration when the job is done?" to "Will people be allowed to swim in the artifical lake created."

Celebration? Maybe

Hitchins refused to comment on a celebration or on what swimming facilities the lake might offer. He said the lake would be used for drinking water by some communities and that the matter of swimming "is a headache the health department will have to work out."

Once completed, the dam will require only a small operating force, the speaker said.

John J. McMullen, newly appointed chairman of the Upper Potomac River Commission, was unable to be present because of the death of his cousin, Francis J. McMullen.

Busy Committee Starts New Fact-Finding Bee To Help Cumberland

The energetic industrial committee of the Chamber of Commerce headed by James L. Barrow was off on another fact-finding spree today tended to help Cumberland business.

The latest investigation of the committee is to dig up the dope concerning the supply of materials needed in the manufacture of artificial silk at the Celanese Corporation of America.

It is just possible, thinks the committee, that concerns manufacturing products such as machinery, bobbins and spinning and weaving equipment, might find it profitable to move in close to the source of demand in Cumberland.

Plans to investigate such cities as Wilmington, Meadeville, Front Royal, Parkersburg, Marcus Hook and others in the area are now being drawn up. It is just possible, the committee thinks, that the entire area is lacking in these auxiliary concerns.

After the fact-finding is completed the committee plans to prepare an attractive booklet and shoot it out to companies which might find it interesting.

Scatterbrains Entertain

The Scatterbrains collected them long enough to hold a short business meeting Thursday at the home of Miss June Storm, president.

Purpose of the party held later was to honor Miss Zelda Sacks on the occasion of her "?" birthday, and Miss Catherine Cornwell, who will be "?" today.

New Scatterbrins welcomed to the fold were Edna Postlewait, Dorothy Northcraft, and Anna Bittner.

Refreshments were served to the honored guests, new members, and June Kirk, Marilyn House, Genevieve Peaslee, Betty Curry, Hannah Galladay, and special visitors James Partleton, Edward Carroll, Norman Amtower, and "Jack" and "Inky," the two dogs.

Forty-One Divorce Cases Docketed Since Jan. 1

An upswing in divorce cases since Jan. 1 was reported yesterday in the Clerk of Court's office.

To date, forty-one divorce actions have been docketed at the Courthouse since the first of the year.

Light Crashing Charged

Clarence Winters, of Shaft, was arrested yesterday afternoon by Officer John H. Stitcher for driving through a white light at the intersection of Baltimore and Centre streets. He will be given a hearing in Police court tomorrow.

Mayor Argues Again For Dam Jobs

Owen E. Hitchins, member of the Upper Potomac River Commission, yesterday had a most attentive listener in Mayor Harry Irvine when he made his talk on the Savage River Dam project.

Especially interesting to Mayor Irvine was the fact that 1500 men will be employed on the project once it gets going full-stride.

Back at his office in City Hall, Mayor Irvine commented that Cumberland was apparently still out in the cold as far as getting local workers on the project.

"If the 1,500 men are to be put to work up there, at least 500 of them should be from Cumberland," the mayor declared. "They could ge there on time," he added, recalling that Hitchins had stated that it was a fifty-minue drive from Cumberland to the dam site in good weather.

Hagerstown Choir Sings Tomorrow

A Capella Group's Program Announced

The Hagerstown A Capella choir will make its fourth annual appearance in Cumberland Sunday for a program of religious music at St. Luke's Lutheran church, Bedford and Columbia streets, tomorrow at 7:30 p. m.

Raymond K. Hollinger will conduct the choir in a concert of three groups of songs. The first group will include "The Music of Life," by Cain, "Now Thank We All Our God," by Gruger and Mueller, "In Mirth and in Gladness," by Neidt, and "O Sing Unto the Lord," by Hasler, as choral numbers; concluding with a solo, "Sunrise and Sunset," by Spross, sung by Donald Plott.

Second group of numbers by the choir will include "Salvation is Created," by Tschesnokoff, "The Cherubic Hymn," by Gretchaninoff, and "Send Forth Thy Spirit," by Schustky. "Hear My Prayer," by Arkhanelsky, "Exaltation," by Christiansen, and "The Lord Bless You and Keep You," by Lutkin, will be the final selections offered by the choir.

Drunken Driver Admits Guilt

William Grindle, of Detmold, paid fines totaling $106 after he pleaded guilty to three traffic charges at a hearing yesterday before Magistrate Owen L. Porter in Frostburg. Grindle, arrested Thursday night near Clarysville by State Trooper H. F. Schultheis, was accused of drunken driving, reckless driving, and not having his operator's license in his possession.

Tax Meetings Scheduled

The Allegany County Tax Research Association of the Chamber of Commerce has tentatively scheduled three meetings for the week of Feb. 26 at Cumberland, Frostburg and Flintstone, H. W. Smith, chamber secretary, said yesterday. Further information regarding the scheduled meetings will be released in the near future.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Raphael Runion, 428 Columbia street, announce the birth of a daughter last night at Allegany hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Beverlin, of Cash Valley, RFD 1, announce the birth of a son last night at Allegany hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Johnson of Artemas, Pa., announce the birth of a son yesterday at Allegany hospital.

John T. Jones Hits Chamber's Labor Stand

Replies to Attack Made by Business On Wagner Act

John T. Jones, president of District No. 16, of the United Mine Workers of America and president of the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, yesterday issued a statement in answer to the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce action Thursday night, in which the group called for revision of the Wagner act.

"Today's Cumberland News reports that the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce directors have approved four specific revisions of the National Labor Relations Act," the statement says.

"It is surprising that the local chamber did not see fit to quote any local instances or incidents to support their views. Instead, they have been content to merely give repitition of the stand taken by their national body.

"People and organizations who are familiar with the operation of the Wagner act in Western Maryland are impressed by the fact that every case initiated by the C. I. O. local unions has been ended by results which fully justified their actions.

"But the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, at least to my knowledge, has never taken any positive or constructive action to change the injustices of employers which led to the adoption by Congress of the Wagner act.

"Consider, as one example, the case of the employes of the local Kelly Springfield tire plant. The workers, through their own union, entered charges of violation, discrimination, and wrong doing by the management on July 15, 1936. Yet, it was not until June, 1938, that restitution was ordered made to the wronged and victimized employes. May I draw public notice to the fact that the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce did not utter one word of protest at the actions of the Kelly plant management or at the long delays until justice was done and the wrongs ordered righted by the National Labor Relations Board.

"Then, also, there is the case of the employes of the Tri-State Towel Company who were the victims of gross discrimination because they dared to exercise their rights to join a union as is guaranteed under the laws of the United States.

"These employes, through their union, made their complaint to the Labor Board in September, 1938. It was only last week, February, 1940, that these employes received the money due them for their employer's wrongdoing. Even then, all they received was remedial pay, the employer did not even have to reinstate them! Dare the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce officials mention these incidents or even give them public discussion?

"The Cumberland Chamber of Commerce made no statement on the wrongdoing of these employers. They issue no criticism of lawbreakers. Instead, they call for amendments to the Act which will make it easier to aid such employers to victimize and intimidate their workers.

"Another instance is the case of the management of the Taylor tin plate mill. The little respect given to the Wagner act by the management is well known to the residents of South Cumberland.

"I charge that the Cumberland

Reserve Officers Meet Here Monday Night

SKI BULLETIN

Another big week-end, perhaps the last of the winter, is expected at the New Germany winter sports center today and tomorrow.

The weather was clear at 11 o'clock last night, and the thermometer down to twenty.

The snow is around a foot deep, and the slope should provide excellent skiing as soon as the snow has been packed down.

The road in from U. S. 40 was in good condition yesterday, except for a number of stretches where one-way traffic was necessary.

Chains or special-tread tires will be needed.

A number of reservations for the week-end have been made by Baltimore and Washington parties, as well as Cumberland skiers, residents of the New Germany area reported.

The Baltimore weather bureau yesterday predicted more snow for Western Maryland tonight.

Bank Receiver Loses Suit

The cloud on the property of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Demarest of Frostburg, today had been cleared after eleven long years and a drawn-out unraveling process in the courts.

Back in May, 1929, five months before the stock market crash, Mr. and Mrs. Demarest had a little ready cash and decided they would buy a couple of lots.

After looking around they made a $130 down payment on two lots in the Annan Knolls addition located on the Winchester Pike between Cresaptown and the Six Mile House.

Total Price $1,300

The deal drawn up between the Demarests and the Annan Real Estate Company set the price of the two lots at $1,300, with the balance to be paid at regular intervals.

The payments were made and the day came when the Demarests owed only one payment of $41, after which the property would have been theirs under ordinary circumstances.

However, extraordinary events had occurred in the meantime, including the First National Bank of Frostburg going into receivership in 1931. Prior to this, Roberdeau Annan's mortgage of $19,000 against the lots in the addition had been assigned to the bank for additional security on a note.

After the bank had been placed in receivership an equity court decision declared that the defunct bank had a one-quarter ownership in the two properties and the Demarests, three-quarters.

Former Ruling Changed

The Demarests were unwilling to pay the final installment until a good deed and clear title was delivered to them. This, according to the complainant's petition, was not done.

Yesterday, Associate Judge William A. Huster, of Circuit Court, removed any previously claimed equity held by the receiver for the bank and said that full title for the lots should be given to the Demarests as soon as they paid the $41.

Clarence Lippel was counsel for the Demarests in their battle for their title, while Attorney W. Earle Cobey represented the receiver of the First National Bank.

Pallbearers Named For McMullen Rites

Francis Joseph McMullen, who died Thursday after a colorful career as athlete and Cumberland personality, will be buried this morning.

Active pallbearers who were named yesterday will be Eugene T. Gunning, Joseph K. Mooney, Kenneth Lindsay, William V. Keegan, Allan W. Twigg, and Dr. Charles C. Zimmerman.

Honorary pallbearers will be James T. White, William A. Gunter, John J. Cavanaugh, John J. Long, Walter L. Bowers, Edmund Lippold, Eugene B. Stein, Leo P. Brown, James A. Black, Peter J. Carpenti, David Murrie, and Joseph B. Finan.

County Official Warns Citizens Back in Taxes

Also Announces Record-Breaking Early Collections

A sharp note of warning to 2,000 delinquent taxpayers in Allegany county was issued yesterday by Alban C. Thompson, county treasurer, who declared that the "back-sliders" would either pay or be advertised.

The tardy delinquents who have already received service notices have until March 1 to call on the treasurer. March 1 is the deadline on the sixty-day period of grace extended by the office.

Notices Cost Money

Levy notices, which cost the recipients anywhere from $1.10 up, will then be sent out. Failure to comply promptly with these notices will result in the treasurer's office taking action, Thompson warned.

"I'm not fooling," Thompson stated curtly yesterday. "We still have $160,000 to collect in 1939 taxes and we are going to do our level best to collect them."

At this point Walter Johnston, county auditor, announced that the tremendous 1939 collections clearly indicated that people had the money and that they were able to pay up.

Early Collections Heavy

Of the total levy of $1,335,000 exactly $998,192.43 was collected in the first ninety days of the 1939 collection year, Johnston said. The collection year starts June 1.

The collection, amounting to 74 percent of the levy, established an all-time record in Allegany county for a ninety-day period. Collections for the corresponding period in 1938 totaled 68 per cent and, in 1937, 61 per cent.

This record-breaking collection even surpasses the record set in the boom years prior to 1929-30, the two officials declared.

"This proves to my satisfaction that the money is in the county and that people are now in a position to pay up," Thompson declared.

Many Get Discount

The unprecedented influx of tax money that marked the collection months of June, July and August last year enabled many citizens to take advantage of the discount rate.

"For the first time in years, we find that not only the corporations and business firms, but also the 'little fellows' took advantage of the discount rates", Thompson said.

The discount rates are as follows: June, 5 per cent; July, 4 per cent and August, 3 per cent.

Time Payments Explained

Another tax problem explained yesterday by Thompson was the rule governing time payments. Explaining that many persons were apparently confused regarding time-payment of taxes, the treasurer said that monthly payments were allowable providing the total amount was paid up at the end of the tax year.

"However, this does not mean that delinquents can come in this time of the year and suggest that they make time-payments for old taxes," the treasurer stated.

Streamlined Auditing Proves Most Helpful To County Commissioners

The county commissioners are coming to the conclusion that streamlined auditing has great advantages over the old fashioned methods of the country grocery store variety.

The convincer in the case is County Auditor Walter Johnston, a quiet figure juggler at the Court House who has been doing a whale of a lot of work since he assumed his new duties.

When Derby Stakem took the commissioner's chair the first day he found a neat leather portfolio on his desk. The inscription "Mr. Stakem" adorned the cover in gold letters.

The portfolios used by the commissioners is Johnson's work. They are packed with clean-cut statements regarding all expenditures. Some of the figures show what the commissioners will have to lay out on such dates as Aug. 1, 1978 and other decidedly advanced dates.

Johntson admits he takes pleasure in putting stacks and stacks of figures in readable and understandable form.

The statements have the virtue of being easy to find and easy to understand. Any commissioner can put his finger on any item in the book in a jiffy due to Johnston's stream-lined system.

Students See Movie On Deadly Gas

A movie showing the deadly effects of carbon monoxide gas was shown students of Fort Hill high school at an assembly yesterday morning in the school auditorium.

The film, a U. S. Bureau of Mines production, was brought to the school by the science department under the direction of Walter H. Boone. Miss Anna Avers discussed "The Pure Food and Drug Act." Donald Ringler told of the precautions to take against the monoxide poison.

Richard Frey and Bernard Eyler gave a demonstration of the magic of chemistry which brought out an advertisement for the 1940 Sabre, school year book, on a blank sheet of paper. Harold Tansill was in charge of the program.

Rummage Sale Today

Jail Sentence for Board Bill Starts Debate on Constitution

The right of Trial Magistrates court to jail a person for an unpaid board bill, was challenged yesterday after a court decision provoked an informal debate between magistrates and the defense attorney. The debate over the constitutionality of the Maryland law involved may be argued later on a legal basis in Circuit court.

Earl Twigg, 133 Union street, was given a suspended sentence of sixty days in jail after he pleaded guilty before Magistrate Frank A. Perdew when tried on charges sworn to by Mrs. Grace O. Frost, 115 Henry street, accusing him of owing board and room rent for the time he stayed at her house last year.

Constitution Violated?

I. Duke Avnet, attorney for Twigg, is studying the decision as he said it may be the Celanese worker was ordered jailed for inability to pay a debt, an action prohibited by the Constitution. If he decides the action of the court was unconstitutional he will draw up a writ of certiorari asking a review by Circuit court, he said.

Twigg roomed and boarded at Mrs. Frost's from last May until December 19. In July he was injured at work and was off, and on returning to wark was injured again in a few days. Since that time he has had no income, pending his appeal for compensation.

Magistrate Perdew paroled Twigg for six months when he promised to pay the bill and $4 court costs.

Although the records in the case show he pleaded guilty Twigg said he admitted owing the bill, but had not intended to plead guilty to a criminal charge.

Avnet was not present when the case was heard. He later came to Trial Magistrates court and asked to have the case opened for additional testimony, but the court would not allow the request. Avnet then said he would ask the higher court to rule on the decision and Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., came to the defense of his partner.

Magistrate Bruce said the court's action was like the Federal government's prosecution of income tax evaders, and Avnet countered with his idea that the court could rightly prosecute if fraud were proved, but that criminal proceedings are not properly used to collect a bill.
